Arlington Confederate Monument Association—During the administration of President McKinley the Confederate dead buried in the city of Washington, D. C., and vicinity were removed to the National Cemetery at Arlington, Va., the old home of Robert E. Lee, where they were reinterred in a plot of ground set apart by the President for that purpose, and designated "The Confederate Section."

The Arlington Confederate Monument Association was formed for the purpose of erecting in this section a suitable monument to the dead there buried, and to stand, in a larger sense, as a memorial to all those who lost their lives in defence of the Confederacy, as well as to the cause they represented. It is formed as a committee of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the President-General of which is the President of the association. Vice-President—Col. Hilary A. Herbert, Washington, D. The Veteran Corps of Artillery of the State of New York The Veteran Corps of Artillery of the State of New York was instituted in New York City November 25, 1790, exclusively by officers and soldiers of the War of the Revolution, and was duly confirmed as a separate corps in the organized militia of the State by Governor George Clinton March 3, 1791. Congress, in its Militia laws of 1792, 1874, 1903, and May 27, 1908, enacted that it should retain "accustomed privileges" as a component part of the organized militia, supplemental to the National Guard and the status of the corps, as part of the active militia, has also been embodied in several State statutes.

When composed wholly of Revolutionary veterans, it was in the military service of the United States, June 25 to July 2, 1812, and September 2, 1814, to March 2, 1815, and afterward recruited exclusively from veterans War of 1812, until 1890, when the surviving veteran original members amended their regulations to admit male descendants of original members or male descendants of those who served honorably in the War of 1812 and the War of the Revolution, which limitation was fixed by law March 9, 1895.

On January 8, 1826, the Military Society of the War of 1812 was formed at New York City exclusively by officers of the regular Army, Navy, and volunteer services of that war, and consolidated January 8, 1848, with the Veteran Corps of Artillery, and was constituted by law the Civic Association of the Corps, for "patriotic and other laudable purposes." Its last Revolutionary member, Daniel Spencer, died March 4, 1854, aged 95; its last War of 1812 member, Hiram Cronk, died May 18, 1905, aged 105.

The officers are: Colonel-Commandant—Asa Bird

The society was founded in 1909 "To perpetuate the memory of those loyal officials who, outside the military and naval service of the United States, rendered invaluable aid and assistance to the National Government and Union cause during the Civil War." Eligibility—Any loyal Union man who between April 12, 1861, and April 9, 1865, served as President, Vice-President, Justice of Supreme Court, Cabinet Officer, or Minister appointed abroad, Senator, Member of House of Representatives, Special Commissioner or Executive Secretary of the United States, citizens who received by name the thanks of Congress for valuable services rendered to the Government during the Civil War, loyal Governor of loyal State, Lieut.-Governor, Secretary of State, State Attorney-General, State Treasurer, Commissioned Officer of Governor's Military Staff, President of State Senate, Speaker of House of Representatives, Executive Secretary, State Executive, Counsellor, Office of State Provost Marshal's Department on recruiting duty for United States Volunteer Service, State Military Agent, member of commission, board or committee appointed by Governor to aid and assist in matters connected with National protection and defence, United States Military or Provisional Governor of secession State. Any other loyal Union man may be elected to membership who, outside the military or naval service of the United States between the aforesaid dates, rendered services to the National Government and Union cause, which may be considered by the General Board of Managers to have been of sufficient value to warrant his election to membership in the society. Any man twenty-one years of age is eligible to membership who is descended from any of the foregoing classes provided he may be found worthy.

George Washington Memorial Association—President—Mrs. Henry F. Dinck, New York. Treasurer—Mrs. Frank Northrop, New York. General Secretary—George Milbank Hersey, 609 Publicity Building, Boston, Mass.

To furnish our National capital with a building which will provide facilities for the holding of congresses and conventions—both National and international. The building will also provide office accommodations for the many societies of National scope devoted to the advancement of humanity which require National headquarters, such as the patriotic, scientific, educational, art, literary, sociological, and civic virtue federations. It will also set apart a room for each State (which appropriates its quota of the total amount to be raised) so that a permanent exhibit of the State's resources may be accessible to the vast number of people visiting the National capital. It is to cost $2,000,000 and will have an endowment fund of $500,000 for maintenance. The building may also be used for inaugural receptions and special public meetings authorized by Congress. The structure which is to embody this idea is to be known as the George Washington Memorial Building. In a broader sense it will fulfil Washington's wish expressed in his Farewell Address, to "promote as an object of primary importance institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge." President Taft signed the bill on March 4, 1913, giving the association permission to erect this building in the north end of the reservation known as Army Square, bounded by Sixth and Seventh Streets West, and B Street South, Washington, D. C. The Governors of forty-three States have accepted the Honorary Chairmanship of Advisory Councils being organized or appointed in their respective Commonwealths.

The total amount to be raised, $2,500,000, is equitably apportioned to the different States; for instance, Rhode Island, $50,000; Connecticut, $100,000; Massachusetts, $200,000; New York, $350,000, etc., etc. A considerable amount has been raised and paid in to Mr. Charles J. Bell, Trustee of the Permanent Fund, President of the American Security and Trust Company of Washington, D. C. Gifts are invited.

The United States Hay Fever Association—Forty-two years ago the United States Hay Fever Association came into existence as a joke. But very soon it was discovered that real sufferers might be rendered any fever sufferers through organization. The "joke" became "practical" one and has so remained to date. The forty-second annual convention of the association was held at Bethlehem, N. H., on September 2, 1915.

The object of the association is the seeking for information which will serve to relieve sufferers with hay fever and their mutual benefit and comfort. Not only hay-feverites, but the townspeople and proprietors of hotels of places exempt from hay fever, the manufacturers of remedies for hay fever, and especially physicians who have made a study of this disease are invited to become members of the association, that all may work together for the best results.

State meetings were held at Ocean Beach, Fire Island, N. Y., John A. Wilbur, Chairman; Lake Placid Club, N. Y., Melvil Dewey, Chairman; Kane, Pa., Charles G. Snyder, Chairman; Eagles' Nest, North Carolina.

National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children—"This association, which was founded by Dr. Maximilian P. E. Grossmann, has approached the problem of exceptional development from the point of view of the normal, or potentially normal, child as representing an actual, positive asset in human society. In doing this, this association has endeavored to elaborate a suitable and scientifically tenable classification and terminology which would enable students of this problem to understand the different types of exceptional development in their true perspective. It is the purpose of this association to evolve methods by which this human waste can be avoided, just as modern processes of manufacture and industry have led to saving what was formerly waste material and what is now often turned into products more valuable than the original object of production." Organized in New Jersey in 1905.

President—Dr. Ira S. Wile, New York City. Vice-President—A. A. D'Ancona, San Francisco, Cal. Secretary and Treasurer—Waldemar H. Groszmann, Plainfield, N. J. Educational Director—Dr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann, Plainfield, N. J.

MILITARY ORDER OF THE LOYAL LEGION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Commander-in-Chief—Lieut.-Gen. Samuel B. M. Young. Recorder-in-Chief—Brevet Lieut.-Col. John P. Nicholson. Registrar-in-Chief—First Lieut. Thomas H. McKee. Treasurer-in-Chief—Brig.-Gen. Joseph W. Plume.

The Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States was organized by officers and ex-officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps of the United States who took part in the war of 1861-65. Total membership of the Loyal Legion is 7,154.

ELIGIBILITY TO MEMBERSHIP AS FOLLOWS:

Original companions of the first class—Commissioned officers and honorably discharged commissioned officers of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, regular or volunteer, including officers of assimilated or corresponding rank by appointment of the Secretary of War or Navy, who were actually engaged in the suppression of the Rebellion prior to the 15th day of April, 1865, or who served under the President's call of the 15th day of April, 1861; or who, having served as non-commissioned officers, warrant officers or enlisted men, during the War of the Rebellion, have since been or may hereafter be commissioned as officers in the United States Regular or Volunteer Army, Navy or Marine Corps. All midshipmen in the United States Navy and all cadets of the United States Army, who, while pursuing their course in the United States Naval Academy or the United States Military Academy at West Point, actually rendered service.

Hereditary companions of the first class.—The direct male lineal descendants, who shall have attained the age of 21 years, of deceased original companions of the first class, and of deceased officers not members of the order, but who were eligible as such, and whose direct descent shall in every case be traced anew from the original founder of the membership in the order, or from the deceased eligible officer, and not otherwise.

Any original companion having no direct lineal male descendant, may, by writing, filed with the Recorder of his Commandery, nominate a companion of the second class from among the collateral male members of his family, descending only from his own brother or sister, and the person so nominated when he shall have attained the age of 21 years shall become eligible to membership for life in the second class.

Second class.—The sons, and if there be no sons, the grandsons, of living companions of the first class, whether original, in succession, or by inheritance, who shall have attained the age of 21 years, shall be eligible to membership.

Third class.—Companions of the third class are those gentlemen who in civil life during the Rebellion were specially distinguished for conspicuous and consistent loyalty to the National Government and were active and eminent in maintaining the supremacy of the same; and who, prior to the 15th day of April, 1890, were elected members of the order pursuant to the then existing provisions of the Constitution, the power to elect such having ceased at that date.

EDUCATIONAL SOCIETIES.

Chautauqua Institution.—Chancellor Emeritus—John H. Vincent. Chancellor—George E. Vincent. President—Arthur E. Bestor. President of Trustees—Clement Studebaker, Jr. Treasurer—Fred W. Hyde.

The Chautauqua Assembly, now Chautauqua Institution, was organized in 1874 as a result of the joint plan of Lewis Miller and John H. Vincent. The annual assembly during July and August at Chautauqua, N. Y., is a sixty-day programme of lectures, addresses, concerts, recitals, and various forms of platform entertainment, out-of-door recreation, and highly organized social group life. Local assemblies patterned after the parent Chautauqua in the United States number over 3,000.

The Chautauqua Summer Schools (Percy H. Boynton, Principal of Summer Schools) are annually conducted during six weeks of the assembly season. Faculty, 115; courses, over 200, in fourteen departments; six in academic subjects usually pursued in academies and colleges, eight in special professional work in Library Training, Domestic Science, Music, Physical Education, Arts and Crafts, etc. Over 3,500 students annually.

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle (E. H. Blichfeldt, Manager), organized at Chautauqua in 1878, continues the educational influence of the assembly throughout the year. More than 350,000 members have been enrolled. Individual readers may pursue the course alone, or local circles may be formed. The time required is about one-half hour daily for nine months. Diplomas are granted to those who complete the course. Any one may become a member of the C. L. S. C. by sending $5 for the unit (four books, membership book and magazine for one year) to Chautauqua Institution, Chautauqua, N. Y.

National Society for Broader Education.—National Society for Broader Education of New York was organized in December, 1909; incorporated January, 1910, under the laws of New York. Its purpose is: "Through the education of the adult to aid in the normal development of National life; in removing the causes of distrust and antagonism between classes and in promoting the interests of the whole people."

The society carries on its work through the lecture platform, the pulpit, and the newspapers. In 1915 its speakers delivered 543 lectures, its singers gave 458 concert lectures, several hundred sermons, conducted 527 discussions, conducted efficiency campaigns in 28 towns. President—George Edward Reed, S. T. D., LL. D., Harrisburg, Pa. Managing Director—Guy Carleton Lee, Ph. D., 55 West Forty-fourth Street, New York City. Secretary and Treasurer—Dr. H. H. Langsdorf, 168 West High Street, Carlisle, Pa.

The Northfield Conferences and Summer Schools were established by D. L. Moody, and meet annually between about June 15 and about September 1. Bible Studies and Special Addresses are given in connection with the above, and the Northfield Schools each year from May 1 to October 1. The Northfield Schools comprise the Northfield Seminary for young women and Mount Hermon School for young men. President—William R. Moody. Clerk—Amber G. Moody. Headquarters, East Northfield, Mass.

The John F. Slater Fund.—In 1882 Mr. John F.

EDUCATIONAL SOCIETIES—Continued.

Slater of Connecticut placed in the hands of trustees the sum of $1,000,000 for the purpose of "uplifting the lately emancipated population of the Southern States and their posterity." For this patriotic and munificent gift the thanks of Congress were voted, and a medal was presented. The board consists of William A. Slater, President; Richard E. Williams, Vice-President; John A. Stewart, John M. Glenn, Cleveland H. Dodge, Wickliffe Rose, David F. Houston, Francis P. Venable, William Lawrence, James H. Dillard, Fairfax Harrison, Charles Scribner. The Treasurer is the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York. Director—Jas. H. Dillard, Charlottesville, Va. Field Agents—W. T. B. Williams, Hampton, Va., and B. C. Caldwell, Natchitoches, La. Office Secretary—Miss G. C. Mann, Charlottesville, Va. The fund has grown through judicious investment, and the Trustees have now an annual income of about $80,000, which is used in encouraging industrial and normal training in institutions for the colored race in the South.

The General Education Board—The General Education Board was organized in New York February 27, 1902, and incorporated by an act of Congress, signed January 12, 1903. The following are members of the board: Frederick T. Gates, Chairman; L. G. Myers, Treasurer; Wallace Buttrick, Secretary; E. C. Sage and Abraham Flexner, Assistant Secretaries; Charles W. Gray, Atlanta, Ga.; Clarence Poe, Raleigh, N. C.; W. M. Riggs, Clemson College, S. C.; H. A. Morgan, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.

The conference is a united effort for Southern development.

Catholic Summer School of America—A Roman Catholic Chautauqua or Summer school was opened at New London, Ct., in the Summer of 1891 under the auspices of distinguished clergymen and laymen, and the first meetings were held from July 30 to August 14. The association has since acquired a site at Cliff Haven, near Plattsburg, N. Y., on Lake Champlain, upon which the necessary buildings have been erected, and here the Summer school is held annually for ten weeks, from July to September. The work of the institution is continued throughout the year by means of reading circles and study clubs on the University Extension plan. President—Rev. John P. Chadwick, D. D., 7 East Forty-second Street, New York City.

Negro Rural School Fund, Jeanes Foundation—The Negro Rural School Fund, amounting to $1,000,000, was established in 1907 by Miss Anna T. Jeanes, a resident of Philadelphia. The income of the fund is used in assisting small rural public schools for negroes in the Southern States by supplying county superintendents with the salary of a supervising industrial teacher, who introduces simple forms of home industries in the schools and supervises them. The board consists of: President—James H. Dillard. Vice-President—Walter H. Page. Treasurer—George Foster Peabody. Secretary—R. R. Moton. Director—James H. CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE.

ON December 14, 1910, Andrew Carnegie of New York transferred to a Board of Trustees $10,000,000 in 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds, the income of which is to be devoted to "hastening the abolition of international war." The methods by which the annual income can best be expended for this purpose were left to be determined by the Trustees. The Board of Trustees consists of the following members:

Elihu Root.
Robert Bacon.
Robert S. Brookings.
Thomas Burke.
Nicholas Murray Butler.
Joseph H. Choate.
Cleveland H. Dodge.
Charles W. Eliot.
R. A. Franks.
Arthur William Foster.

John W. Foster.
Austen G. Fox.
George Gray.
William M. Howard.
Samuel Mather.
Andrew J. Montague.
Henry S. Pritchett.
George W. Perkins.
J. G. Schmidlapp.

James Brown Scott.
James L. Slayden.
Oscar S. Straus.
Charles L. Taylor.
Charlemagne Tower.
Andrew D. White.
John Sharp Williams.
Robert S. Woodward.
Luke E. Wright.

The officers of the endowment are Hon. Elihu Root, President; Hon. Joseph H. Choate, Vice-President; Dr. James Brown Scott, Secretary, and Hon. Charlemagne Tower, Treasurer. These officers have been annually re-elected. The Executive Committee consists of the President, the Secretary, the Treasurer, and Messrs. Butler, Fox, Montague, and Pritchett. The headquarters of the endowment is at Nos. 2 and 4 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C., which property has recently been purchased. The trustees operate under a series of by-laws.

They have divided the work of the endowment into three divisions, viz.: Division of Inter-course and Education, President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, Acting Director; Division of Economics and History, Prof. John Bates Clark of Columbia University, Director; and Division of International Law, of which Dr. Scott, the Secretary, is the Director.

The first division has established a European Bureau at 24 Rue Pierre Curie, Paris, of which M. Jules-Jean Prudhommeaux is Secretary-General. A European Advisory Council has also been established, of which Baron d'Estournelles de Constant is the President.

This division has conducted its work of propaganda by co-operation with other existing peace organizations in this country and in other countries; by a series of international visits of representative men to and from this country; and by a series of publications for gratuitous distribution, the most important of which thus far are "Some Roads Toward Peace," by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, containing observations and impressions in China and Japan in 1912; and the report of an international commission appointed to conduct an inquiry into the "Causes and conduct of the two Balkan wars."

The second division, the purposes of which are "to promote thorough and scientific investigation and study of the causes of war, and of practical methods to prevent and avoid it," works in co-operation with a Committee of Research, consisting of nineteen of the leading economists of Europe, Japan, and the United States who have blocked out an elaborate schedule of researches, to be carried forward by well known students and professors. More than a hundred studies of this character have been arranged for, and several of these have been published.

The Division of International Law has for its purpose "to aid in the development of international law and a general agreement on the rules thereof, and the acceptance of the same among nations to establish a better understanding of international rights and duties and a more perfect sense of international justice among the inhabitants of civilized countries; to promote a general acceptance of peaceable methods in the settlement of international disputes." This division is now engaged in the preparation of a collection of all known international arbitrations and a companion work consisting of all known arbitration treaties. It has also in process of preparation the following works: Reports to The Hague Conventions, Cases Heard Before the Permanent Court of Arbitration; Resolutions of the Institute of International Law, an edition in Spanish of The Hague Conventions of 1899 and 1907; Treatise in Spanish International Law, and a number of other works, including publications in French of the following works: Lawrence—The Principles of International Law, Liszt—Lehrbuch des Völkerrechts, Scott—The Hague Peace Conferences of 1899 and 1907, Triepel—Völkerrecht und Landesrecht, Westlake—International Law, Kleen—Krigets Lagar, De Louter—Het Stellig Völkerrecht. The Institute of International Law has accepted its invitation to act as the advisor of the division regarding the conduct and development of its work. The trustees have approved a plan for the maintenance of a Summer or vacation school of international law at The Hague, of which teachers and students of the subject from all countries may take advantage.

The main activities of the endowment are thus arranged on scientific lines, the results of the activities and researches of the latter two divisions to be utilized and popularized as a part of the propaganda of the first division. The plans of the trustees contemplate a world-wide international co-operation in each branch of the endowment's work. While these plans have been seriously interrupted, and may be somewhat modified by the European war, the outbreak of that war enormously emphasizes and illustrates the importance and the necessity of its work.

The annual meeting of the trustees is held at Washington on the second Friday of April, and a special meeting of the board occurs on the second Friday of November in each year.

The offices of the first two divisions are at 407 West One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, New York City. The Division of International Law occupies the headquarters building of the endowment in Washington.

CARNEGIE MUSEUM.

(Department of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, Pa.)

Founded 1897. W. J. Holland, LL. D., Director. Established on the broadest lines for the promotion of scientific research and the diffusion of knowledge. Collections, valued at more than $1,000,000, especially rich in the fields of zoology, paleontology, ethnology, and industrial art. Publishes Annals, 8vo. (9 vols. issued); Memoirs, 4vo. (6 vols. issued); Annual Reports, 8vo. (16 vols. issued).

CARNEGIE FOUNDATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF TEACHING.

An institution founded by Andrew Carnegie in 1905, and incorporated by the Congress of the United States in 1906. The institution is endowed with $15,000,000, to provide retiring allowances for teachers and officers of colleges, universities, and technical schools in the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland, and with $1,250,000 to provide for educational inquiry and publication. By the ninth annual meeting of the trustees in 1914, 332 allowances were being paid to teachers, and 100 pensions to widows of teachers, at an annual cost of $634,363. The amount of the average retiring allowance is $11,594.83, the average age of retirement being about sixty-nine years.

In the administration of its endowment, the foundation has restricted its allowances to professors and officers in a list of seventy-three institutions selected for their educational standing, and has published a series of widely influential reports and bulletins concerning educational conditions. The President of the foundation is Dr. Henry S. Pritchett; Secretary, Clyde Furst; address, 676 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

THE CARNEGIE INSTITUTION OF WASHINGTON.

The Carnegie Institution of Washington was founded by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, January 28, 1902, when he gave to a board of trustees $10,000,000, in registered bonds, yielding 5 per cent. annual interest. In general terms, he stated that his purpose was to "found in the city of Washington an institution which, with the co-operation of institutions now or hereafter established, there or elsewhere, shall in the broadest and most liberal manner encourage investigation, research and discovery, show the application of knowledge to the improvement of mankind, and provide such buildings, laboratories, books, and apparatus as may be needed." Mr. Carnegie added $2,000,000 to his gift in 1907, and $10,000,000 in 1911, making a total endowment of $22,000,000.

By an act of Congress, approved April 28, 1904, the institution was placed under the control of a board of twenty-four trustees, all of whom had been members of the original board referred to above.

The trustees meet annually, and during the intervals between such meetings the affairs of the institution are conducted by an executive committee, chosen by and from the board of trustees, acting through the President of the institution as chief executive officer.

The Administration Building is situated on the S. E. corner of Sixteenth and P Streets N. W., Washington, D. C.

Trustees of the Institution—Chairman—Elihu Root. Vice-Chairman—Charles D. Walcott. Secretary—Cleveland H. Dodge. Robert S. Brookings, Charles P. Flenner, Charles L. Hutchinson, Henry Cabot Lodge, Seth Low, Andrew J. Montague, William W. Morrow, William Barclay Parsons, George W. Pepper, Henry S. Pritchett, Martin A. Ryerson, Theobald Smith, William H. Taft, Henry P. Walcott, William H. Welch, Andrew D. White, Henry White, George W. Wickersham, Robert S. Woodward.

President of the Institution—Robert S. Woodward.

CARNEGIE CORPORATION OF NEW YORK.

Carnegie Corporation of New York, incorporated by an act passed by the New York Legislature June 9, 1911, was organized November 10, 1911. As stated in the charter, it was organized "for the purpose of receiving and maintaining a fund or funds and applying the income thereof to promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States, by aiding technical schools, institutions of higher learning, libraries, scientific research, hero funds, useful publications, and by such other agencies and means as shall from time to time be found appropriate therefor."

Mr. Carnegie transferred to the corporation $25,000,000 and later added $100,000,000 to the original gift. The work carried on by Mr. Carnegie as an individual for many years in founding and aiding educational institutions and in the making of grants to churches for the purchase of organs has been turned over to the corporation.

The trustees are Andrew Carnegie, Elihu Root, Henry S. Pritchett, S. H. Church, Robert S. Woodward, Charles L. Taylor, Robert A. Franks, and James Bertram. The officers are: President—Andrew Carnegie. Vice-Presidents—Elihu Root and Robert A. Franks. Treasurer—Robert A. Franks. Secretary—James Bertram, 576 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

THE CARNEGIE HERO FUND.

In April, 1904, Andrew Carnegie created a fund of $5,000,000 for the benefit of the dependents of those losing their lives in heroic effort to save their fellow men, or for the heroes themselves if injured only. Provision was also made for medals to be given in commemoration of heroic acts.

The endowment known as "The Hero Fund" was placed in the hands of a commission composed of twenty-one persons, residents of Pittsburgh, Pa., of which Charles L. Taylor is President, and F. M. Wilmut, Secretary and Manager of the fund.

In his letter to the Hero Fund Commission Mr. Carnegie outlined the general scheme of the fund thus: "To place those following peaceful vocations, who have been injured in heroic effort to save human life, in somewhat better positions pecuniarily than before, until able to work again. In case of death, the widow and children or other dependents are to be provided for until she remarries, and the children until they reach a self-supporting age. For exceptional children, exceptional grants may be made for exceptional education. Grants of sums of money may also be made to heroes or heroines as the commission thinks advisable—each case to be judged on its merits.

The fund applies only to acts performed within the United States of America, the Dominion of Canada, the Colony of Newfoundland, and the waters thereof, and such acts must have been performed on or after April 15, 1904, and brought to the attention of the commission within three years of the date of the act.

Applications should be made by letter addressed to the manager, Oliver Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The commission has awarded 1,128 medals—723 bronze, 387 silver, and 18 gold. In addition to the medals, $1,249,656 has been awarded for disablement benefits, and for educational and other special purposes, and for the dependents of heroes who lost their lives, including payments made to December 31, 1915, on monthly allowances. Pensions in force as of this date amount to $79,200 annually. The commission has also awarded $169,462 for relief of sufferers from disasters—at Brockton, Mass., $10,000; from the California earthquake, $54,462; at Monongah Mines, Monongah, W. Va., $35,000; at Darr Mine, Jacobs Creek, Pa., $25,000; at Lick Branch Mine, Switchback, W. Va., $10,000; at McCurtain Mine, McCurtain, Okla., $15,000; at Jed Mine, Jed, W. Va., $10,000, and for relief of Ohio and Indiana flood sufferers, $10,000.

ACTORS' FUND OF AMERICA.

President—Daniel Frohman. First Vice-President—Joseph R. Grismer. Second Vice-President—F. F. Mackay. Treasurer—William Harris. Secretary—E. D. Miner.

The Actors' Fund was established in 1882 to provide assistance for disabled and needy members of the theatrical profession, and burial for such as leave no means therefor. The Actors' Fund Home, West New Brighton, Staten Island, under the direction of the Actors' Fund of America, was opened May 10, 1902. This is a home for aged and needy actors and actresses. There are 31 honorary members and 441 life members. Office, 1476 Broadway, New York City.

RUSSELL SAGE FOUNDATION.

Russell Sage Foundation was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, April 1, 1907, for the improvement of social and living conditions in the United States of America. The foundation does not attempt to relieve individual or family needs, but aims to eradicate the causes of distress.

Trustees—President—Mrs. Russell Sage. Vice-President—Robert W. de Forest. Treasurer—Cleveland H. Dodge; John H. Finley, John M. Glenn, Mrs. William B. Rice, Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, and Alfred T. White. General Director—John M. Glenn. Office, 130 E. 22d Street, New York City.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN LEAGUE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The National Republican League of the United States was organized in Chickering Hall, New York City, December 15-17, 1887, by delegates from about 350 Republican clubs of the United States, assembled in national convention, pursuant to a call issued by the Republican Club of New York City. It is composed of the Republican clubs of the United States, organized by States and united in a national organization. Its purpose is "Organization and Education." It aims to enlist recruits for the Republican party, particularly the younger men and the "first voters." National conventions have since been held at Baltimore, 1889; Nashville, 1890; Cincinnati, 1891; Buffalo, 1892; Louisville, 1893; Denver, 1894; Cleveland, 1895; Milwaukee, 1896; Detroit, 1897; Omaha, 1898 (biennial sessions afterward); St. Paul, 1900; Chicago, 1902; Indianapolis, 1904; Philadelphia, 1906; Cincinnati, 1908; New York, 1910; Chicago, 1912. At the close of the campaign of 1908, the league, including the Taft campaign clubs, comprised approximately 4,000 clubs, with a membership of 1,500,000. Officers—President, John Hays Hammond, Gloucester, Mass.; Secretary-Treasurer, D. B. Atherton, New York City.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

FOR THE INCREASE AND DIFFUSION OF KNOWLEDGE AMONG MEN.

OFFICERS OF THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION:

Ex-Officio Presiding Officer of the Institution, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States; Chancellor of the Institution, Edward Douglass White, Chief Justice of the United States; Secretary of the Institution, Charles D. Walcott; Assistant Secretary in Charge of United States National Museum, Richard Rathbun.

Board of Regents, Edward Douglass White, Chief Justice of the United States, Chancellor; Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States; Henry Cabot Lodge, Member of the Senate; William J. Stone, Member of the Senate; Henry F. Hollis, Member of the Senate; Scott Ferris, Member of the House of Representatives; Ernest W. Roberts, Member of the House of Representatives; Maurice Connolly, Member of the House of Representatives; Andrew D. White, citizen of New York; Alexander Graham Bell, citizen of Washington, D. C.; Charles F. Choate, Jr., citizen of Massachusetts; George Gray, citizen of Delaware; John B. Henderson, Jr., citizen of Washington, D. C.; Charles W. Fairbanks, citizen of Indiana.

The Institution at Washington, D. C., was established by statute in 1846, under the terms of the will of James Smithson, who bequeathed his fortune in 1826 to the United States to found an institution for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." From the income of the fund a building, known as the Smithsonian Building, was erected on land given by the United States. The Institution is legally an establishment having as its members the President of the United States, the Vice-President, the Chief Justice, and the President's Cabinet. It is governed by a Board of Regents consisting of the Vice-President, the Chief Justice, three members of the United States Senate, three members of the House of Representatives, and six citizens of the United States appointed by joint resolution of Congress. It is under the immediate direction of the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who is the executive officer of the board and the director of the Institution's activities.

For the increase of knowledge, the Institution aids investigators by making grants for research and exploration, supplying books, apparatus, laboratory accommodations, etc. It occasionally provides for lectures, which are published. It has initiated numerous scientific projects of national importance, some of which have been turned over to the Government and resulted in the creation of independent Government bureaus. It advises the Government in many matters of scientific importance, especially in those that have an international aspect. It co-operates with national scientific bodies, such as the National Academy of Sciences, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Historical Association, etc. It issues three regular series of publications: Annual Reports, containing papers of general interest intended to keep the ordinary reader abreast of the progress of science; Contributions to Knowledge, the distinct feature of which is that each memoir constitutes an original contribution to knowledge; Miscellaneous Collections, which contain bibliographies, reports of expeditions and of various scientific researches, and standard tables. All these publications are distributed gratuitously to important libraries throughout the world.

The Institution maintains a library, in co-operation with the Library of Congress, which numbers 265,000 volumes and consists mainly of the transactions of learned societies and scientific periodicals. While the body of the library is deposited in the Library of Congress and accessible to all its readers, a working library is maintained at the Institution. Lists, bibliographies, rules for cataloging and library work have been published. The Institution supports a table at the Naples Zoological Station. All these and numerous other activities may be carried on solely from the income of the Smithsonian fund. The Regents are empowered to accept gifts without action of Congress, in furtherance of the purposes of the Institution, and to administer trusts in accord therewith.

The parent Institution has the administrative charge of several branches which grew out of its early activities and which are supported by Congressional appropriations. These are the National Museum, including the National Gallery of Art; the International Exchange Service, the Bureau of American Ethnology, the National Zoological Park, the Astrophysical Observatory, and the United States Regional Bureau for the International Catalogue of Scientific Literature.

THE UNITED STATES NATIONAL MUSEUM is the depository of the national collections. It is especially rich in the natural history, geology, paleontology, archaeology and ethnology of America, and has unique collections of American history, as well as many series relating to fine arts and the industrial arts. It is both an educational and a research museum, and issues numerous scientific publications. The National Gallery of Art consists largely of the collections of etchings and engravings of George F. Marsh, the collections of Charles L. Freer, containing numerous paintings and etchings by Whistler, and examples of Oriental art; the Harriet Lane Johnston collection, including works of a number of the greatest English portrait painters, and the collection of William T. Evans, of one hundred and fifty-one paintings, representing some of the best work of one hundred and six American artists.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE SERVICE, carried on in accordance with the terms of treaties entered into between the United States and various foreign nations, is for the free interchange of scientific, literary and governmental publications between the Government of the United States and foreign Governments and institutions, and investigators in the United States and foreign lands. It has correspondents in all parts of the world, and since its establishment more than 4,000,000 packages, containing many millions of publications, have been handled by it.

THE BUREAU OF AMERICAN ETHNOLOGY, for the study of the American Indian; THE ASTROPHYSICAL OBSERVATORY, for the investigation of solar phenomena; THE NATIONAL ZOOLOGICAL PARK at Washington, containing about 1,400 animals; the Regional Bureau of the INTERNATIONAL CATALOGUE OF SCIENTIFIC LITERATURE, for the preparation of a classified index to the current scientific literature of the United States, and the LANGLEY AERODYNAMICAL LABORATORY are also branches of the Institution.

COPYRIGHT LAW OF THE UNITED STATES.

DIRECTIONS FOR SECURING COPYRIGHT UNDER ACT OF CONGRESS OF MARCH 4, 1909.

The copyright law approved March 4, 1909, which took effect on July 1, 1909, provides that the application for registration of any work "shall specify to which of the following classes the work in which copyright is claimed belongs":

SUBJECT MATTER OF COPYRIGHT.

(a) Books, including composite and encyclopedic works, directories, gazetteers and other compilations; (b) periodicals, including newspapers; (c) lectures, sermons, addresses, prepared for oral delivery; (d) dramatic or dramatico-musical compositions; (e) musical compositions; (f) maps; (g) works of art; models or designs for works of art; (h) reproductions of a work of art; (i) drawings or plastic works of a scientific or technical character; (j) photographs; (k) prints and pictorial illustrations. The amendment of August 24, 1912, adds: (l) motion picture photo-plays; (m) motion pictures other than photo-plays.

The application for registration of any article should distinctly specify to which one of these classes the work belongs. An article is not entitled to registration unless it is reasonably possible to class it under one or the other of the designations named in the statute.

STEPS NECESSARY TO SECURE COPYRIGHT REGISTRATION.

For works reproduced in copies for sale or public distribution: 1. Publish the work with the copyright notice. The notice may be in the form "Copyright, 19... (year date of publication) by... (name of copyright proprietor), or in case of works specified above (f) to (k) the notice may consist of the letter C enclosed in a circle (C) accompanied by the initials, monogram, mark or symbol of the proprietor—provided that his name shall appear on some accessible part of the copies." 2. Promptly after publication send to the Copyright Office, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., two copies (or in case of a foreign citizen and is first published in a foreign country, one copy) of the best edition of the work, with an application for registration. In the case of motion picture photo-plays and of motion pictures other than photo-plays a description of the work must be filed and a money order payable to the Register of Copyrights for the statutory registration fee of $1.

In the case of books by American authors, or permanent residents of the United States, the copies deposited must be accompanied by an affidavit, under the official seal of an officer authorized to administer oaths, stating that the typesetting, printing and binding of the book have been performed within the United States. Affidavit and application forms will be supplied by the Copyright Office on request.

Books of foreign origin in a language or languages other than English are not required to be manufactured in the United States. In the case of a book in the English language published abroad before publication in this country, an ad interim copyright for 30 days from the day of the deposit of the foreign copy may be secured by depositing in the Copyright Office one complete copy of the foreign edition within 30 days after its publication abroad. If two copies of such book manufactured in this country are deposited with application for registration and fee ($1) during the ad interim term, the copyright shall be extended for the full term of 28 years.

For works not reproduced in copies for sale: Copyright may also be had of certain classes of works (see a, b, c, below) of which copies are not reproduced for sale, by filing in the Copyright Office an application for registration, with the statutory fee of $1, sending therewith: (a) In the case of lectures or other oral addresses or of dramatic or musical compositions, one complete manuscript or typewritten copy of the work. This privilege of registration, however, does not exempt the copyright proprietor from the deposit of printed copies of a dramatic or musical composition or lecture where the work is later reproduced in copies for sale. A new application must be made in such cases and another fee of $1 paid. (b) In the case of photographs not intended for general circulation, one photographic print. (c) In the case of works of art (paintings, drawings, sculpture); or of drawings or plastic works of a scientific or technical character, one photograph or photographically produced copy of the work. In the case of a motion picture photo-play, a title and description and one print taken from each scene, or act. In case of a motion picture other than a photo-play, a title and description with not less than two prints to be taken from different sections of a complete motion picture. In all these cases, if the work is later reproduced in copies for sale, two copies must then be deposited.

COPYRIGHT FEES.

For registration of any work subject to copyright, $1, which sum is to include a certificate of registration under seal. But only one registration at one fee is required in the case of several volumes of the same book deposited in the Copyright Office at the same time. For every additional certificate of registration, or copy of record under seal, 50 cents. In the case of photographs the fee shall be 50 cents where a certificate is not requested. For recording and certifying an assignment of copyright, or for a certified copy of an assignment, $1, if the instrument is not over three hundred words in length; if more than three hundred and less than one thousand words in length, $2; if more than one thousand words in length, $1 additional for each additional one thousand words or fraction thereof over three hundred words. For comparing a copy of an assignment with the record of such document in the Copyright Office and certifying the same under seal, $1. For recording the transfer of the proprietorship of copyright articles, 10 cents for each title of a book or other article, in addition to the fee prescribed for recording the instrument of assignment. For recording an extension or renewal of copyright, 50 cents. Remittances should be made by money order payable to the Register of Copyrights. Forms for application for copyright registration will be furnished on request.

DURATION OF COPYRIGHT.

The original term of copyright runs for twenty-eight years. Within one year prior to the expiration of the original term, the author, if living, or the widow or widower of the author, or the children of the author if he be not living; or if none of these be living then the author's executors, or in the absence of a will, the author's next of kin may secure a renewal for a further term of twenty-eight years, making fifty-six years in all. In case of composite works, if the proprietor secured the original copyrights, he may also secure the renewal.

ASSIGNMENTS.

Copyrights are assignable by any instruments of writing. Every assignment of copyright must be recorded in the Copyright Office within three calendar months after its execution in the United States or within six calendar months after its execution without the limits of the United States. "In default of which it shall be void as against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee for a valuable consideration, without notice, whose assignment has been duly recorded." Every assignment of copyright executed in a foreign country must be acknowledged by the assignor before a consular officer or secretary of legation of the United States authorized by law to administer oaths or perform notarial acts. The certificate of such acknowledgment under the hand and official seal of such Consular Officer or Secretary of Legation is prima facie evidence of the execution of the instrument.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT RELATIONS.

Copyright is not secured in foreign countries by action in the Copyright Office, but only by complying with the legislation of such countries.

Copyright relations have been established with the following foreign countries by proclamation of the President: Austria, Belgium, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain and her possessions, Italy, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands and possessions, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunis.

Copyright treaties have also been entered into with China, Japan and Hungary (the latter in effect on October 16, 1912). The Copyright Convention of Mexico of 1902 has been ratified by the United States and is effective from July 1, 1908, as between the United States and Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador.

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

The Library of Congress was established in 1800, destroyed in 1814 by the burning of the Capitol, afterward replenished by the purchase by Congress of the library of ex-President Jefferson, 6,760 volumes (cost, $23,950); in 1851, 35,000 volumes destroyed by fire; in 1852, partially replenished by an appropriation of $75,000; increased (1) by regular appropriations by Congress; (2) by deposits under the copyright law; (3) by gifts and exchanges; (4) by the exchanges of the Smithsonian Institution, the library of which (40,000 volumes) was, in 1866, deposited in the Library of Congress with the stipulation that future accessions of Congress for exchange, through the Smithsonian, with foreign Governments, and from this source are received about 12,000 volumes annually. Other special accessions have been: The Peter Force collection (22,529 volumes, 37,000 pamphlets), purchased 1867, cost $100,000; the Count de Rochambeau collection (manuscript), purchased 1883, cost $26,000; the Toner collection (24,484 volumes, numerous pamphlets), gift in 1882 of Dr. Joseph M. Toner; the Hubbard collection (engravings).

The collection is now the largest in the Western Hemisphere, and third in the world. It comprised at the end of the fiscal year (June 30, 1915) about 2,363,873 printed books and pamphlets (including the law library which, while a division of the Library of Congress, still remains at the Capitol), manuscripts, maps, and charts, pieces of music, and photographs, prints, engravings and lithographs numbering about a million. The collection is rich in history, political science; in official documents, National, State, and foreign, and in Americana, including important files of American newspapers and original manuscripts (Colonial, Revolutionary, and formative periods). Many of the rare books and manuscripts belonging to the library are exhibited in show cases on the second floor.

The library is rich in special collections acquired since 1897.

In Prints—The Hubbard collection, gift in 1893 of Mrs. Gardner G. Hubbard; Noyes works of Japanese artists; Garrett, 19,113 prints (on deposit); George Lothrop Bradley, 1,980 engravings; prints issued by the Government calographies of France, Germany, Italy, Japan, and Austria-Hungary.

Manuscripts—The PAPERS OF NINE PRESIDENTS: Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Van Buren, Polk, Pierce, and Johnson. AMERICAN STATESMEN AND POLITICIANS: Franklin, R. Morris, Hamilton, Van Buren, Duff Green, Washburne, Clayton, Chase, Crittenden, Lyman Trumbull, E. M. Stanton, John Sherman, Gideon Welles (deposited); James H. Hammond, J. L. M. Curry, Thomas Ewing. MILITARY PAPERS: Pickett papers, Gen. George B. McClelland, Gen. W. T. Sherman. DIPLOMATS: Webster papers. NAVAL PAPERS: Preble, John Paul Jones. COMMERCIAL HISTORIES: Ellis, 1805-1853; Bourne, 1776-1816; Galloway (early part of the eighteenth century); letters of William Taylor (the latter part of the eighteenth century); of John White, cashier of the Bank of the United States at Baltimore; Edward Dixon, merchant of Port Royal, 1743-1796. Biddle papers (Bank of the U. S.), deposited. DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: Papers of William Thornton; George Waterston. EUROPEAN ARCHIVES: Stevens Index, 1763-1783; upward of 100,000 folios of transcripts of documents relating to American Colonial history. Mercy-Argenteau family papers, fifteenth to nineteenth century. STATE PAPERS: Continental Congress; House of Representatives. COLONIAL DOCUMENTARY HISTORY: Records of Virginia Company; Spanish papers of New Mexico and Florida; Philippine and Guam documents. SCIENTIFIC: Maury papers. MEXICAN HISTORY: Yturbide papers; Inquisition papers, 1759. LITERARY: Louise Chandler Moulton collection of letters.

Maps—The Kohl collection; manuscript maps of Lord Howe (and many other manuscript maps); the Lowrey collection of maps of Spanish possessions now within the limits of the United States.

Printed Books—The Webster library (Ganss), 3,100 volumes, 1,902 pamphlets; Hattala (Slavic), about 1,500 volumes; Yudin (Russian), 80,000 volumes; the Huitfeldt-Kaas (Scandinavian), 5,000 volumes; the John Boyd Thacher collection of Incunabula (deposited); the Deland collections of Hebraica, comprising upward of 14,000 titles, were given to the Library by Mr. Jacob H. Schiff in 1912 and 1914.

In 1897 the main collection was removed from the Capitol to the building erected for it under the acts of Congress approved April 15, 1886; October 2, 1888, and March 2, 1889, at a cost of $6,347,000 (limit by law, $6,500,000), exclusive of the land, which cost $585,000. The architects who furnished the original designs were John L. Smithmeyer and Paul J. Pelz. By the act of October 2, 1888, before the foundations were laid, Thomas L. Casey, Chief of Engineers of the Army, was placed in charge of the construction of the building, and the architectural details were worked out by Paul J. Pelz and Edward P. Casey. Upon the death of Gen. Casey, in March, 1896, the entire charge of the construction devolved upon Bernard R. Green, Gen. Casey's assistant, and under his superintendence the building was completed in February, 1897, opened to the public November, 1897. The building occupies three and three-quarter acres upon a site ten acres in extent at a distance of 1,270 feet east of the Capitol, and is the largest and most magnificent library building in the world. In the decorations some forty painters and sculptors are represented—all American citizens. The floor space is 326,195 square feet, or nearly eight acres. The book stacks including the new stack built over the southeast interior court, contain about 100 miles of shelving, affording space for 3,510,000 octavo volumes and 84,000 volumes of newspapers.

The library is maintained by annual appropriations by Congress for various purposes, including the purchase of books. Total appropriation for 1916, $660,105.00. For service and contingent expenses, $451,460.00; purchase of books, $98,000.00; building and grounds, $10,645.00.

Library Service—Library proper, 255 employees; copyright, 91; distribution of cards, 44; legislative reference, 17; disbursement and care of building and grounds, 134. Total, 541. By virtue of the act of 1897, employees in the library proper are appointed by the Librarian of Congress "solely with reference to their fitness for their particular duties."

Copyright Office—The Copyright Office is a distinct division of the Library of Congress, and is located on the ground floor, south side, open 9 to 4.30. It is under the immediate charge of the Register of Copyrights, who, by the acts of February 19, 1897, and March 4, 1909, is authorized "under the direction and supervision of the Librarian of Congress," to perform all the duties relating to copyrights. Copyright registration was transferred to the Librarian of Congress by the act of July 8, 1870. Of most articles copyrighted two copies, and of some one copy, must be deposited in the Library of Congress to perfect copyright.

Entitled by statute to draw books for home use are the following: The President, the Vice-President, Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress (no books may be given out upon the orders of members in favor of those who are not members); Heads of Departments; the Justices, Reporter, and Clerk of the Supreme Court; the Judges and Clerk of the Court of Claims; Judges of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia and Judges of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia; representatives at Washington of foreign Governments; the Solicitor-General and Assistant Attorney-General; the Secretary of the Senate; the Clerk of the House of Representatives; the Solicitor of the Treasury; ex-Presidents of the United States; the Chaplains of the two Houses of Congress; the Secretary and Regents of the Smithsonian Institution; the members and Secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Chief of Engineers of the Army.

Inter-Library Loans—While not a lending library, but a reference library, primarily and essentially, the Library of Congress maintains an inter-library loan system by which special service is rendered to scholarship by the lending of books to other libraries for the use of investigators engaged in serious research, which it is not within the power or duty of the library in question to supply, and which at the time are not needed in Washington.

Hours—The Library building is open to the public all days in the year excepting 4th of July and Christmas. The hours are from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. week days, from 2 P. M. to 10 P. M. Sundays and holidays, and 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. on Saturdays from June 15 to September 15.

The Main Reading Room and Periodical Reading Room are open to the public from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. week days, and from 2 P. M. to 10 P. M. Sundays and holidays.

The Librarian's Office is open for the transaction of business from 9 A. M. to 4.30 P. M. week days, and from 2 P. M. to 6 P. M. Sundays and holidays.

The other administrative divisions of the Library, including the Copyright Office, are open for the transaction of business from 9 A. M. to 4.30 P. M. all days in the year, excepting legal holidays and Sundays.

Librarians Since the Inception of the Library—1800-1814, the Clerk of the House of Representatives (for the time being); 1815-1829, George Watterston; 1829-1861, John S. Meehan; 1861-1864, John G. Stephenson; 1864-1897 (June 30), Ainsworth R. Spofford; 1897-January 17, 1899, John Russell Young; 1899 (April 5), Herbert Putnam.

General Administration—Librarian of Congress, Herbert Putnam; Chief Assistant Librarian, Appleton P. C. Griffin; Chief Clerk, Allen R. Boyd; Secretary, Jessica L. Farnum.

RO.

Ro is the name of the universal language constructed by Rev. Edward P. Foster of Marietta, Ohio. The first publication—an eight-page outline—of the language was issued in 1906.

Ro uses the method technically known as a priori; that is, it rejects all existing root words, whether of Latin or any other language, and uses as a basis simply the twenty-six letters of the alphabet. These letters it makes absolutely phonetic. No accents or diacritical marks are employed.

For the formation of words, Ro first analyzes ideas into their ultimate elements. Having completed the analysis, it chooses an initial letter or initial syllable to designate one of these primary elements or general concepts. Each added letter subdivides or particularizes so that the completed word represents an individual thought of the general significance denoted by the initial of the word. The initial letter represents, as it were, an army corps, the second letter a division of that corps, the third a brigade, the fourth a regiment, the fifth a company, and the final letter the individual soldier.

For example, Ro takes the initial "a" to denote pronoun; "ab" for pronoun of the first person; "abi" for this pronoun in the nominative case, "I," "abiz," we; "abe," my; "abez," our; "abo," me; "aboz," us. The initial "e" denotes verb; "eb" infinitive mood; "eba," to be; "ebe," to become; "ebi," to make; "ebul," to unmake; "ebo," to be made (passive voice). The initial "t" denotes time; "ta," definite period of time; "tab," moment, second; "tac," minute; "tad," hour; "tada," morning hour; "tadab," 1 A. M.; "tadib," 1 P. M.; "tag," day; "Tagab," Sunday; "tal," month; "Talap," January; "z" denotes number; "za," unit column; "zag," one; "zac," two; "zad," three; "zaf," four; "zag," five; "zeb," ten; "zec," twenty; "zed," thirty; "zib," one hundred; "zibzedzaf," 134.

This method of word-building is chosen as the scientific method, the only one that is absolutely international, definite or adequate for the twentieth century.

THE PRINCIPAL LANGUAGES OF THE WORLD.

THERE are said to be 3,424 spoken languages or dialects in the world, distributed as follows: America, 1,624; Asia, 937; Europe, 587; Africa, 276.

The English language contains approximately 600,000 words. Of this total nearly one-half consists of scientific terminology seldom met outside of text-books and of archaic, obsolescent or obsolete terms.

Various estimates of the sources of English words have been made at different times. On the basis of the Lord's Prayer, George Hickes calculated that nine-tenths of our words were of Saxon origin. Sharon Turner's estimate was that the Norman were to the Saxon as 4 to 6. French computed 60 per cent. Saxon; 30 per cent. Latin, including those received through French; 5 per cent. Greek, and 5 per cent. other sources. Prof. W. W. Skeat in the recently published fourth edition of his Dictionary, which contains approximately 20,000 words, shows the following sources:

As regards the number of words in the principal other languages no estimate of any practical value has been made in recent years, but existing dictionaries show the following facts:

The vocabulary of the New Standard Dictionary of the English Language aggregates approximately 450,000 words.

The German word-book (Kürschner's Universal-Konversations-Lexikon) contains not more than 300,000 words, including personal names.

Grimm's Dictionary of the German Language contains approximately 150,000 words; Littré's Dictionary of the French Language, 210,000 words; Dahl's Dictionary of the Russian Language, 140,000 words; Carlos de Ochoa's Dictionary of the Spanish Language, 120,000 words; Petrocchi's Dictionary of the Italian Language, 140,000 words.

This table was prepared by Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, Managing Editor of the Standard Dictionary.

ESPERANTO, THE INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE.

Esperanto is an artificial language invented by the Russian Dr. L. L. Zamenhof, of Warsaw, Poland. It has only one object in view, namely, to serve as an international auxiliary language; it is not in the least intended to replace the national languages. The first book in the new language was published in 1887.

The Esperanto words are mostly of Latin, but to some extent also of Anglo-German origin, so that at the first glance Esperanto has the familiar appearance of a Roman language.

The great success of Esperanto, which is now known and studied all over the world, is chiefly due to the facility with which it may be mastered. The pronunciation is strictly phonetic, making the study of spelling unnecessary. The grammar does not admit of any exceptions to the rules, and is so logical and simple that it may be learned completely in a few hours by any person who is familiar with the grammar of his mother tongue. The vocabulary consists of about 2,500 root words, a large majority of which is known to any one whose language contains a great number of Latin roots—for instance, English.

In spite of this small number of root words Esperanto has been made rich in words and expressions by the adoption of certain affixes and certain methods of word combination. By these simple and easy means a considerable vocabulary may be obtained. Esperanto is a well-sounding language when spoken.

Esperanto is now used for all civilized purposes by many hundreds of thousands of persons in all civilized countries. It made its appearance in the United States in an organized form in 1905, when the first society for its study was formed in Boston, and this was followed soon afterward by societies in New York and Philadelphia. It is now promoted by a large and flourishing national association, the "Esperanto Association of North America."

Esperanto has a large literature, over a hundred periodicals, including a number in the United States, being published and a large and powerful "Universal Esperanto Association" maintains a regular system of consulates all over the world, to facilitate the transaction of all kinds of legitimate business for its members by means of the common tongue.

International congresses of Esperantists have been held at Boulogne, Geneva, Cambridge, Dresden, Barcelona, Washington, Antwerp, Cracow, Berne and San Francisco. Delegates representing the Esperantists of forty different nations and languages have been in attendance.

The Esperantists of America have established in Boston an office from which may be obtained without charge, any desired information of the movement. Address "Esperanto Office," West Newton (Boston Postal District), Mass.

THE RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS AT OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

CECIL J. RHODES, statesman and capitalist, who died at Cape Town, South Africa, March 26, 1902, directed in his will, dated July 1, 1899, that a part of his fortune should be applied for the creation of a fund for the support of a certain number of scholarships covering a three years' course at Oxford University. He directed that the selection of the recipients of this gift should be made as follows: From three to nine scholars from each of the British Colonies, two from each State and Territory of the United States, or one hundred in all. Mr. Rhodes desired that in awarding the scholarships account should be taken of different qualities—literary and scholastic attainments, love of outdoor sports, strong, manly qualities such as courage, generosity, kindness, etc., high moral character, and desire to serve in public affairs.

The agencies for final selection vary a good deal. Scholars from Cape Colony are chosen by the individual schools to which the scholarships are especially assigned. In several of the Canadian provinces it has been decided that an appointment shall be made in rotation by the leading universities. In most of the States of the Union, in outlying colonies like Bermuda, Jamaica and Newfoundland, in provinces of Canada, in New Zealand and the States of Australia, the final choice of the scholar is left in the hands of a Committee of Selection. Great care has been taken in the constitution of these committees, as it has been felt that on the wise and impartial exercise of their judgment depends more than upon anything else the full success of the scheme.

The conditions regulating the award of scholarships in the American States provide that the candidates shall have satisfactorily completed the work of at least two years in some college of liberal arts and sciences. The upper age limit must be twenty-four years at the time of entering upon the scholarship at Oxford. To be eligible the candidate must be a citizen of the United States, or the son of a citizen, and must be unmarried. Each student receives an allowance of £300 a year, which is equivalent to $1,500, payable in quarterly instalments, which is just enough to enable a man to pay the expenses of vacations as well as terms. The first instalment is not payable until the student has actually gone into residence at Oxford, so he should go abroad with one or two hundred dollars in his possession.

The full number of scholarships, when all are filled, is, as at present, 189; and this number should be maintained from year to year, vacancies being filled as the men complete their three years' course. The last examination in the United States took place in October, 1915. The next qualifying examinations will be held in all States of the Union in October, 1916.

Hitherto scholars have been elected in all States of the Union in two successive years, while in each recurring third year none was chosen. In the future scholars will be selected each year from 32 States. The 48 States have for this purpose been divided into three groups (A, B and C) of sixteen each.

For the year 1916 scholars will be elected from groups A and B; for 1917 from groups A and C; and for 1918 from B and C, and subsequently in the same rotation year by year.

The qualifying examination, which is in essence the same as that for entrance into Oxford University, consisting of Latin, Greek and Mathematics, will be held in all the States each year.

The division of the States into groups, for the purpose above mentioned, is as follows:

| A.             | A.          | B.          | B.           | C.          | C.              |
|----------------|-------------|-------------|--------------|-------------|-----------------|
| Maine.         | Maryland.   | California. | Michigan.    | Arizona.    | North Carolina. |
| New Hampshire. | New Jersey. | Washington. | Missouri.    | Delaware.   | North Dakota.   |
| Vermont.       | Virginia.   | Oregon.     | Iowa.        | Florida.    | Oklahoma.       |
| Massachusetts. | Ohio.       | Colorado.   | Georgia.     | Idaho.      | South Carolina. |
| Rhode Island.  | Indiana.    | Nebraska.   | Texas.       | Louisiana.  | South Dakota.   |
| Connecticut.   | Kentucky.   | Kansas.     | Alabama.     | Montana.    | Utah.           |
| Pennsylvania.  | Illinois.   | Minnesota.  | Arkansas.    | Nevada.     | West Virginia.  |
| New York.      | Tennessee.  | Wisconsin.  | Mississippi. | New Mexico. | Wyoming.        |

The examinations are not competitive, but qualifying. Inquiries as to particulars by intending candidates may be addressed to any college. Information may also be obtained from The Rhodes Trust, Seymour House, Waterloo Place, London S. W., or from F. J. Wylie, Secretary to the Rhodes trustees, 9 South Parks Road, Oxford, England.

There were five annual German Scholarships which were created by a codicil to the will of 1899, scholars for which were appointed by the German Emperor. These scholarships were for three years and had an annual value of £250. They have naturally stopped since the outbreak of hostilities, but nothing has been decided with regard to the income which has accrued. As they were created by a codicil to the original will of Mr. Rhodes, the English Parliament can divert this fund without affecting the other scholarships.

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

ESTABLISHED by consolidation of the "Trustees of the Astor Library," the "Trustees of the Lenox Library," and the "Tilden Trust," May 23, 1895, twenty-one trustees being chosen from the Trustees of these corporations; in 1902 the number of Trustees was increased to twenty-five, of which number the Mayor of the city of New York, the Comptroller, and the President of the Board of Aldermen serve ex officio. The agreement of consolidation provided for the establishment and maintenance of a free public library and reading room in the city of New York, with such branches as might be deemed advisable for the continued promotion of the objects and purposes of these several corporations.

The Trustees soon after consolidation in 1895 determined to pursue a liberal policy and to create a great library system that would serve the needs of scholars and of the general reading public as well. An act was passed by the Legislature and approved May 19, 1897, giving the city the necessary authority to issue bonds for the construction of a building on the present site and to contract with the New York Public Library for its occupancy. Carrère & Hastings were appointed architects of the building on December 9, 1897. The corner-stone was laid November 10, 1902, and the building was opened to the public on May 23, 1911.

The building is in the form of a rectangle 390 feet long and 270 feet deep, built around two inner courts, each about 80 feet square; it has a cellar, basement, and three upper floors. The area covered is about 115,000 square feet, the cubic contents 10,380,000 cubic feet. The material is largely Vermont marble (375,000 cubic feet), bonded in brick walls. There are seats for 768 readers in the main reading room and seats in other public rooms bring the total capacity up to 1,760. In the main stack room are 334,530 feet (63.3 miles) of shelving, with capacity for about 2,500,000 volumes. Book stacks in the special reading rooms amount to about 70,000 feet, with capacity for about 500,000 volumes.

The building fronts on Fifth Avenue, looking east. On the basement floor, with entrance from Forty-second Street, are the rooms for circulation of books, for children's reading, for newspapers, a library school and its offices, and public telephones; on this basement floor, with entrance on Fortieth Street, are the shipping rooms and the printing and binding offices. On the first floor are the business offices of the circulation department, the offices of the bursar, exhibition rooms, and reading rooms for current periodicals, technology, patents. On the second floor are the offices of the Director, a lecture room, the ordering and cataloguing rooms, and reading rooms for Jewish literature. Oriental literature, Slavonic literature, science, economics, and sociology, and public documents. On the third floor are the public catalogue room and the main reading room, the latter occupying nearly the whole of the west front of the building, in size about 300 feet long by 30 feet wide, with seats for 768 readers. Along the south side of the third floor are special reading rooms devoted to American history, maps, and engravings. Along the Fifth Avenue front are the art and architecture reading room, the Stuart room, the picture galleries, and the manuscripts division. Along the north front of the third floor are reading rooms for music and for genealogy and local history.

On March 12, 1901, Mr. Andrew Carnegie offered to give $5,200,000 to the city for the construction and equipment of free circulating libraries upon condition that the city should provide the land and agree to maintain the libraries when built. This communication was submitted to the Mayor on March 15, and on April 26 an act was passed authorizing acceptance of the gift by the city upon the terms imposed by Mr. Carnegie. An agreement with the city was executed on July 17, the library acting as agent for Mr. Carnegie, under which forty-two buildings are to be erected in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Richmond (later increased to fifty), on sites to be selected and purchased by the city with the approval of the library, the buildings to be leased to the library and to be under its control. The city agrees to provide adequate yearly maintenance, 10 per cent. of the cost of each building being agreed upon as a minimum.

On November 7, 1901, an agreement was made with three firms of architects in New York to prepare plans and specifications for these branch libraries. On June 6, 1902, an issue of bonds for $250,000 was authorized for purchase of sites. The first Carnegie building, known as the Yorkville branch, was opened December 13, 1902, at 222 East Seventy-ninth Street; the second, providing a new home for the Chatham Square branch, was opened November 2, 1903, at 33 East Broadway. By the end of 1915 thirty-seven branches had been opened under this contract.

The Trustees of the Library are John W. Alexander, William W. Appleton, Andrew Carnegie, Cleveland H. Dodge, John Murphy Farley, Samuel Greenbaum, Frederic H. Halsey, John Henry Hammond, Lewis Cass Ledyard, J. P. Morgan, Morgan J. O'Brien, Stephen R. Olin, Henry Fairfield Osborn, William Barclay Parsons, George L. Rives, Chas. E. Russell, Edward W. Sheldon, George W. Smith, Frederick Sturges, Henry W. Taft, Mayor of the city of New York, ex officio; Comptroller of the city of New York, ex officio; President of the Board of Aldermen, ex officio.

There is an advisory committee on circulation consisting of W. W. Appleton, Chairman; Mark Ash, J. H. McMahon, H. W. Taft, Samuel Greenbaum, George W. Smith, Lucius Wilmerding, John Henry Hammond, Director and Head Librarian, Edwin H. Anderson.

There are 18,000 regularly established libraries in the United States, according to statistics compiled by the United States Bureau of Education. The number of volumes is an increase of 20,000,000 since 1908.

Of the 2,849 libraries containing 5,000 volumes or over, 1,844 are classified as "public and society libraries," and 1,005 are school and college libraries. Public and society libraries have an aggregate of over 50,000,000 volumes, with 7,000,000 borrowers' cards in force; 1,446 of these libraries were entirely free to the public.

Libraries reporting from 1,000 to 5,000 volumes numbered 5,453, of which 2,188 were public and society libraries and 3,265 school libraries. These libraries contained 11,689,942 volumes. Another group of still smaller libraries, comprising those that reported from 300 to 1,000 volumes, increased the total by 2,961,007 volumes.

The distribution of library facilities is still uneven of the 1,844 public and society libraries reported for the entire United States, more than half were in the North Atlantic States, and they contained 24,627,921 volumes out of the total of 50,000,000; and of the 3,000,000 volumes added to library collections for the year 1913 almost one-half were for the same section.

New York State had 7,842,621 volumes in her 214 libraries; Massachusetts, 7,380,024 in 238 libraries; Pennsylvania, 3,728,070, and Illinois, 3,168,765 volumes. Four-fifths of the borrowers' cards in use were in the North Atlantic and Northern Central States.

There are at least five libraries in the world which hold over a million books: The Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris (which claims over 3,000,000), the British Museum, the Imperial Library at Petrograd, the Congressional Library at Washington, and the New York Public Library.

BABY WEEK TO BE CELEBRATED.

The Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor announced late in November, 1915 that State health officials of thirty-nine States had already pledged their co-operation in the observance of the nation-wide Baby Week, March 4 to 11, 1916, proposed by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Scores of letters about Baby Week had been pouring into the Children's Bureau ever since the plan was announced and the bureau's preliminary circular of information about Baby Week was sent in response to inquiries from organizations in forty-five States and the District of Columbia.

The bureau has prepared these circulars and has in press a longer bulletin on Baby Week, which will shortly be available for free distribution, in order to place at the disposal of all communities the practical experience of those cities which successfully conducted local Baby Week campaigns, notably New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Grand Rapids, Topeka, Yonkers, and Long Beach, Cal. Special sections of the circulars are devoted to suggestions for Baby Week in small towns and villages.

A SHAKESPEARE TERCENTENARY.

The Shakespeare Celebration Association with headquarters at No. 10 East 43d Street, New York City, was incorporated in 1915 to provide for the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the death of William Shakespeare on April 23, 1916, by the people of the State of New York.

This is a State affair, without relation to a National movement with similar purpose.

The celebration will consist of exercises in schools, colleges, social settlements, churches and among societies which will organize festivals, readings, musical programmes, Elizabethan masques, pageants and dramatic performances. Special programmes will be given by musical organizations. A branch of the English Folk Dance Society will form classes and arrange competitions in Morris and sword dances.

Libraries will co-operate by publishing bibliographies and having books of the Elizabethan period easily accessible. Shakespeare's plays, including some of the less familiar ones, will be presented by professionals.

Percy Mackaye has written a "Community Masque," designed as a climax. It will have professional actors, and choral, dance and processional interludes will enlist thousands of trained amateurs. After the New York production the masque will be available for outdoor presentation elsewhere in Spring and Summer.

The New York Public Library will give an exhibition early in January, in which books relating to Shakespeare will be accessible. Miss Ada Rehan has donated to the library her prompt books, containing notes, comments and directions written by Augustin Daly.

Among prominent citizens of New York who will take part in the arrangements for the celebration are Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Edward H. Sothern, Thomas W. Churchill, Daniel Frohman, Otto H. Kahn, Gertrude Atherton, Augustus Thomas, and His Honor Mayor Mitchel.

NATIONAL READING CIRCLE.

The United States Bureau of Education has established the National Reading Circle and will issue certificates to readers who meet requirements. The Reading Circle comes under the auspices of the Home Education Division of the Bureau of Education at Washington, and for the benefit of those who wish to be enrolled among its students various courses of readings are recommended. The following courses are either ready for distribution or preparation:

The bureau invites all who wish to undertake this course of reading under its direction to join its Second National Reading Circle. For admission to this circle it is only necessary to write to the "Home Education Division of the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C." giving your name, post-office address, your age, and a very brief statement of your education and occupation. You should also write the Home Education Division of the bureau when you have finished reading any course.

To each person submitting satisfactory evidence of having read all the books on this list within three years from the time of joining circle, there will be awarded a certificate bearing the seal of the United States Bureau of Education and signed by the Commissioner of Education. In States where the State Department of Education co-operates with the bureau this certificate may bear the signature of the chief school officer of the State also. All young men and women who wish to lay a good foundation for a knowledge of the best literature are invited to join this circle.

Charles Alphonso Smith, Edgar Allan Poe Professor of English in the University of Virginia; Charles Forster Smith, Professor of Greek in the University of Wisconsin; Richard Burton, Professor of English Literature in the University of Minnesota, and William Lyon Phelps, Professor of English Literature in Yale University, will assist the Bureau of Education in directing this course of reading.

In writing about this course refer to it as "United States Bureau of Education, Home Education Division, Reading Course No. II., or, Great Literature—Ancient, Mediæval, and Modern."

Readers may take one or more courses. They are required to read Course I. twice during the three years succeeding enrolment. Any other courses are to be read but once. No reading done previous to the date of enrolment will be considered adequate.

Let the bureau know when each book is begun and when it is completed. Send a brief statement of what the book means to you when you have finished reading it.

Evidence Required—When you have completed a course and notify the bureau it will choose a book which you have read and ask you to write about it.

Books may be purchased of publishers or borrowed from libraries or elsewhere. The Bureau of Education does not furnish or lend them for this purpose.

If the editions named are not available any editions may be used. Any edition of the Bible may be used, but the advantage to be gained from "Moulton's Modern Readers' Bible" will more than pay for the additional cost.

"The Reader's Handbook of Famous Names in Fiction, Allusions, References, Etc.," by E. Cobham Brewer, published by Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., will be helpful in reading.

THE HALL OF FAME.

MARCH 5, 1900, the Council of New York University accepted a gift of $100,000, afterward increased to $250,000, from a donor, whose name was withheld, for the erection and completion on University Heights, New York City, of a building to be called "The Hall of Fame for Great Americans." A structure was built in the form of a terrace with superimposed colonnade connecting the University Hall of Philosophy with the Hall of Languages. On the ground floor is a museum 200 feet long by 40 feet wide, consisting of a corridor and six halls to contain mementoes of the names that are inscribed above. The colonnade over this is 600 feet long with provision for 150 panels, each about 2 feet by 6 feet, each to bear the name of a famous American.

Only persons who shall have been dead ten or more years are eligible to be chosen. Fifteen classes of citizens were recommended for consideration, to wit: Authors and editors, business men, educators, inventors, missionaries and explorers, philanthropists and reformers, preachers and theologians, scientists, engineers and architects, lawyers and judges, musicians, painters and sculptors, physicians and surgeons, rulers and statesmen, soldiers and sailors, distinguished men and women outside the above classes. Fifty names were to be inscribed on the tablets at the beginning, and five additional names every fifth year thereafter, until the year 2000, when the 150 inscriptions will be completed. In case of failure to fill all the panels allotted, the vacancies are to be filled in a following year.

In February, 1904, the plan was announced of a Hall of Fame for Women near the former, with places for 50 tablets. Its foundation has been begun.

The rules prescribed that the council should invite nominations from the public. Every nomination seconded by a member of the University Senate should be submitted to an electorate of one hundred eminent citizens selected by the council. Chancellor Emeritus MacCracken presides in the Senate when the Hall of Fame is considered. Address University Heights, New York City.

In October, 1900, the University Senate received the ballots of the electors. Of the one hundred judges selected ninety-seven voted. The number of names which had been submitted to them was 252. Of these each judge returned a vote for fifty. The rule required that no candidate receiving less than fifty-one votes could be accepted. The returns showed that but twenty-nine candidates received the required number and were chosen. These were as follows: George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Daniel Webster, Benjamin Franklin, Ulysses S. Grant, John Marshall, Thomas Jefferson, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry W. Longfellow, Robert Fulton, Washington Irving, Jonathan Edwards, Samuel F. B. Morse, David G. Farragut, Henry Clay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, George Peabody, Robert E. Lee, Peter Cooper, Eli Whitney, John J. Audubon, Horace Mann, Henry Ward Beecher, James Kent, Joseph Story, John Adams, William E. Channing, Gilbert Stuart and Asa Gray.

In October, 1905, under the rules named above, the Senate received the ballots of 95 electors out of 101 appointed, of whom only 85 undertook to consider the names of women. A majority of 51 was demanded, but in the case of the names of women, a majority of only 47. The following persons were found to be duly chosen: John Quincy Adams, 69; James Russell Lowell, 58; William Tecumseh Sherman, 58; James Madison, 56; John Greenleaf Whittier, 53; Mary Lyon, 58; Emma Willard, 50, and Maria Mitchell, 42.

The hall was dedicated May 30, 1901, when twenty-five or more National associations each unveiled one of the bronze tablets in the colonnade, and on May 30, 1907, eleven new tablets were unveiled, orations being given by the Governors of New York and Massachusetts.

In October, 1910, the next ballot was taken, the number cast being 97 and the number required for a choice being 51. The following persons had the requisite number of votes: Harriet Beecher Stowe, 74; Oliver Wendell Holmes, 69; Edgar Allan Poe, 69; James Fenimore Cooper, 62; Phillips Brooks, 60; William Cullen Bryant, 59; Frances E. Willard, 56; Andrew Jackson, 53; George Bancroft, 53; John Lothrop Motley, 51. There were 211 nominees.

The fourth quinquennial election in 1915 secured the ballots of ninety-seven electors, three electors having died within the year, nine names were admitted, viz., Alexander Hamilton, 70 votes; Mark Hopkins, 69; Francis Parkman, 68; Elias Howe, 61; Joseph Henry, 56; Rufus Choate, 52; Daniel Boone, 52; with one woman, Charlotte Cushman, 53. Of these Hamilton and Agassiz had been elected in 1905 to the separate hall proposed for famous foreign-born Americans. When the Constitution was amended in 1914, to do away with the line of discrimination between native-born and foreign-born, it was required that the four foreign-born, already chosen, be re-elected in competition with the native-born put in nomination. The two above named were approved, while John Paul Jones and Roger Williams lacked a majority, but remain in nomination for the year 1920. The total names admitted in the four quinquennial elections is 50 men and 6 women. The hall has recently received $27,000 toward its completion and $10,000 toward its endowment.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF COMMONS CLUBS.

This organization is composed of non-fraternity men. It was founded in Wesleyan University in 1906, has 11 active chapters, 9 houses, and 500 members. Secretary—Seth Wakeman, Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.

AMERICAN LEARNED SOCIETIES.

Actuarial Society of America—President—James M. Craig, New York. Vice-Presidents—William A. Hutcheson, Henry Mofr. Secretary—Robert Henderson, 346 Broadway, New York City. Treasurer—David G. Alsop, Philadelphia, Pa. Editor of the Transactions, Wendell M. Strong, New York. The Actuarial Society of America was organized in 1889 for the purpose of promoting actuarial science. Applicants whose nominations are approved by the council are admitted to membership on passing the requisite examinations. There are two classes of members: Fellows, now numbering 140, and associates, 123. Besides including the actuaries of life insurance companies and consulting actuaries of the United States and Canada, the membership embraces leading actuaries in Europe and Australasia.

Aeronautical Engineers' Society, A. S. of A.—Founded 1914. This society has for its principal objects the promotion of the science of aeronautics and the various branches of engineering kindred to it; to create and promote an intercourse between persons interested, and to create a body which by the Constitution of its membership and achievement, will be entitled to represent the interests of aeronautical engineering before proper bodies in this country. A further purpose is to review technical and scientific papers relating to aeronautical engineering.

Persons eligible for membership include graduates of engineering schools in good standing; persons who for a period of not less than one year have been in charge of responsible work of an engineering nature; persons who have shown high proficiency in flying; persons who have rendered signal service to the development of the science or art of aviation.

There is no initiation fee. The yearly dues are $25. Chairman—Charles Wesley Howell. Secretary and Treasurer—Lewis R. Compton. Headquarters, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, New York City.

Aeronautical Society of America—Founded 1908. The objects of this society are to advance the science of aerial navigation by assisting its members to carry out experiments; to provide facilities for testing aeronautical devices; to bring together, as far as possible, those interested in the aeronautical art, and to carry out public demonstrations of completed aircraft so as to keep the general public informed of the progress and advancement from year to year. The society maintains flying grounds at Oakwood Heights, Staten Island, N. Y., the use of which is furnished free to its members, and hangars are provided at a nominal rent. To the society proper there are no initiation fees; the yearly dues are $10. This entitles the members to all privileges, including eligibility to membership in the Aeronautical Engineers' Society. President—Thomas R. MacMechen. First Vice-President—Fred W. Barker. Treasurer—Lewis R. Compton. Secretary—Edward Durant. Headquarters, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, New York City.

American Academy of Medicine—President—Woods Hutchinson, M. D. New York City. Secretary—Thomas Wray Grayson, M. D. Pittsburgh, Pa. Treasurer—Charles McIntire, M. D. Easton, Pa. Editor of the Journal of Sociologic Medicine—Thomas Wray Grayson, M. D. Object—To maintain a proper educational standard for the medical profession and to investigate the various problems of "medical sociology." Initiation fee, $5; dues, $3 per annum. Present membership, 543. Organized 1876. Incorporated 1913.

American Academy of Political and Social Science—President—L. S. Rowe, Ph. D., University of Pennsylvania. Secretary—J. P. Lichtenberger, Ph. D., University of Pennsylvania. Editor of the Annals, Clyde Lyndon King, Ph. D., University of Pennsylvania. Clerk—N. J. Smith-Fisher, West Philadelphia. P.-O. Philadelphia. Founded in 1889 to promote the political and social sciences. Membership, 6,500, distributed among every State and 35 foreign countries. Annual fee, $5; fee for life membership, $100. Annual meeting held in April.

American Antiquarian Society—President—Waldo Lincoln, Worcester, Mass. Corresponding Secretaries—Forenig, Franklin B. Dexter, New Haven, Ct.; Domestic, Charles Francis Adams, Lincoln, Mass. Recording Secretary—Charles L. Nichols, M. D., Worcester, Mass. Librarian—Clarence S. Brigham. Annual meeting is held at Worcester, Mass., the third Wednesday in October. Organized 1812.

Domestic membership restricted to 175. Admission fee of United States members, $5; annual dues of New England members, $5.

American Asiatic Association—President—Willard Straight. Vice-President—Lowell Lincoln. Secretary—John Foord, P.-O. Box 1500, New York. The purposes of the society are to foster and safeguard the trade and commercial interests of the citizens of the United States and others associated therewith in China, Japan, Korea, the Philippines, and elsewhere in Asia and Oceania. Membership, 300. Organized 1898. Annual dues, $10. Auxiliary societies at Shanghai, Yokohama and Kobe.

American Association for the Advancement of Science—President—William Wallace Campbell, Lick Observatory, Mount Hamilton, Cal. Permanent Secretary—L. O. Howard, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C. Assistant Secretary—F. S. Hazard, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C. Treasurer—R. S. Woodward, Washington, D. C. The association was organized in 1848 and chartered in 1874, being a continuation of the American Association of Geologists and Naturalists, organized in 1840. The membership is 8,100. Admission fee, $5; annual dues, $3. Life membership, $55.

American Association of Anatomists—President—Prof. G. Carl Huber, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. Secretary-Treasurer—Prof. Chas. R. Stockard, Cornell University Medical School, New York City. Has 300 members. Annual dues, $7.

American Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists—President—Dr. Hugo O. Pantzer, Indianapolis, Ind. Secretary—Dr. Ernst Gustav Zinke, 4 West Seventh Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. Annual meeting at Indianapolis, Ind., September 26-28, 1916.

American Association of Official Surgeons—President—W. A. Guild, M. D., Des Moines, Iowa. Secretary—A. E. Henwood, M. D., Kalamazoo, Mich. Treasurer—B. J. Wlsner, St. Louis, Mo. Next meeting, Chicago, Ill., September, 1916.

American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists—President—John T. Anderson, Washington, D. C. Vice-President—W. H. Park, New York City. Secretary—Dr. H. C. Ernst, 240 Longwood Avenue, Boston, Mass. Treasurer—Dr. Frank B. Mallory, Boston, Mass.

American Association of Public Accountants—Membership consists of all accounting societies organized in the various States and some individual members at large. President—J. Porter Joplin, Chicago, Ill. Secretary—A. P. Richardson, 55 Liberty Street, New York City. Treasurer—Carl H. Nau, Cleveland, Ohio.

American Association to Promote the Teaching of Speech to the Deaf—President—Miss Caroline A. Yale. General Secretary—Harris Taylor. Founded by Alexander Graham Bell. Headquarters, Washington, D. C. (Report of 1914.)

American Astronomical Society—President—Edward C. Pickering, Cambridge, Mass. Secretary—Philip Fox, Evanston, Ill. Organized 1899. Membership, 300.

American Bar Association—President—Elihu Root, New York City. Secretary—George Whitehead, Baltimore, Md. Treasurer—Frederick E. Wadham, Albany, N. Y. Each State and Territory is represented by one Vice-President and one member of the General Council. Membership, about 10,000. This association of lawyers of the United States was organized in 1878.

American Cancer Research Society—President—L. D. Rogers, M. D., Chicago, Ill. Secretary—W. A. Guild, M. D., Des Moines, Iowa. Treasurer—E. Mather, M. D., Detroit, Mich. Headquarters, 1430 Wells Street, Chicago, Ill. (Report of 1913.)

American Chemical Society—President—Chas. H. Herty, Chapel Hill, N. C. Secretary—Charles L. Parsons, Box 505, Washington, D. C. The society was organized in 1876 for "the advancement of chemistry and the promotion of chemical research." Annual dues, $10. Total membership, 7,300.

American Climatological and Clinical Association—President—James Alexander Miller, M. D., New York. Secretary—Guy Hinsdale, M. D., Hot Springs, Va. Organized 1884. Next annual meeting, Washington, D. C., May 9-11, 1916.

American Dermatological Association—President—Sigmund Politzer, 51 East Sixtieth Street, New York City. Secretary—Oliver S. Ormsby, 25 East Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

American Dialect Society—President—W. E. Mead, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct. Secretary—Dr. Percy W. Long, Harvard University. Treasurer—Prof. George D. Chase, University of Maine, Orono, Me. Organized in 1889 for the investigation of the spoken English of the United States and Canada, and incidentally of other non-aboriginal dialects in the same countries. Publishes Dialect Notes semi-annually. Annual fee, $1. Membership, about 325.

American Economic Association—President—Prof. Walter F. Willcox, Cornell University. Secretary—Allyn A. Young, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. Organized 1885. Has 2,500 members; annual dues, $5; life membership, $100. The objects of the association are the encouragement of economic studies and the publication of papers thereon.

American Electro-Therapeutic Association—President—Dr. Jefferson D. Gibson, Denver, Col. Secretary—Dr. Byron Sprague Pike, 65 Central Park West, New York City. Treasurer—Dr. Emil Heuel, 151 West Eighty-seventh Street, New York City. Organized 1890. Membership, 225.

American Entomological Society—President—Philip P. Calvert, Secretary—Henry Skinner, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa. Organized 1859. Object: The study of entomology. Membership, 140.

American Fisheries Society—President—Prof. Jacob E. Reighard, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. Vice-President—Dr. George W. Field, Sharon, Mass. Recording Secretary—Prof. Raymond C. Osburn, Connecticut College, New London, Ct. Corresponding Secretary—Dr. Chas. H. Townsend, The Aquarium, New York City. Treasurer—W. C. Willard, Westery, R. I. Organized December, 1870. ## AMERICAN BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The head office of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is at the Congregational House, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. There are three district offices: (1) at the United Charities Building, Twenty-second Street and Fourth Avenue, New York City, Rev. E. L. Smith, D. D., Secretary; (2) 19 S. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill., Rev. A. N. Hitchcock, D. D., District Secretary; (3) San Francisco, Cal., Henry H. Kelsey, D. D., District Secretary. Its officers are: President—Edward C. Moore, D. D. Corresponding Secretaries—James L. Barton, LL. D., Cornelius H. Patton, D. D., Edward L. Smith, D. D. Treasurer—Frank H. Wiggin.

The American Board, which is the oldest foreign missionary society in the United States, was organized June 29, 1810. During its history it has sent out over 3,000 missionaries, of whom 638 are now in service. Into the 673 churches which have been organized by these missionaries there have been received from the first 229,373 members. The total receipts from the beginning have been $45,488,439; for year 1915, $1,102,243.02.

The mission fields now occupied by the board are: Mexico; Micronesian Islands; Mindanao, Philippine Islands; Japan; North China; Shansi, in Northwestern China; Foochow and Canton, in Southern China; Ceylon; Madura, in Southern India; the Marathi field of Western India; in Southern Africa, the Rhodesian branch and the Zulu branch; West Central Africa; European and Asiatic Turkey; Austria, Spain, Greece, and Serbia.

THE SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM.

(From a statement prepared by Dr. Talcott Williams, Director.)

THE School of Journalism in Columbia University, New York City, on the Pulitzer Foundation, opened September 30, 1912. On November 1, 1915, it had in all 180 students, of whom 36 are women. Divided by classes, there are 69 in the first-year class, 43 in the second-year class, 43 in the third-year class, and 25 in the fourth-year class. Of the women who will take their degree in the School of Journalism, 17 are in Barnard, and 8 of the men at present registered in Columbia College are taking courses in the School of Journalism. Of the first-year class entering last Fall, 55 are men and 10 are women. Of this number, 43 men entered on examination and 11 under the provision laid down by the late Joseph Pulitzer in his gift, that students of maturity, experience and marked fitness should be admitted without examination. Of the women, 10 entered Barnard College, to be there two years, on examination. Admission without examination, as Mr. Pulitzer expected, has enabled a number of journalists to enter the school. On pursuing courses for two years with credit, these students are admitted to candidacy for the degree of Bachelor of Literature in Journalism. This degree was conferred on 22 graduates in the course at the last commencement of Columbia University; of the fourth-year class, 13 were in the school last year in the third-year class, and 12 are graduates of other colleges. This is a notable step toward giving the school a graduate character.

The total attendance is far larger than was expected and establishes the leading position of the school among institutions of its kind in this or any other country. The number attending is greater in proportion to the number of journalists in the country than the number attending the law and medical courses in Columbia University is in proportion to the number of those practising law and medicine. In September, 1913, the school entered its new building, for which $500,000 was provided by Mr. Pulitzer's bequest. The building is excellently equipped in every way for training in journalistic work, and contains a reference library, files of a hundred daily papers, American and foreign, and a morgue of 400,000 newspaper clippings made under the supervision of the Director during the last thirty years.

No step in professional education has attracted wider public attention or awakened a more general approval in the American press. When Mr. Pulitzer proposed the school twelve years ago its plan, purposes and need were all challenged. From the announcement of the appointment in February, 1912, of its Director, Talcott Williams, formerly of the NEW YORK WORLD staff and for 38 years in active journalism, to its successful opening and full operation the school has commanded the confidence of newspapers and journalists. One-third of its teaching staff of 25 have been in active service on newspapers.

The plan of the school and its course of study were approved and at many points directed by an Advisory Board of eleven journalists, including Mr. John Langdon Heaton, of the editorial staff of the NEW YORK WORLD; Mr. Ralph Pulitzer, President of the Press Publishing Company (the NEW YORK WORLD), and Mr. George S. Johns, editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The other journalists on this Advisory Board, of which President Butler of Columbia University is a member, are S. B. Griffin, Springfield Republican; Victor Fremont Lawson, Chicago Daily News; Charles Ransom Miller, New York Times; Edward Page Mitchell, The Sun, New York; Melville Elijah Stone, Associated Press, New York; Charles H. Taylor, Boston Globe; and Samuel Calvin Wells, Philadelphia Press.

The administrative work of the school is conducted by an Administrative Board, composed of President Butler; the Director, Talcott Williams; the Associate Director, Prof. John W. Cunliffe; Frederick P. Keppel, Dean of Columbia College; William P. Trent, Professor of English Literature; Henry R. Seager, Professor of Political Economy; James T. Shotwell, Professor of History; Ashley H. Thorndike, Professor of English, and Charles A. Beard, Associate Professor of Politics.

While there are 41 universities and colleges which give courses in various phases of journalism and several which have schools of journalism, no other school has an endowment so large, reaching $1,000,000 at present, with other gifts in prospect from the Pulitzer estate; none has a course giving so much time to the solid study needed for the training of the journalist, and this has also the crowning advantage of a metropolis like New York in which to train its students in reporting by sending them to see and to write upon events as they come in the life of a great city. The City Hall, the departments and the regular newspaper assignments have all been used to train men in getting news as well as in writing it. Attendance on first-night performances is employed in training for dramatic criticism. From the second year on, the students are under direction and correction, writing articles on financial and business subjects, editorials, special articles, and in other fields of newspaper work. The headquarters of the political parties in New York City have given opportunity for training in National and State politics.

This practical training in the work of the journalist in the greatest news centre of the country comes in the last two years, but of the four years' course four-fifths are devoted to the study of history, constitutional law, political science, economics, statistics, American and European literature, etc.; a mastery of either French or German is insisted on. These studies follow the lines laid down by Mr. Joseph Pulitzer in his plan for the school. They are taught with the comprehensive thoroughness only possible in a great university. The work and study required is on a professional standard. Taking the technical work of reporting and their studies, the students of the school are working as hard as in a newspaper-office, covering the same range of subjects and writing under close supervision and correction from men trained as journalists.

LITERATURE OF 1915.

BY FREMONT RIDER.

CAUTION induced by the war and falling off of importations materially reduced the number of books published in the United States in 1915. Trade, however, on the whole, held its own, there being no such wholesale cessation of publishing as in Germany and France.

FICTION decreased in quantity and hardly improved in quality. DRAMA and POETRY continued to gain in both importance and quality, but books on such lighter subjects as AMUSEMENTS dropped near zero. There was also a heavy falling off in FINE ARTS, BIOGRAPHY and TRAVEL, counterbalanced by a flood of books on the WAR in every one of its thousand phases. The booksellers tell us that "war books" are not selling, but the publishers continue to publish them nevertheless. A special attempt is here made to list all those of any reasonable significance. Also a new subject, always prominent in European publishing but practically unknown heretofore here, looms up: MILITARY and NAVAL SCIENCE.

The following 800 odd titles out of some 11,000 published in 1915 aim to include the most important, not only in the sense of having more or less enduring value, but also because of their popularity, possibly transient, but no less significant, as evidenced by sales or repute. Where choice was necessary, emphasis has been laid on the popular and practical, rather than the scholarly and theoretical. Effort has been made, in other words, to list books of legitimate interest to the stenographer as well as the economist, to the farmer as well as the reader of belles-lettres. The classification adopted is a rough adaptation of the Dewey Decimal classification for books, which is in wide international library and bibliographical use.

THE DICKENS FELLOWSHIP.

THE Dickens Fellowship is a world-wide league of English-speaking men and women whose purpose is to exemplify the teachings of Charles Dickens and to cultivate and diffuse the spirit which pervades his writings—the spirit of innocent festivity and mirth, of religion without bigotry, of charity without coldness, of universal philanthropy and human kinship. The society began its existence in London in October, 1902. The object and aims of the Fellowship are:

"To knit together in a common bond of friendship lovers of that great master of humor and pathos, Charles Dickens. To spread the love of humanity, which is the keynote of all his work. To take such measures as may be expedient to remedy or ameliorate those existing social evils which would have appealed so strongly to the heart of Charles Dickens, and to help in every possible direction the cause of the poor and the oppressed. To assist in the preservation and purchase of buildings and objects associated with his name and mentioned in his works. To do all such things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects or any of them."

The House is open to all, without restriction as to class, creed or nationality. Headquarters, Whitehall House, 30 Charing Cross, London. Secretary, T. W. Hill. Branches of the fellowship have been formed not only throughout Great Britain but in the United States and Canada, India, Australia, and New Zealand. There are probably 24,000,000 copies of Dickens's works extant. The Life Presidents are the two surviving children of Charles Dickens, namely, Henry F. Dickens, K. C., and Mrs. Kate Perugini.

ORDER OF THE BLUE GOOSE.

A National organization of general and special agents of fire insurance companies for social purposes. Each State organization is known as a "State pond" in the United States, and "Provincial pond" in Canada, and the general organization as the "Grand Nest." The following are the National officers: Most Loyal Grand Gander—J. R. Stewart, 15 Wellington Street, E. Toronto, Canada. Grand Supervisor of the Flock—E. G. Carlisle, 124 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill. Grand Custodian of the Goslings—Gus M. Wise, 809 Sharp Building, Kansas City, Mo. Grand Guardian of the Nest—W. J. Sonnen, Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill. Grand Keeper of the Golden Goose Egg—John A. Hanson, Endicott Building, St. Paul, Minn. Grand Wielder of the Goose Quill—B. A. Lehnberg, 1305 First National Bank Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

NATIONAL MODEL LICENSE LEAGUE.

President—T. M. Gilmore, Louisville, Ky. Vice-President—George G. Brown, Louisville, Ky. Treasurer—J. B. Wathen, Jr., Louisville, Ky. Secretary—G. R. Washburne, Louisville, Ky. Chairman Executive Committee—I. W. Bernheim, Louisville, Ky. Chairman Model Law Committee—A. C. Van Winkle, Louisville, Ky.

The purpose of the organization is to conduct a National educational campaign in favor of legislation intended to take the liquor question out of politics and to put law-breakers out of the liquor business. It advocates limitation of licenses in proportion to population, thus preventing undue competition; mandatory penalties suspending and cancelling licenses of law-breakers; moderate license fees enabling the license holder to make a legitimate profit, and the renewal of a license so long as the holder obeys the law, and so long as the business is not outlawed by vote of the people, thereby relieving the liquor dealer of the domination of politicians.

The league's legislative plan has been adopted as a whole by Indiana and Ohio, and in part by Texas, Arkansas, Michigan, Louisiana, and Connecticut. The league was organized in October, 1907. Its membership includes numerous professional and business men. Office, Commercial Building, Louisville, Ky.

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.
THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

The University of the State of New York, governed by the Board of Regents, established and incorporated in 1784, includes in its constituent membership all public schools of the State and, as institutions in the university, all secondary and higher educational institutions incorporated in the State and such libraries, museums, institutions, schools, organizations and agencies for education as may be admitted to or incorporated by the university. The President of the university is also the Commissioner of Education, the chief executive officer of the entire State educational system. The assistant Commissioners are Augustus S. Downing for higher, Charles F. Wheelock for secondary and Thomas E. Finegan for elementary education. The State Library, James I. Wyer, Jr., director, and the State Museum, John M. Clarke, director, are departments of the university.

THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

The Disciples of Christ as a religious movement began to develop early in the nineteenth century. Among the Protestant bodies of America they rank fifth in number, having a membership of 1,375,000, with 9,000 churches and 6,000 ministers. Their strength is greatest in the Ohio and Mississippi Valley States. Their aim is to occupy a catholic position common to all Christian bodies. They seek to unite all followers of Christ by a return to the common faith and practice of the apostolic church. Their local churches are congregational in polity; their organized co-operative work embodies the following organizations:

A General Convention consisting of delegates from the churches meets annually in October. Its object is to promote unity, economy and efficiency among the philanthropic organizations of the Churches of Christ, promote equitable representation and secure closer co-operation. Its powers are advisory. There are also annual conventions in the various States. Dr. W. F. Richardson, Kansas City, Mo., is President, and Rev. Robert Graham Frank, Liberty, Mo., is Secretary.

The American Christian Missionary Society was organized in 1849, has headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio, and operates in all North America. It has departmental work for Sunday schools, Social Service, Rural Church, Immigrants and Foreign Relations. F. W. Burnham is President, Grant K. Lewis, Secretary, and Robert M. Hopkins, Bible School Secretary.

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions was organized in 1874, and has headquarters in the College of Missions Building, Indianapolis, Ind. This board has charge of the women's work and has missions both in the home and foreign lands. Mrs. Anna R. Atwater is the President and Mrs. Effie L. Cunningham, Mrs. J. McDaniel Stearns and Mrs. Ellie K. Payne are Secretaries.

The Foreign Christian Missionary Society was organized in 1875, and has headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio. It is engaged exclusively in the work of foreign missions. A. McLean is the President, and F. M. Rains, Stephen J. Corey and R. A. Doan are Secretaries.

The Board of Church Extension was organized in 1888, and has headquarters in the New England Building, Kansas City, Mo. This board is engaged exclusively in the erection of church buildings. G. W. Muckley and John H. Booth are Secretaries.

The National Benevolent Association was organized in St. Louis in 1887, where it has headquarters. It cares for orphans and widows and provides homes for the aged and infirm. It conducts hospitals in Valparaiso, Ind., and at Kansas City, Mo. It manages homes for the aged in Jacksonville, Ill.; East Aurora, N. Y.; Walla Walla, Wash., and Dallas, Tex. It conducts homes and institutions for children at St. Louis, Mo.; Cleveland, Ohio; Dallas, Tex.; Atlanta, Ga.; Denver, Col., and Omaha, Neb. J. W. Perry of Kansas City, Mo., is President; Lee W. Grant of St. Louis, Mo., Treasurer, and James H. Mohorter, St. Louis, Mo., General Secretary.

The Board of Ministerial Relief was organized in 1895, and provides pensions for ministers and missionaries, aged or disabled in the service of God, and for their widows and orphans. Its headquarters is at 120 East Market Street, Indianapolis, Ind. A. L. Orcutt is President, and W. R. Warren, Secretary.

The American Temperance Board was organized in 1910, and has headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind. Its business is to promote the temperance cause, including prohibition. Its President is David H. Shields, Kokomo, Ind., and its Secretary is L. E. Sellers, Box 501, Indianapolis.

The Commission on Christian Union was organized in 1910, and Dr. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore, Md., has been the only President. This organization is for the promotion of Christian union throughout the world. With other similar bodies the commission is helping to plan for a world conference on unity.

The Board of Education was organized in 1914. It has headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind. It consists of the executive head of twenty-six institutions of learning among the Disciples of Christ. Dr. R. H. Crossfield, Lexington, Ky., is President, and Charles E. Underwood, 70 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., is Secretary.

All the institutions just referred to, missionary, educational and benevolent, are related to the Men and Millions Movement, a holding corporation for the purpose of promoting a special work of extension among the Disciples of Christ. This Men and Millions Movement has headquarters at 222 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. Its purpose is to raise in five years, over and above the regular income of these societies, $6,300,000 for enlargement, 1,000 new missionaries at home and abroad, and to place the income to the several missionary and philanthropic enterprises upon a regular systematic basis by promoting the budget system and the every-member canvass. This movement is directed by its Secretaries, A. E. Cory and R. H. Miller. The total income of these missionary societies last year was $1,503,716.

ACADEMIC DRESS.

Academic dress, the acknowledged badge of the scholar, is now worn by the majority of universities and colleges in this country. Mr. G. C. Leonard, Director of the Intercollegiate Bureau of Academic Costume at Albany, N. Y., adapted the gowns, hoods, and caps now used in America from the English styles, to a system formulated by an Intercollegiate Commission, whereby the exact degree of each wearer may be determined. This code has been officially recognized by over six hundred institutions and the bureau is now chartered by the University of the State of New York.

There are three distinct types of gowns and hoods—the bachelor's, the master's, and the doctor's. The bachelor's gown is most commonly worn and has long pointed sleeves; the master's gown has long closed sleeves with a slit through which the forearm protrudes; the doctor's gown has velvet bars on round open sleeves and velvet facings down the front. Caps worn with such gowns are the regulation mortar boards with black silk tassels. Doctors may wear gold tassels on caps.

The hoods are separate from the gowns, hanging down the back from colored velvet bands across the throat. They indicate the degrees by the size of the hoods and their velvet trimmings and show the institutions granting the degrees by the college colors in distinctive arrangements in the exposed linings of the hoods. The velvet trimmings are two inches wide on the bachelor hoods, three inches wide on masters' hoods, four and a half inches on doctors' hoods. The doctors' hoods are also widened by panels edged with cording of the college colors. The colored velvet trimmings indicate degrees as follows:

White, Arts and Letters; scarlet, Theology; purple, Law; gold-yellow, Science; brown, Fine Arts; pink, Music; orange, Engineering; olive, Pharmacy; maize, Agriculture; black, Dentistry; gray, Veterinary Science; russet, Forestry; lemon, Library Science; light blue, Pedagogy; silver-gray, Oratory; drab, Commerce and Accountancy; sage-green, Physical Education; crimson, Humanities; copper, Economics.

THE GARY SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The Gary or Wirt system is so new that it is not mentioned in the latest published encyclopedia, bearing date 1915. It is also known as the "duplicate school system" and as the "work-study-and-play plan." The latter phrase is the one used by Mr. Wirt in his latest written statement, made a few weeks ago, and also in several addresses. Some students of education wonder why, since schools and all other institutions of learning are universally believed to be for study primarily, work is placed first in the combination, and believe that the true order should be "study, play and work." In an official report dated July 30, 1914, Mr. Wirt used the expressions "a study, work and play school," "study, work and play programme," and "a successful study, work and play school."

The system was devised by William Wirt, School Superintendent of Gary, a city in Indiana, about 30 miles from Chicago, where is the main plant of the United States Steel Corporation. Gary has a population of about 30,000, and the number of school children is about 5,000. The central principle is that two schools shall occupy the same building, each a counterpart of the other, using alternately the classrooms, shops, gymnasium, auditorium, library, etc. By making the total capacity of the shops, gymnasium, playground, etc., equal to that of the classrooms, and by lengthening the school day, one school outfit is made to accommodate two duplicate schools. The school day is from 8.30 to 5, and the school buildings are in use on Saturday for children who wish to go, and on Sunday for private organizations engaged in social service. The Wirt idea is to use all the school facilities of the community all the time, by not having all the children doing the same things at the same time. The school auditoriums are used not for assembling the entire school for perhaps 15 minutes a day, but for various activities three hours a day; children also use the public library systematically, under the direction of teachers, and they have the privilege of going one hour a day to their respective churches for religious instruction. Special emphasis is laid on work in shops, and nature study, botany, physics, chemistry, bacteriology, electricity, etc., are taught in laboratories.

Mr. Wirt claims that there is great enrichment of the curriculum through the provision of the laboratories, music and art studios, swimming pools, and the enlarged opportunities for vocational training. He also claims that the quality of instruction is raised by departmentalizing the work throughout all the grades of the elementary school. A teacher having special aptitude for music, drawing, any of the sciences, sewing, shopwork and industrial arts, or domestic science, is assigned to teach that subject to several classes in rotation.

In New York all books and other school supplies are furnished by the city, but in Gary each child pays a yearly book rental, the amount varying with the grades. There is no sharp line of demarcation between the elementary and the high school, both being in the same building and using the same shops, studios, libraries, laboratories and assembly rooms. There is no graduation from the elementary grades into the high school. Evening schools are conducted on a large scale, the enrolment being about 6,000.

To summarize portions of Mr. Wirt's report of July 30, 1914: Two duplicate schools occupy the same classrooms, auditoriums, shops, library and playground, but neither could make more use of these facilities if the other school were not there. Each has much better facilities than it would have in a separate plant of its own. But there are many other advantages. A student may take all of his regular school subjects either in the morning or afternoon. This enables him to go to school half of the day and work the other half either in school shops or outside the school. Pupils in one school may do additional work in the other. The most experienced teachers of one school may have the inexperienced ones in the other assigned as assistants. A large share of initiative and responsibility can thus be given to strong teachers. Since the schools are exact duplicates, the child may choose either one or a part of both. "Since the church may secure its children for religious instruction every hour of the day, regular religious teachers may be employed by the church for its instruction. Private teachers of music, etc., may secure their pupils at any hour and organize their classes as a part of the school programme. It should be specially emphasized that there is no desire to double the capacity of school plants as a part-time proposition."

An experienced and fair-minded educator who recently visited Gary reports that educational traditions, text-books and established courses of study are thrown to the winds, because they may not appeal to the boys and girls; that the theory is to give the child what he prefers and not to force upon him methods to which he may object; that the keynote of the Wirt system is to allow the child to study those things which he likes to learn in the manner in which he likes to learn them; that the use of formal text-books is discouraged; that, while the usual conception of the Gary schools is that they are designed primarily for vocational and practical training. Mr. Wirt denies that this is the true aim of his course of study; and that he begins manual training in the lower grades and attempts to give to this course a real practical value in that he expects the pupils in the shops to manufacture the things they actually need in the school.

The Gary system has been introduced in New York in the last year. It is in operation in Public School 45, the Bronx, and to some extent in Public School 29, Brooklyn. The Board of Education has authorized it in twelve other schools in the Bronx. It is still in an experimental stage. It remains to be seen whether a plan which has apparently been successful in a small city in the Middle West, with an unusually homogeneous population, as most of the school children belong to families of those employed in the steel mills, is adapted to a large cosmopolitan city, with very different conditions and a mixed population of all nationalities. In particular, opposition has developed to the religious feature. This, however, is claimed to be wholly voluntary, according to the wishes of the children and especially their parents. The careless freedom of the pupils, so at variance with the traditional ideas of discipline, is also a subject of criticism. Some parents, it is stated on seemingly good authority, are greatly dissatisfied with the progress their children are making in the Garyized schools. On the other side, it is asserted that proper facilities have not yet been provided in these schools, and that the system has not had a fair trial.

Nevertheless the financial authorities of the city manifest a disposition to compel the New York Board of Education to adopt it on a wide scale; the Board of Estimate and Apportionment has appropriated for educational purposes for this year no more than was allowed last year, despite the inevitable increase in school attendance (estimated at 30,000), and Superintendent Wirt, who was employed last year as a "special adviser" to the Board of Education—receiving for his services as an expert $10,000 while giving one week per month to New York—is carried in the 1916 budget, at the same salary, as "educational consultant" for the Board of Estimate.

Conservative educators believe that before a city-wide adoption of the Gary system the present experiments and those authorized by the Board of Education should be thoroughly tried out and scientifically evaluated, so as to secure "a final judgment uncolored by the extravagant promises of ardent admirers and by the dark prophecies of bitter opponents."

HONORARY AND MISCELLANEOUS FRATERNITIES.

United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa—The Phi Beta Kappa Society was founded at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., December 5, 1776, and now consists of 86 chapters located in as many of the leading colleges and universities in the land. The total living membership is about 30,500—22,500 men and 8,000 women. Until 1883 the growth of the society was comparatively slow, but since the organization of the United Chapters the development has been rapid, many chapters having been organized. Women were first admitted in 1875, and the first charter to a woman's college, Vassar, was granted in 1898. Smith, Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke and Goucher College of Baltimore, and Radcliffe, have since received charters. The first woman to be honored by election to the Senate was President Mary E. Woolley of Mt. Holyoke College. The present officers are: President—Prof. Edwin A. Grosvenor, LL. D., Amherst, Mass. Vice President—Dean Edward A. Birge, Madison, Wis. Secretary—Rev. Oscar M. Voorhees, D. D., 350 East 146th Street, New York City. Treasurer—David Layton, M. S., New York, N. Y. "The Phi Beta Kappa Key" is the official publication of the United Chapters, which was authorized by the tenth National Council. The society is growing rapidly, many new members being received each year. The eleventh National Council of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa was held at the College of the City of New York on September 10, 1913, at which time the revived chapter at the University of Alabama received recognition and eight new chapters were granted. The twelfth triennial Council will be held in September, 1916. President Woodrow Wilson is a Phi Beta Kappa man, as are his predecessors, William H. Taft and Theodore Roosevelt. Presidents Lowell of Harvard, Hadley of Yale, and Hibben of Princeton are members, as is Associate Justice Charles E. Hughes of the United States Supreme Court.

Sigma Xi—An honorary scientific society founded at Cornell University in 1886, and having twenty odd chapters in the principal colleges and universities of the country. It is not secret. The performance of creditable scientific research in the natural and applied sciences, together with a high standard of scholarship, constitutes the basis of membership. Women are admitted as well as men.

Sigma Tau—An honorary engineering fraternity for Juniors and seniors with three requirements, viz., scholarship, practicality and sociability. It was founded February 22, 1904, at University of Nebraska and now has 551 members and ten chapters. Prof. F. A. Wirt of Manhattan, Kan., is National Secretary.

Tau Beta Pi—An engineering honorary society founded at Lehigh University in 1885. It now has 30 chapters and about 6,500 members. R. C. Matthews, University of Tennessee, at Knoxville, is the National Secretary and Treasurer.

Alpha Omega Alpha—An honorary medical society in which scholarship is the membership qualification, and which admits women on the same basis as men. It was founded by Dr. William W. Root at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago, in 1902. It now has 19 chapters and 1,800 members. Dr. William W. Root, Slaterville Springs, N. Y., is the National Secretary.

Acacia Fraternity—An intercollegiate organization and fraternity for Master Masons founded at the University of Michigan in 1904, now has a membership of 3,274 and 24 active chapters. The National Secretary is Harry E. Kilmer, Centerville, Mo.

Phi Mu Sigma National Sunday School Fraternity—This society has 824 members and 32 active chapters. It was founded in Washington, D. C., in 1908. Supreme Master—Clifton P. Clark, M. C.; National Secretary—Willis W. Warren, Washington, D. C.

Theta Nu Epsilon—Is the only national Greek letter inter-fraternal society. It was founded at Wesleyan University in 1870, and was reorganized in 1907. The society is incorporated under New York laws and is represented in fifty-three colleges and universities of the United States, the membership being 18,397. J. W. S. Mass, 2 Rector Street, New York City, is President and the National Secretary is Walter Erlenkötter, New York City.

The professional fraternities now number over 50, with a membership exceeding 40,000. They are located in both technical and professional schools. With the exception of Theta Xi (Engineering-Scientific), members of professional fraternities may also belong to the general college fraternities.

Local or "one-college" fraternities exist in nearly all colleges, and some date back as early as 1825. There are about 75, with a membership approximating 10,000. The women's local fraternities number about 50, with a total membership of about 5,000.

BENEFACTIONS OF 1915.

The benefactions during 1915 amounted to about $512,000,000. Gifts of donors under $10,000 are not included in the following list.

A woman resident of New Zealand offered one of the most valuable mining properties of that island, containing, experts estimated at, $75,000,000 worth of tungsten ore, as a free gift to the Government, the proceeds to be used in caring for disabled soldiers.

Peter A. B. Widener of Philadelphia directed in his will that his bronzes, paintings, tapestries, books, etc., valued at $12,000,000, be given to New York, Philadelphia, and Washington.

Henry Ford added $9,000,000 to his previous gift of $1,000,000 for world peace and anti-preparedness. He also gave $10,000 to the Canadian Red Cross. Mrs. Ford sent a check for $10,000 to Miss Jane Addams to be used in instituting a National woman's movement tending to a "just" settlement of the European war.

Andrew Freedman of New York left $6,000,000 to charity. One-half of this goes for the Andrew Freedman Home for Aged Men and Women.

Over $5,000,000 of the war profits of the Krupp gun works, it was announced, would be distributed for the relief of soldiers' families. $925,000 was also to go to the general relief fund.

Oberlin College of Ohio came in for $3,000,000 on the death of Charles M. Hall, head of the Aluminum Company of America, who left the bulk of his $5,000,000 estate to charity. The bequest was in the form of a $200,000 cash endowment to be used for any purpose, $500,000 to build a new auditorium, $100,000 for the auditorium's maintenance, $200,000 for campus improvement, all property in Oberlin owned by Hall, and an art collection valued at over $100,000. Other institutions throughout the country were left large sums.

The Gaekwar of Baroda contributed $4,160,000 to provide aeroplanes for use on the British front. He also purchased the steamship Empress of India as a hospital ship for Indian troops.

Charles E. Ellis, the Philadelphia traction magnate, provided on his death $4,000,000 for a school for fatherless girls to be erected at a cost of $1,000,000, and the remainder to go toward its maintenance.

The residue of the $4,000,000 estate of Joan A. Finch of Spokane, Wash., estimated at about $3,258,000, went to charitable institutions.

ELLEN WILSON MEMORIAL HOMES.

By an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1915, George Foster Peabody, Hugh C. Wallace Arthur Jeffrey Parsons, Walter S. Ufford, Archibald Hopkins, Julia C. Lathrop, Grace V. Bicknell, and Charlotte Everett Hopkins their associates and successors, were created a body corporate and politic in the District of Columbia, by the name, title, and style of the Ellen Wilson Memorial Homes, to acquire, hold, improve, rent, mortgage, sell, and convey real estate within the District of Columbia for building, in memory of the late Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, one or more blocks of sanitary houses for the working classes, and renting the same at a rental sufficiently low to cause the abandonment of dilapidated and insanitary houses, as an object lesson in the housing of the working classes under good conditions and at reasonable rates: Provided, That the value of any and all property so acquired shall not exceed the sum of $500,000; Provided further, That no land shall be acquired or house built thereon except of the character hereinbefore described.

Sec. 2. That the capital stock of said corporation shall be $25,000, divided into two hundred and fifty shares of the par value of $100 each, and when said amount shall have been subscribed the said corporation shall be fully authorized and empowered to commence business: Provided, That said capital stock may be increased by the sale of additional stock from time to time, but the total issue thereof shall not exceed the sum of $500,000. Provided further, That it shall be unlawful for the officers or directors of said corporation to declare any greater dividend to the stockholders than five per centum per annum upon the capital stock outstanding at the time of such dividend.

Sec. 3. That the affairs of the corporation shall be managed by a board of directors consisting of fifteen persons, who shall for the first year be elected by the incorporators, hereinbefore named, and thereafter said board shall be elected annually in such manner as may be provided by the by-laws of the corporation, and such board of directors shall have power to ordain, establish, and put into execution such rules, regulations, ordinances, and by-laws as they may deem essential for the good government of the corporation, not contrary to the laws and the Constitution of the United States or of this act, and generally to do and perform all acts, matters, and things which a corporation may or can lawfully do.

Sec. 4. That Congress reserves the right to repeal, alter, or amend this act.

OCCUPATIONS OF COLLEGE GRADUATES.

The United States Bureau of Education in May, 1913, made public statistics showing the occupations of college graduates, from 1642 to 1900, from returns furnished by thirty-seven colleges and universities. Taking three periods a century apart gave these percentages:

UNIVERSITY FORUM OF AMERICA.

An educational institution of travelling professorships of eminent men of action, and original investigators, whose lectures are based on personal experience and observation. The lectures are delivered before the leading universities, colleges and other educational bodies throughout North America, Europe, and in other parts of the world.

The forum acts as a standing committee, a bureau of information, a clearing-house, through which universities and colleges may promptly and readily secure National leaders to speak at first-hand and authoritatively concerning their particular line of life-work and activity.

Headquarters, 550 West 113th Street, New York.

THE DAILY FOOD ALLIANCE OF AMERICA.

The alliance advocates pure food, full weight and measure and sanitation. The officers of the New York organization are: President—Mrs. Charles D.

Hirst. Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Nelson Worden, 704 West End Avenue, New York City. Treasurer—Mrs. Clarence N. Titterington.

NATIONAL AMERICANIZATION COMMITTEE.

The National Americanization Committee is a body of fifty-six American citizens who believe that Americanization—a deeper, broader sense of nationalization—is the need of the hour, and that it should be a nation-wide movement in every hamlet in America. They are dominated solely by the dream of a United America; no other power or motives determine their policies, methods or plans, and they are willing to give their time, thought, effort, and resources—in money, association, and power—to the end that the many races in America may become one nation in spirit and achievement.

They believe that American-born citizens need Americanization in increased respect for the flag, in renewed allegiance to America, in patriotic use of holidays, in the discipline and loyalty of citizens' training camps, in the abolition of race prejudice, and in the full recognition of foreign-born citizens as a civic as well as an industrial factor in American civilization.

They believe that the foreign-born peoples within our land owe to America the duties of learning our national language, of becoming literate, of becoming naturalized, and of becoming thrifty and efficient citizens and of loyally supporting the best ideals and traditions, the government and institutions of America, in exchange for the rights America guarantees to all residents alike in this country.

They believe that American and foreign-born alike should join hands to assure to each alien within our borders the opportunity to learn English, become literate, and to provide facilities for preparation for citizenship.

Chairman—Frank Trumbull. First Vice-Chairman—Percy R. Pyne, 2d. Second Vice-Chairman—Mrs. Edward Stotesbury. Third Vice-Chairman—William Sproule. Treasurer—Wm. Fellows Moran. Executive Committee—Mrs. Vincent Astor, Frances Kellor, Peter Roberts, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Felix M. Warburg. Headquarters, 18 West Thirty-fourth Street, New York City.

THE PALISADES INTERSTATE PARK.

THE State of New York possesses several forest reservations and also several parks. One, the Niagara Reservation, comprises the land about the great cataract, purchased at a cost of $1,000,000. The State Forest Preserve, on October 1, 1914, contained 1,609,113 acres. There are also Letchworth Park, about the falls of the Genesee River; John Boyd Thacher Park, about the Indian Ladder in Albany County; Islands in the St. Lawrence River, and the Saratoga Springs Reservation. The assessed valuation put upon the Forest Preserve lands of the State was $4,532,505.

Lastly, there is the Palisades Interstate Park, partly in the State of New Jersey and partly in the State of New York, extending along the Hudson River in its Palisades region, and extending north so as to include Bear Mountain. The development of this park to its present great dimensions began in 1910, when Mary D. Harriman, widow of the late Edward H. Harriman, informed Governor Hughes of New York that, following the wishes of her husband, she was willing to convey 10,000 acres of land in the counties of Orange and Rockland to be used as a park and also give $1,000,000 toward the park project.

The Palisades Park Commission had the same year collected $1,625,000 for the same purpose. Previously the commission had acquired by gift of land and of money to the amount of $300,000, a contribution of $400,000 from the State of New York, and $50,000 from the State of New Jersey, the face of the Palisades from Piermont to Fort Lee. It was also proposed in 1910 that the State of New York should appropriate $2,500,000 for a further purchase of land for the Palisades Interstate Park. Subsequently, in 1910, this proposal was ratified by the voters, and consequently the Palisades Interstate Park, which will cost nearly $6,000,000, was authorized.

The Commissioners of the Palisades Interstate Park since 1910 have been busily engaged in developing the park. The State of New York is preparing to build the last end of Route 3, north of the New Jersey State line, so that ultimately there will be a State highway from the State boundary line of New Jersey and New York along the west shore of the Hudson River north to Newburgh. The Commissioners have also co-operated with the State of New York and Orange County, New York, in securing the construction of Route 3 of the New York State highway system along the Hudson River through the United States Reservation at West Point and around Storm King Mountain. The park roads, when built, are to connect with the main State highways of New York and New Jersey. There is a "Henry Hudson Drive" under the Palisades and a road from Bear Mountain on the Hudson River to Southfields, both of which are on park properties. The commission is advancing the Englewood approach to the Henry Hudson Drive. The drive, when completed, will be located under the Palisades in the State of New Jersey, with a number of approaches or spurs connecting the drive with the roads on top of the cliff.

A camp has been established at Blauvelt for the use of working girls, which is used by girls of all nationalities and religious denominations. A large number of people in 1915 used the portion of Palisades Park at Bear Mountain, which is located on the west shore of the Hudson River about forty-five miles from New York. This property was originally bought by the State of New York for a prison site and abandoned as such in 1910, and was then transferred to the Palisades Park Commission for park purposes. The commission arranged for a day-boat service to Bear Mountain in the Summer of 1914 and 1915. A large number of excursions visited Bear Mountain and also the picnic groves under the Palisades. The camp privileges granted by the commission in 1914 proved very popular, a large number of people camping near Bear Mountain and at Car Pond in the Harriman lands. At Bear Mountain a playground has been completed, having an area of more than ten acres. There have been placed at Bear Mountain fifty picnic tables, 300 park benches, and 300 chairs. In 1913 the New York College of Forestry at Syracuse University offered to co-operate with the Palisades Interstate Park Commission in making a preliminary study and plan of management for the forest land within the park. This offer was accepted and the work has since been in progress.

By steamboat from New York City, 114,691 persons visited Bear Mountain from June 14 to September 7, 1914. In addition to the regular boat service many excursions were run to Bear Mountain, one company alone transporting 15,445 excursionists during the season. There were also excursions by Sunday-schools, civic associations and societies. A large proportion of the excursions came from New York City. In addition the Palisades Park Commissioners were able to arrange with the West Shore Railroad Company that four north-bound and three south-bound accommodation trains should stop at the park.

The Boy Scouts in 1915 camped on one of the lakes of the park to the number of 5,000, camping in troops of from 300 to 500 every fortnight. In the park about Bear Mountain hundreds of white tents afforded shelter to campers from New York City.

Blauvelt, in 1914, was further used as a Summer camp for working girls, regardless of nationality or religious denomination. A military organization was created of four companies. The Captains were taken from among the counsellors—college girls who gave their services. A trained nurse was in attendance throughout the season. There were 1,130 girls in the camp, divided as follows: Store girls and saleswomen, 54; factory workers, 198; seamstresses, 65; domestic workers, 44; children's nurses, 21; school girls, 182; teachers, 37; stenographers, bookkeepers, typists, and office workers, 334; Y. W. C. A. secretaries, 10; no occupation given, 185.

The Palisades Park Commission now owns 18,000 acres and have under condemnation 4,390 acres.

Eleven miles of the Palisades are within a few miles of the largest cities of New York and New Jersey.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT.

This association is a purely patriotic and in no sense a partisan society. It has been formed in the conviction that the opposition recently manifested in so many ways to the institutions of representative government established by the Constitution of the United States is the result in part of ignorance of the significance and value of the constitutional guarantees, and in the equally firm conviction that unlimited experiment in social legislation is a menace not only to these institutions and these guarantees, but to the permanent existence of real self-government. The primary aim of the association is to preserve these institutions and these guarantees, first, by explaining their meaning, and, second, by demanding a sufficiently deliberate consideration of proposals of change in the National Constitution to warrant a reasoned acceptance of them before their adoption. Chairman—David Jayne Hill. Treasurer—John Joy Edson. Secretary—Charles Ray Dean. Headquarters, Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

* The French Academy is one of five academies, and the most eminent, constituting the Institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by Cardinal Richelieu, and reorganized in 1816. It is composed of 40 members, elected for life, after personal application and the submission of their nomination to the head of the state. It meets twice weekly, at the Palace Mazarin, 23 Quai Conti, Paris, and is "the highest authority on everything appertaining to the niceties of the French language, to grammar, rhetoric, and poetry, and the publication of the French classics." The chief officer is the Secretary, who has a life tenure of his position. The office is at present vacant. A chair in the Academy is the highest ambition of most literary Frenchmen.

The other academies of the Institute of France are: The Academy of Inscriptions and Belles-Lettres, with 40 members; Academy of Sciences, with 68 members; Academy of Fine Arts, with 40 members, (as follows: Painting, 14; sculpture, 8; architecture, 8; engraving, 4; musical composition, 6), and Academy of Moral and Political Science, with 40 members. All members are elected for life.

AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ARTS AND LETTERS.

THE first seven members of the American Academy of Arts and Letters were selected by the National Institute of Arts and Letters from its own body in 1904 by ballot. The seven were William Dean Howells, Augustus Saint Gaudens, Edmund Clarence Stedman, John La Farge, Samuel L. Clemens, John Hay and Edward MacDowell. In order to become eligible to the American Academy one must first be a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters. This society was organized at a meeting of the American Social Science Association in 1898. The qualification for membership is stated in the Constitution. "It shall be notable achievement in art, music or literature." The number in the institute is limited to 250, and the election is by ballot.

The American Academy of Arts and Letters numbers fifty members, and the officers are William Dean Howells, President; William Milligan Sloane, Chancellor and Treasurer; Robert Underwood Johnson, 52 Vanderbilt Avenue, New York City, Permanent Secretary.

The following are the present members of the academy:

|                            |                            |                        |

ART PROGRESS IN THE UNITED STATES.

BY HENRY TYRRELL.

The past year's development and progress of art in America, in some respects of marked significance, relate principally to three diverse influences: (1) The Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, with its corollary at San Diego; (2) the European war, and (3) the growing resources and broadening educational scope of the country's art museums.

The World's Fair takes first place, because of its magnitude and the comprehensiveness of its various representative offerings. Its overshadowing importance is in line with the traditional fact that such commemorations—the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876, the Columbian Exposition of Chicago, 1892, and the Louisiana Purchase celebration at St. Louis, 1904—have taken their places as historic milestones in the National awakening of art appreciation. They have become more and more a manifestation of beauty, a welding together of practical and ideal, achieved by the co-operation of business men with artists. It is in this sense that the San Francisco fair has achieved its greatest triumph—supplemented by San Diego's special presentation of Spanish Colonial architecture in a way to leave its impress for future time. First and foremost, the whole vast exposition was a pageant of American art—an actual demonstration, in the midst of an international assemblage, of the fact that American architecture, painting, sculpture, and the kindred handicrafts possess the vital urge of original creative energy. The Palace of Fine Arts, the most striking and picturesque of all the buildings on the extensive grounds by the harbor of the Golden Gate, gave up to United States exhibitors fully two-thirds of its 120 "galleries," or more or less spacious rooms. Japan came next, with 10 rooms, Sweden had 8, France 7, Italy 4, Holland 4, China and Portugal 3 each, while Argentina, Uruguay, Cuba and the Philippines had separate accommodations for their respective exhibits. The United States' exhibit was so large as to seem in places indiscriminate, while those of France and Italy were disappointingly meagre, on account of the stress of the times, yet the net result was an all-American Salon, with a sufficient foil of foreign representation. Following the award of prizes and honors by an international jury, the inevitable storm of protest and discussion arose, which even now has not wholly subsided. The main features of the awards were as follows: Grand prizes to Frederick Carl Frieseke for painting, and Henry Wolf for wood engraving. Medals of honor, likewise in the American section, to John W. Alexander (deceased), Cecilia Beaux, Emil Carlsen, Willard Metcalf, Violet Oakley, Richard E. Miller, W. Elmer Schofield, Walter Griffin, and Lawton Parker, for oil paintings; to Lillian Prescott Hale, Laura Combs Hills, Charles H. Woodbury, F. Walter Taylor, Frank Mura, and Henry Muhrmann, for water colors and drawings; to Herbert Adams, Karl Bitter (deceased), and Daniel C. French, for sculpture; and to D. A. Wehrschmidt and C. Harry White, for etching and engraving. Then follows a long and notable list of gold, silver, and bronze medals, special mentions, and the like. Analysis of these awards from any academic or political viewpoint is futile. The great essential fact is that the National art exposition at the fair successfully vied with the triumphs of skill and industry as an expression of creative impulse and energy.

War and art being in their respective natures entirely unrelated to one another, the observable effects of the European armed conflict are not so much upon art itself as upon the business of art. In that relation it is immensely to our benefit. Patronage turns to native artists, and these stay at home to produce their works, as well as to devote attention to the students who in former years went abroad. Foreign artists who would sell to rich Americans must come here, too. And at the same time the historic masterpieces which gave to European art schools their crowning advantage over those of the newer Western world, are more than ever gravitating toward the country of boundless wealth, as one by one the hitherto inviolate private collections are sold and dispersed. The scene of many important art sales hitherto the exclusive prerogative of Paris and London now shifts to New York. A significant move foreshadowing this is seen in the leasing for commercial purposes by prominent firms of international art dealers of the fine and spacious gallery erected by the late Benjamin Altman at the rear of his former residence (originally one of the Vanderbilt mansions), at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street. And this is by no means the only palatial private residence in the same neighborhood now undergoing transformation into art exhibition and sales galleries. This is in response to the imperative demands of the art trade interests and markets shifting simultaneously with the transfer of financial centres from England and the Continent of Europe to busy, "booming" America. Of course this migration of art interests began long before the war actually broke out, but the calamity is accelerating it in an unprecedented degree.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, while not having this year any special accession to show comparable to the Altman collection and the Riggs arms and armor which signaled 1914, is appreciably impressing its influence through the numerous activities organized in its various departments for the extension of its educational work. The Metropolitan jury now supremely implies the principle that an art museum today, no matter how well fortified with patronage and endowments, must work for its living. It must co-operate with the public schools, reach out and help designers in the industrial arts, and through lectures, publications, and special exhibitions keep its members as well as the general public in touch with all movements of the modern art world. This is what the Metropolitan is doing, and at the same time setting a practical example to the now nearly 800 lesser art museums and fine arts societies throughout the country. The schools, on their part, have not been slow to realize that there is something vital in the idea for them. The School Art League, under the direction of Miss Florence N. Levy and Dr. J. P. Haney, has organized in practice an association with the museum that already shows advantageous results to members of the league and pupils of the high school classes; and other departments of the city schools, hitherto unrelated to art teaching, have embraced their opportunities. Manufacturers, shut off by the war from the European sources upon which they formerly depended for new ideas and patterns, now look to home designers, and encourage the latter in the school and museum studies making for original, native creative work. The Metropolitan's new Department of the Art of the East, headed by its curator Mr. S. C. Bosch Rectz, a Hollander, who, after receiving his education as a painter in Munich and Paris, became interested in Eastern art, in his devotion to which he has won a distinguished reputation.

John W. Alexander, distinguished American artist and public-spirited citizen, long President of the National Academy of Design, of the School Art League, and of the MacDowell Club, an active director of the Metropolitan Museum and of the American Federation of Arts, died at his home in New York City on May 31, 1915. In the month of March preceding he had retired from the Presidency of the academy, which elected as his successor J. Alden Weir. Mr. Weir was born in 1852 at West Point, N. Y., where his father, Robert W. Weir, was art instructor at the United States Military Academy. He was a pupil of Gerôme in Paris, and won an honorable mention at the Salon in 1882. Since then he has won many prizes and honors and has been an active member of the National Academy of Design for 35 years. Always a liberal in art, Mr. Weir was one of the originators of the Society of American Artists, and with John Twachtman he helped to form The Ten. He was the first choice for President of the Association of American Painters and Sculptors, followed by Arthur B. Davies, who is now succeeded by Henry Fitch Taylor. He is in full sympathy with the modern movement in art, being admired and looked up to by the artists of all the various groups. As an academician, he is counted upon to carry along the work of Mr. Alexander in securing for the organization a comprehensive exhibition building of its own.

The Art Alliance of America, recently formed by a group of influential New York men and women interested in art and in industrial development, sets forth as its objects: To promote co-operation between artists, art students, artisans, publishers, manufacturers, advertisers, and all others engaged in artistic activities; to aid, direct, and advise art students, artisans and artists in their studies and pursuits; to provide a general registry for the aforesaid, and for employers; and to hold exhibitions.

THE ALFRED B. NOBEL PRIZES.

The Swedish scientist Alfred B. Nobel, the inventor of dynamite, died in 1896, bequeathing his fortune, estimated at $9,000,000, to the founding of a fund the interest of which should yearly be distributed to those who had mostly contributed to "the good of humanity." The interest is divided in five equal shares, given away: "One to the person who in the domain of physics has made the most important discovery or invention, one to the person who has made the most important chemical discovery or invention, one to the person who in literature has provided the most excellent work of medicine or physiology, one to the person who has worked most or best for the fraternization of nations, and the abolition or reduction of standing armies, and the calling in and propagating of peace congresses."

The prizes for physics and chemistry are awarded by the Swedish Academy of Science, that for physiological or medical work by the Caroline Institute (the faculty of medicine in Stockholm), that for literature by the Swedish Academy in Stockholm, and the peace prize is awarded by a committee of five persons, elected by the Norwegian Storting.

In accordance with these statutes the awarders of the prizes (the four above named institutions) elect fifteen deputies for two consecutive years, the Academy of Science electing six and the other prize awarders three each. These deputies elect for two consecutive years four members of the Board of Directors of the Nobel Institute, which board, exclusively consisting of Swedes, must reside in Stockholm. A fifth member, the President of the board, is nominated by the Government. The Board of Directors has in its care the funds of the institution, and hands yearly over to the awarders of the prizes the amount to be given away. The value of each prize is on an average $40,000. The distribution of the prizes takes place every year on December 10, the anniversary of Mr. Nobel's death. Full information can be obtained from "Nobelstiftelsen Styrelse" (the Board of Directors of the Nobel Institute), Stockholm, Sweden.

1914—Chemistry was awarded to Prof. Theodore William Richards, of Harvard University; physics to Prof. Max von Laue of Frankfurt-on-Main.

1915—Physics, Prof. William Henry Bragg of Leeds and his son, Prof. W. L. Bragg of Cambridge; literature, Romain Rolland, French; Hendrik Pontoppidan and Troels Lund, Danes, and Verner von Heidenstam, Swede; chemistry, Dr. Richard Willstätter, of University of Berlin.

For list of awards prior to 1914 see 1914 ALMANAC.

THE COMMISSION OF FINE ARTS.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a permanent Commission of Fine Arts is hereby created to be composed of seven well-qualified judges of the fine arts, who shall be appointed by the President, and shall serve for a period of four years each, and until their successors are appointed and qualified. The President shall have authority to fill all vacancies. It shall be the duty of such commission to advise upon the location of statues, fountains, and monuments in the public squares, streets, and parks in the District of Columbia, and upon the selection of models for statues, fountains, and monuments erected under the authority of the United States and upon the selection of artists for the execution of the same. It shall be the duty of the officers charged by law to determine such questions in each case to call for such advice. The foregoing provisions of this act shall not apply to the Capitol building of the United States and the building of the Library of Congress. The commission shall also advise generally upon questions of art when required to do so by the President or by any committee of either House of Congress.

Sec. 2. That to meet the expenses made necessary by this act an expenditure of not exceeding ten thousand dollars a year is hereby authorized. Approved, May 17, 1910. This act has been supplemented by a number of executive orders by the President, broadening the scope of the commission's functions.

Headquarters, 1729 New York Avenue N. W., Washington, D. C.
Chairman—Charles Moore, Detroit, Mich. Vice-Chairman—Frederick Law Olmsted, Brookline, Mass.; Thomas Hastings, New York City; Cass Gilbert, New York City; Edwin H. Blashfield, New York City; Pierce Anderson, Chicago, Ill.; Herbert Adams, New York City. Secretary and Executive Officer—Col. Wm. W. Harts, U. S. A.

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION.

The State of New York granted a charter to the Rockefeller Foundation in 1913. Principal funds $100,048,000. The incorporators are John D. Rockefeller, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Frederick T. Gates, Harry Pratt Judson, Simon Flexner, Starr J. Murphy, Jerome D. Greene, Wickliffe Rose, and Charles O. Heydt. The officers are: President—John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Secretary—Jerome D. Greene. Treasurer—L. G. Myers. Assistant Treasurer—S. M. Dashiell. Members of the Executive Committee are: John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Jerome D. Greene, Simon Flexner, Starr J. Murphy, Wickliffe Rose. Headquarters, 61 Broadway, New York City.

EDUCATIONAL DRAMATIC LEAGUE.

The Educational Dramatic League was organized in 1913 to give assistance to amateur clubs in churches, settlements, schools, and other organizations and to unrelated groups of young people, in order to bring the work of such clubs to a higher standard of literary and entertainment value, to combine education and self-expression with recreation.

The league is doing this by giving the clubs special advice and aid to meet their individual needs in the selection of good plays, prompt-books, costume-plates, and costumes, and by instructing teachers in the best educational method of producing plays or supplying clubs with competent directors. For the younger children classes have been formed in story-telling and story-playing.

A reference library of plays and general dramatic literature is at the disposal of members.

The league considers the public performance of a play but the smallest part of the work, and that the study of plays furnishes an interesting means of teaching literature, English, diction, bearing, and the correct management of a production.

The league's object is national, and every dramatic club of any kind, whether in New York or elsewhere, is eligible to become a member. Annual dues, $2 and $5.

President—Mrs. August Belmont. Vice-President—Miss Kate Oglebay. Secretary—Miss Rachel Crothers. Treasurer—Mr. James S. Cushman. Executive Secretary—Miss Marion A. Turner. Headquarters, the Tilden Building, 105 West Fortieth Street New York City.

ACTORS' EQUITY ASSOCIATION.

The Actors' Equity Association has for its object equitable arrangement of all business matters pertaining to those who follow the art of acting, and especially pertaining to those who are members of the association. It is a voluntary association, formed to advance, promote, and foster the profession of acting and those engaged therein; to protect and secure the rights of actors; to inform them as to their legal rights and remedies; to procure appropriate legislation in matters affecting their profession; to do such things as shall appear advantageous or refrain from doing such things as shall appear disadvantageous to the profession of acting or to the members of the association.

President—Francis Wilson. Vice-President—Bruce McRae. Corresponding Secretary—Howard Kyle. Treasurer—Richard A. Purdy. Headquarters, 608 Longacre Building, New York City.

MUSIC.

BY MAZIE E. CLEMENS.

The Metropolitan Opera House management provided a revival of "Samson et Dalila," in French, with which to open its ninth season under the direction of Gatti-Casazza, November 15. Special interest was added to the occasion by the fact that Caruso made his first appearance on any stage in the role of Samson. Saint-Saens's work had not been heard at the Metropolitan since 1895, when Tamagno, Mantelli, Campanari and Plancon sang the principal parts. In the latest presentation Caruso, Matzenauer and Amato were the principals. The former was in glorious voice and his acting of the strong man was realistic. The music of Dalila was admirably sung, especially the aria, "Mon Coeur s'ouvre a ta Voix." Amato impressively rendered the music of the High Priest. The orchestra, in the cable hands of Polacco, did full justice to the score, and the chorus was excellent.

Giorgio Polacco conducted "Boris Godunoff," November 16. This Moussorgsky work was effectively given with the familiar cast, excepting Max Elola. It will be remembered that Mr. Polacco conducted this opera once last year and was warmly received by the audience.

Artur Bodanzky, a new conductor who came to this country after winning laurels not only in his own city, Vienna, but in Paris and Petrograd as well, led the season's first German opera, "Goetterdaemmerung," November 17. The performance of the Wagner work was splendid. Mr. Bodanzky happily initiated the reform of shortening the Wagner works. His perfect control of the orchestra and its tonal balance were immediately perceptible. He allowed the voices to be heard clearly, and at no time were the singers deprived of their opportunities.

Another new conductor, Gaetano Bavagnoli, tried his hand with "La Boheme," November 19, and Ida Cajatti, a lyric soprano from Trieste, appeared for the first time here. As Musetta, she displayed an agreeable voice, though it contained too much tremolo, and acted spiritedly. The conductor brought out all the beauties of Puccini's score skillfully. Caruso, as Rodolfo, sang superbly. Others in the cast were Alda, as Mimì; Scotti, as Marcello; Tegan, as Schaunard, and de Segrola, as Coline.

"Der Rosenkavalier," which Mr. Bodanzky reduced in length by half an hour, was given November 20.

"Boris Godunoff" was selected for November 22. Mr. Didur gave his usual strong interpretation of the usurping Czar. Mme. Ober was a beautiful Marina and sang with much charm.

"The Barber of Seville" was revived on the evening of November 25. Rossini's work was well performed, and the three newcomers in leading roles were well received, especially de Luca, as Figaro, and Pompilio Malatesta, as Dr. Bartolo. The former used his rich baritone voice to advantage and found favor, while the latter sang well and gave to his role just enough comedy. Giacomo Damacco, the new tenor, did not come up to expectations as the Count of Almaviva. Frieda Hempel was a pretty Rosina and sang tastefully. Didur, as Basilio, was effective in both his singing and acting. Bavagnoli conducted. In the afternoon "Parsifal" was given, with the same cast as last year, excepting Mr. Weil, who appeared as Amfortas two years ago. Artur Bodanzky skillfully wielded the baton.

The new Bohemian soprano, Erna Zarska, made her bow at the Metropolitan, November 26, in "Lohengrin." Owing to a cold she was unable to sing to advantage. Bodanzky conducted this Wagner work here for the first time. Again there was that refinement of expression shown which marked his other work. Mme. Matzenauer won the honors as Ortrud. She sang with beauty of tone and expression. Mr. Schlegel was the Herald. Urius appeared as Lohengrin.

On November 27 a newcomer, Mme. Edvina, made her debut in "Tosca." Her voice was disappointing. It is a lyric soprano of substantial timbre. Caruso, as Cavaradosi, sang better than at any previous performance since the opening night. Scotti was Scarpia.

Plotow's "Marta," in Italian, was revived at the matinee of December 11, with Miss Hempel as Lady Harriet, Mme. Ober as Nancy, Caruso as Lionel, de Luca as Plunkett and Malatesta as Sir Tristan.

Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" was heard December 1, with the familiar cast. The only new performer was the conductor, Mr. Bodanzky. He gave a remarkable demonstration of his ability, and kept the orchestra well under control and suitable to the utterances of the singers.

The standard repertory, presented in French, English, Italian and German, will be increased by interesting novelties. For the first time on a New York stage a Spanish grand opera will be sung in the Spanish language—"Goyescas," the libretto by Fernando Periquet, the music by Enrique Granados. The composer will be present at the premiere of this work. In addition, a new singer, Maria Barrientos, the Spanish coloratura, who arrives in January, will sing in this opera. Because of the interest shown in Russian opera, the management expects to produce Borodine's "Prince Igor," a work of the Slavic school which was scheduled for production last year. Plans also include additional novelties and revivals, among them Bizet's "Les Pêcheurs de Perles," "Lucia," and perhaps "Rigoletto," "Marta" and "La Sonnambula." The management arranged for bringing to America Mr. Serge Diaghileff's Ballet Russe Company, which in the last four weeks of the season will give a varied programme. The Metropolitan has also obtained the exclusive rights for "La Chute de la Maison Usher," "Le Diable dans le Bassin" and "La Légende de Tristan," all by Claude Debussy. The company includes four new sopranos, a baritone, a basso, a stage manager and two conductors. The sopranos are Maria Barrientos, who has sung at La Scala, Covent Garden, Buenos Ayres, Warsaw, Madrid and Paris; Edith Mason, an American lyric soprano who has been a member of the opera at Nice, Marseilles and of the Paris Opera Comique; Helen Warrum, an American lyric soprano formerly with the Chicago Opera Company; Julia Heinrich, who has been singing here in concert and was formerly a member of the Hamburg opera. The baritone is Giuseppe de Luca, first baritone of La Scala and of the leading opera houses in Rome, Naples, Lisbon, Petrograd, Buenos Ayres and Covent Garden.

A large audience applauded the world-premiere of Umberto Giordano's (1863) new opera, "Madame Sans-Gene," on January 25. Its libretto is by Renati Simoni and is founded on the play by Victorien Sardou and E. Moreau, which tells of the progress of the washerwoman, Caterina Huebscher, known in her surroundings in Paris as "Mme. Sans-Gene." She has among her patrons Lieut. Bonaparte, who owes an unpaid bill.

In an attack upon the Tuileries during the Revolution, Count Neipperg, a wounded Royalist, enters her shop and asks for protection. She binds his wounds and hides him in her room.

Mme. Sans-Gene marries her village suitor, Tefebre, and nineteen years later, on the elevation of her husband's rank in station and fortune, she becomes the Duchess of Dantzic and her husband a Marshal of France. It is evident from her conduct at court receptions that Mme. Sans-Gene still retains her laundry atmosphere in spite of her court surroundings. Her husband tells her that her language and manners are laughed at behind her back and that Napoleon has suggested a divorce. An affectionate scene between the couple follows.

Neipperg remains a steadfast friend to the Duchess and her husband, but because of his affection for Empress Marie-Louise he has incurred the displeasure of Napoleon. He is ordered to be banished. Meanwhile the Duchess is summoned before the Emperor because of her conduct at a social function in her own apartment. Mme. Sans-Gene, however, presents the Emperor with his unpaid laundry bill and wins his sympathy by a tale of her service in the armies of France as a vivandiere. Neipperg enters at this time on his way to the apartments of the Empress. Napoleon has him seized. In the last act the Count is condemned to death. Caterina plans his rescue. She tells the Empress that Neipperg is awaiting at the door. Marie-Louise hands out a package of letters which Napoleon takes and finds that they contain an appeal to his wife's father to keep the Count in Vienna and thereby prevent his annoying her. Napoleon, satisfied of Marie-Louise's fidelity, releases the Count and thanks Caterina for her share in the happy outcome of the whole affair.

The music is oftentimes tuneful, the "Car-magnole" and "Ca ira" being especially so.

Geraldine Farrar as the heroine has rarely sung more beautifully, and she did full justice, by her able acting, to the role of Mme. Sans-Gene. Mr. Martinelli did the best work since his arrival in New York, as Lefebvre. His voice gains in quality and his acting is expressive. Amato was excellent as Napoleon, both in singing the music and in his characterization of the Emperor. De Segurola was Fouché and Paul Althouse was Neipperg. The entire performance was artistically staged, and Toscanini conducted.

The "Ring" cycle of the season was begun on January 28. Of the new singers who had not been heard before in "Das Rheingold," Mr. Sembach stood out for his admirable interpretation of the difficult part of Loge. Arthur Middleton and Paul Althouse were new in the roles of Donner and Froh respectively, and came up to all expectation. Carl Braun's Wotan and Albert Reiss's Mime were both excellent performances. "Die Walkure" was heard February 4. Interest centered in the new Brünnhilde of the German soprano, Mme. Kurt. She rendered the Valkyries' cry with perfect ease. "Die Götterdämmerung," on February 18 brought the "Nibelungen Ring" cycle to a close. Special mention should be made of the splendid Waltraute of Margarete Ober.

For the first time in two years Emmy Destinn had the role of Elsa in "Lohengrin," January 7. She was in good voice and sang excellently. Basil Ruysdael was the King and Jacques Urius had the title part.

The management brought out an admirable revival of Beethoven's "Fidelio" on January 30. It first came to New York in English away back in 1839. Several years ago Gustav Mahler, who had previously revived it in Vienna, produced it at the Metropolitan. At that time Berta Morena was Leonora. On the present occasion Mme. Matzenauer was the Leonora. Her singing and acting were beautifully done. In the scene with Florestan she was especially sincere and handled the music exceptionally well. Mr. Urius was Florestan, Mr. Braun was Rocco, and Mme. Schumann was Marcelline. All were in excellent voice.

The first production in this country of the one-act opera "L'Oracolo," by Franco Leon, libretto by Camillo Zanon, took place on February 4. The work is founded on Chester B. Fernald's "The Cat and the Cherub," a story of the Chinese quarter of San Francisco before the fire. The story opens at 5 A. M. on the Chinese New Year's Day and concerns Chim-Fen, proprietor of an opium den in "Hatchet Row," who tries to win Ah-Yoe, niece of his neighbor, Hoo-Tsin, a rich merchant, for his wife. Ah-Yoe loves Win-San-Luy, son of the sage, Win-Shee. Chim-Fen kidnaps Hoo-Tsin's baby son, Hop-Chee, and hides him in a cellar. Win-San-Luy, who finds out where the child is concealed, tries to rescue it, but Chim-Fen kills him with a hatchet. Win-Shee suspects Chim-Fen of being the kidnapper, and hearing a child's cry dashes into the opium den and succeeds in carrying off the infant to Hoo-Tsin's house. On returning, Win-Shee goes up to the den proprietor and in vengeance kills him with the plunge of a knife into his back and supplements it by strangling him with his queue. As a policeman passes by, Win-Shee, who has propped the dead man up in sitting posture, pretends to be in earnest conversation. When the custodian of the law has passed, Win-Shee departs, followed by the falling of the corpse's body heavily to the ground. The music, though lacking in originality, is melodious and well constructed and contains much Oriental color. The author, Leon, who is an Italian, living in England, also wrote "La Tsigane" and "Francesca da Rimini." Antonio Scotti gave a skilful characterization of the keeper of the opium den, a part in which he appeared ten years ago in London. Win-Shee was splendidly sung by Adamo Didur. Miss Bori charmingly rendered the music allotted to her as Ah-Yoe, particularly her song from the balcony. Luca Botta displayed effective singing as Win-San-Luy. Mr. Polacco tastefully read the score. He also conducted "Pagliacci," which followed, and which, in addition to having Caruso, had a new Tonio in Adamo Didur. This was the first time that this artist gave the "Pagliacci" prologue. Destinn was Nedda and Tegani was Silvio.

Mme. Melanie Kurt made her American debut February 4 at the Metropolitan as Isolde in the great music drama "Tristan und Isolde." The star made an instantaneous success and received a warm welcome. Her voice, while not the most brilliant, has freshness and purity. This singer received much praise a couple of years ago when she made her first appearance in London as Kundry in "Parsifal." In this role she distinguished herself at the Metropolitan on February 22 by giving a fine performance. Johannes Sembach was Parsifal and Clarence Whitehill was Amfortas.

"Il Trovatore" had its first presentation in three years on the afternoon of February 20. Special interest attached to the production, as it had been announced as "restudied" under Arturo Toscanini, who conducted it for the first time here. Verdi's work was given in New York at the Academy of Music in 1855, just two years after it had been heard in Rome, and one year before it made its appearance in London. When the construction of the Metropolitan was finished in 1883, it was placed in the company's repertoire. In this season's performance Emmy Destinn was Leonora. Her "Miserere" was very effective. Mme. Ober was an excellent Azucena. Amato was splendid as the Count di Luna. His singing, especially in the second act, was finely done. An impressive characterization of the troubadour, Manrico, was given by Martinelli, and he effectively rendered the famous "Di quella pira" aria in the third act. In the evening "Tosca" was the bill, with a new Cavaradossi in the person of Luca Botta, who acquitted himself admirably.

For the last of the new productions of the season Mascagni's "Iris" was revived. This work was first heard at the Metropolitan, October 16, 1902, under the composer's direction, which was about five years after its first production at the Castanzi Theatre in Rome. In 1899 it was heard at La Scala under the conductorship of Toscanini. Mr. Corried brought it forward again on December 6, 1907, with Mme. Eames as Iris, Caruso as Osaka and Scotti as Kyoto. The libretto is by Luigi Illica, who wrote "Germania" for Franchetti. The score of the opera opens at the first break of the sun in a Japanese garden, with Iris singing a beautiful choral hymn to the sun. Her father, who is blind, hears the childlike chatter as she plays with her doll, Osaka, who is wealthy, sees Iris and desires her. He arranges, with the aid of Kyoto, a wretch of the Yoshiwara, a puppet show to attract the child from a crowd of girls so that he can abduct her. The trick is successful. Kyoto takes her away, leaving a purse "to make the abduction legal." Her father, Di Cicco, believes that his little girl willingly disgraced him, and he is led to the forbidden part of the city of Tokio to curse her. Iris is in the house of Kyoto in Act II. He demands of Osaka a princely ransom, which the latter agrees to give. Iris, who awakes, finds herself surrounded by gifts, and pays reverence to Osaka as a "Son of Light." But she soon cries for her home. This bores Osaka, and he bids the keeper frighten her. Kyoto shows her a secret vault leading to a sewer basin, and tells her it is for those who disobey. Osaka, remorseful, sings that she shall have her wish. His voice attracts Il Cieco, who curses Kyoto. The latter shrieks back, "He sold her!" and before Osaka can intervene Iris leaps from a window into the deep abyss. The last act shows a waste space outside the city. Ragpickers at night are searching with hooks for things that may have some value. They see a shining object, which, on further investigation, proves to be the glinting on the dress of Iris. Pulling the body ashore, they strip the ornaments from the gown and, seeing that there is life in the body, become frightened and flee. Iris revives a little. As the morning dawns she stretches out her arms toward the sun. Here again the chorus of the sun is heard. Flowers are brought forth under the power of the sun's rays and form themselves around the body of the dying Iris. The music is mostly made up of short snatches of melodious phrases. It has at times Japanese color. The most effective passages are the orchestra introduction accompanying the "Hymn to the Sun" and Il Cieco's outbreak of despair at the end of the first act. The performance enlisted some of the finest powers that the Metropolitan could summon. Lucrezia Bori gave a touching impersonation of the tragic little Japanese girl, and her singing was charming. As the dissolute young nobleman, Osaka, Luca Botta shows his voice off to best advantage. Scotti gave a remarkable and skilful characterization of Kyoto. The entire production was well staged. Toscanini conducted.

Boston Opera Company.—The first visit of the Boston Grand Opera Company to New York, under the direction of Max Rabinoff, occupied the two weeks beginning October 25 at the Manhattan Opera House, the former home of the Hammerstein operatic ventures. They brought several novelties, both in operas and in ballets, in conjunction with Anna Pavlova and her Russian dances. The engagement opened with Auber's "La Muette de Portici" ("The Dumb Girl of Portici"), which has not been heard in this country in a quarter of a century and is eighty-seven years old. The story is of the son of the Viceroy of Naples, who, in the absence of a fisherman brother of the dumb girl, had won her love; she discloses, in pantomime, to his aristocratic bride on the eve of their wedding his perfidy. When the fisherman, who is popular with the masses, ripe for insurrection, returns, there is a revolution. The dumb girl saves the lives of both her lover and his wife, and, incidentally, brings about the death of her brother and of herself. The music of this old work contains several attractive airs and duets and two barcarolles. The ballet music made an effective vehicle for the graphic pantomiming and artistic dancing of Mlle. Pavlova. Mr. Zenatello, the former Hammerstein tenor, as Masaniello, brother of the dumb girl, sang splendidly and received much applause. Felice Lynn, who will be remembered as appearing in "Hans the Flute Player" here and in Hammerstein's London Opera House, was Elvira, the bride. Thomas Chalmers, as Pietro, and Paolo Ananian, as Borella, gave admirable performances. Agide Jacchia, the conductor, tastefully read the score. For their second presentation the company chose "The Love of Three Kings," which brought out a completely different cast. Ferrar Fontana had not been heard here before in this work. Luisa Villani, who sang the tragic role of Montemezzi's heroine at the world's premiere of the opera at La Scala, in Milan, April 11, 1915, sang the music of that role on this occasion, and displayed a voice fresh and powerful. Edvard Ferrar Fontana's singing of Arvo was a triumph historically and vocally. George Baklanoff, the baritone, and Mardones, the bass, admirably sang the roles of Manfredo and Archibaldo, respectively. Roberto Moranzoni conducted. After the opera the "Elysian Fields" scene from "Orfeo" was given, with Maria Gay singing Orfeo and Mlle. Pavlova appearing with her ballet and the chorus, Adolph Schmid conducted.

The rendering of "Otello," October 29, aroused much enthusiasm. The presentation as a whole was a meritorious one, and Moranzoni, the conductor, as well as the chorus and singers gave satisfactory performances. George Baklanoff, as Iago, sang brilliantly, especially the "Credo" in the second act. Others in the cast were Zenatello as Otello, Luisa Villani as Desdemona, Elvira Leveroni as Emilia, Ernesto Giacomone as Cassio and Alfred Kaufman as Ludovico.

Principal interest centred, October 28, in the appearance for the first time in this city of the Japanese soprano, Tamaki Miura, in the title role of "Madama Butterfly." Mme. Miura's advent was heralded with previous records of success gained in London with the Beecham company and with the Boston company in Chicago. Being the first Japanese prima donna to appear in opera in America and Europe, and in addition interpreting a Japanese character, naturally aroused much curiosity as to her performance. Mme. Miura, however, showed herself to be an actress of ability, and to possess besides a charming personality a voice European trained, though not strong. It is of good texture, except in the lower ranges, where it lacks warmth. The remainder of the singers in the cast did well. Riccardo Martin was Pinkerton. Thomas Chalmers was Sharpless, and Elvira Leveroni, Suzuki.

The second and final week was conspicuous for the portrayal by Mme. Olive Fremstad of Tosca for the first time in this city since 1913, and for the initial appearance of Zenatello as Cavaradossi, October 31. Mme. Fremstad was warmly received. Zenatello moved his hearers to enthusiastic demonstrations by his artistic and beautiful work in his denunciation of Scarpia after the torture scene. Baklanoff was a splendid Scarpia. On the closing day of the company's engagement, November 6, "Pagliacci," with Maggie Teyte as Nedda, was heard.

HAVANA, CUBA.—The new National Opera House, one of the largest in the world, opened April 22 with "Aida," with J. Cappella in the title role, Maria Gay as Amneris, Jose Palet as Rhadames, and Titta Ruffo as Amonasro. The project failed.

CHICAGO.—Scriabine's "Prometheus" received its American premiere on March 5 at the concert of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

LOS ANGELES.—The National Grand Opera Company, at the Auditorium in January, revived Verdi's "I Lombardi," a rarely sung work, which was first performed February 11, 1843, at Milan. "Fairland," the $10,000 prize opera by Horatio Parker and Brian Hooker, was heard for the first time at the Temple Auditorium, July 1.

BERLIN.—On May 24, at the Royal Opera, Weber's "Freischuetz" was heard. On the 31st Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro" was the attraction. Felix von Weingartner's music drama, "Cain and Abel," was heard at the Municipal Opera in Chemnitz. In October, Max von Schilling's "Mona Lisa," libretto by Beatrice Dovsky, was given its first hearing at the Royal Opera.

ROME.—Mascagni's "Amico Fritz" opened the Teatro Quirino for a season of opera in April.

BOSTON.—Horatio Parker's oratorio, "Mormon and the Grail," text by Brian Hooker, was sung for the first time at the centenary of the Handel and Haydn Society, April 13.

PHILADELPHIA.—"L'Amore dei Tre Re" opened the Boston Opera Company's season here at the Metropolitan, November 8.

MILAN.—During the four months of opera at the Scala, seventy-five performances were given. They included "Das Rheingold," 14; Rigoletto," 21; "Notte di Legenda," 7; "Loreley," 16; "La Gioconda," 12; "Fedra," 4, and the ballet "La Korrigane." The novelty of the season was the premiere of Franchetti's new work, "Notte di Legenda," melodrama by G. Forzano. Cecilia Gagliardi was the heroine and de Luca sang the baritone part. On February 5 Catalini's "Loreley," which had not been heard in Milan in ten years, was given, with Eugenia Burzio in the title role. Marenguzzi conducted.

NAPLES.—During a four months' season at the San Carlo, ninety-two works were heard. The two novelties were Wolf-Ferrari's "Le Donne Curiose," which had ten performances, and Lacetti's "Il Miracolo," given five times.

TURIN.—The first production in Italy of Giordano's "Madame Sans-Gene" was given at the Teatro Regio late in February.

MUSIC—Continued.

DRESDEN—In May a revival of Marschner's opera, "Hans Heiling," under the direction of Fritz Remer was given, with Friedrich Plaschke in the title role. Presentations were also made of Richard Strauss's "Ariadne," "Rosenkavalier," "Elektra" and "Salome." Frau Gutheil-Schoder had the principal part in "Elektra" and Strauss himself conducted.

MONTE CARLO—On March 11 the special opera season, organized by Raul Gumbsbourg, opened with "Aida." Caruso appeared as Rhadames and Fella Litvinne had the title role.

The Van den Berg-Conger Opera Company began an engagement of several weeks, presenting alternately grand and comic opera, at the Standard. On May 10 they gave "Il Trovatore," in English. Alan Turner, in the role of the Count, displayed a pleasing baritone voice, and Bettina Freeman, formerly of the Century company, sang Leonora. Marie Cressie was Azucena. Oscar Strauss's "Chocolate Soldier" was the offering for the week of June 7. Dorothy Maynard, a young American, sang the soprano role of Nadina delightfully, and Carrie Reynolds sang and acted the role of Mascha with spirit. Planquette's old comic opera, "The Chimes of Normandy," delighted the patrons, May 25. A very good tenor voice was displayed by Paul Hyde Davis in his singing of Jean. Arthur Cunningham, who years ago appeared with the Gilbert and Sullivan organization, sang the charming waltz song of the Marquis tastefully, and Carrie Reynolds, in addition to making an attractive Serpette, sang the music delightfully. The entire production was well staged.

Mr. Louis Zuro began his fifth Spring season of grand opera at the People's Theatre, April 26, with "Aida." Miss Eversman, who was soprano of the Chicago Opera Company, admirably sang the title role. Mme. Matia Nicssen Stone, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was an excellent Amneris. Guido Cecotti was satisfactory as Rhadames. Per Bettin, of the Royal Opera of Berlin, did well as Amonasro.

The following evening "Rigoletto" was sung. It served to introduce Theodore Kittay, the young tenor, as the Duke. He disclosed a voice of agreeable tone, though he showed a lack of dramatic technique.

An impressive impersonation of Azucena in "Il Trovatore" was given by Matia von Nicssen Stone on April 30. Hortense Dourville sang the role of Leonora. "Faust" opened the second week of the Zuro season on May 3. Salvatore Giordano had the name part.

The Zuro company completed their season with an ambitious production of "Un Ballo in Maschera" for the first time, May 14. Cecotti handled the role of Riccardo very well. Hortense Dourville was Amelia. George Everett sang Silvano, and Lida Rossi was Ulrica. Special mention should be made of the good work done by Modesti as Renato, his singing of "Eri tu" being especially well done. Miss Hoffman easily delivered the coloratura passages of the music of Edgar.

Mr. Zuro began another season of opera on November 6 at the Thalia with "Carmen." Maude Santley, former member of the Century company, sang the title role, and Luigi Samolli, a dramatic tenor, was Don Jose. "Aida" was given the second week. Miss Lida Errera, an Italian dramatic soprano, made her bow as Aida, and Giocomo Mazuroff, a Russian, was Rhadames. On November 23 Mr. Zuro revived Verdi's "Ernani."

Morris, Louis L. Seaman, John A. Stewart.

CONCERTS.

Over eighty concerts were given by the Philharmonic Society, under the leadership of Josef Stransky, during 1914-15, which was the seventy-third year of its existence. About 200,000 people attended the performances. The personnel of the orchestra was efficient and the programmes furnished were of the highest artistic standard. The society presented for the first time in New York Henry Hadley's tone poem "Lucifer," Arthur Hinton's suite "Eudymion;" Erich Korngold's "Sinfonietta," op. 5; J. Guy Ropartz's Fourth Symphony; Sigismond Stojowski's suite, op. 9; Henry Burck's "Meditation," for strings, and Nicola Luccella's "Prelude and Temple Dance."

Antonin Dvorak's Fourth Symphony, which is seldom presented here, was offered as the principal work on the evening of March 4, with commendable results. Harold Bauer was the soloist and gave an excellent interpretation of Schumann's A minor concerto. Alma Gluck appeared with the society January 14. She rendered the last aria of Donna Anna's from "Don Giovanni" in addition to numbers in Russian by Rachmaninoff and Rimsky-Korsakoff. The orchestra especially distinguished itself in its exhibit of Liszt's symphonic poem "Tasso." Beethoven's music made up the programme January 21. Fritz Kreisler, as the soloist, came in for marked appreciation for his interpretation of the D major concerto. There were two soloists at the concert January 24—Florence Hinkle, soprano, and the Russian violinist, Wassery Besekirsky. The former sang the aria from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and the "Ave Maria," from Max Bruch's "Cross of Fire." The conductor began with the first symphony of Schumann in B flat major, followed by four character pieces, based on the Rubaiyat, by Poete, and ended with Liszt's Hungarian rhapsody. Mr. Besekirsky rendered Mendelssohn's E minor concerto. His musicianship, while creditable, left much to be desired. The first half of the programme January 28 was devoted to French music. Opening with the overture to Mehul's "La Chasse du jeune Henri," the orchestra gave "L'Apprenti Sorcier," which pleased the audience so much that it was repeated. Miss Lucrezia Bori sang with beauty of tone "Depuis le Jour," from Charpentier's "Louise," and "Naissantes Fleurs," from Gretry's "Cephale et Procris." For the first time in this country a suite by Sigismond Stojowski, the Polish composer and pianist, was played February 5. On February 11 Wagner numbers made up the programme. The Austrian violinist, Fritz Kreisler, again appeared with the society on February 21. He was at his best in his interpretation of the Bruch G minor concerto, which he played with strength and expressiveness.

On February 25 Pasquale Amato was soloist. Beethoven's Third Symphony, the "Eroica," was beautifully rendered. For the first time during the season, Mr. Stransky gave Reger's "Ballet Suite," which was dedicated to him. It proved a popular number.

The German soprano of the Dresden and Berlin Opera Houses, Mme. Elizabeth van Endert, who has a well trained voice of fine texture, appeared February 28 and sang the famous aria from Weber's "Der Freischuetz," "Wie Nahte mir der Schlummer," and three songs which have only recently been orchestrated by their composers and were sung for the first time here with orchestral accompaniment—Reger's "Waldeinsamkeit" and "Maria Wiegeliel," and Richard Strauss's "Staedchen." The Russian pianist, Ossip Gabri-lowitsch, played Chopin's E minor concerto at the concert of March 6. He gave a stirring interpretation which delighted his listeners. The musicians of the orchestra deserved the highest praise for the excellent manner in which they supported the pianist. In honor of the memory of Carl Goldmark, who had died over a month previous to this concert, his work, "Rural Wedding" symphony, was among the offerings. For the first time in twenty years Dvorak's Fourth Symphony in G was heard March 4.

The Philharmonic Society opened its seventy-fourth season with a superb presentation of Edward MacDowell's symphonic poem, "Lancelot and Elaine," under the baton of Josef Stransky. The novelty of the evening was Max Reger's "Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Mozart," op. 132. This work, which was first heard in Germany last Winter, was excellently played and warmly received. On November 28 Mme. Melanie Kurt sang two numbers by Richard Strauss and a group of five songs by Brahms and Wolf. The initial hearing in this country of Arnold Schoenberg's symphonic poem, "Pelleas and Melisande," was given. Emmy Destinn, soprano, was the soloist. A fine performance was given on the afternoon of November 26, when Delius's concerto in C minor for piano and orchestra was given for the first time in America with Percy Grainger, the Australian pianist, as soloist. It is the work of an Englishman of German ancestry, and it was written in Florida about ten years ago.

The Catholic Oratorio Society at its tenth annual production sang Coleridge Taylor's oratorio, "The Atoneement," at Carnegie Hall, March 26.

John McCormack gave ten recitals in Greater New York. One of them was given before an enormous audience at the Century Opera House, March 21. Beginning with Beethoven's "Adelaide," in an English translation, his selections included three groups of English, Irish and Scottish ballads.

At the first concert of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, March 20, in Carnegie Hall, Modest Altschuler for the first time anywhere caused colored lights to be used in conjunction with the rendering of an orchestral descriptive work. The composition on this occasion was the "Poem of Fire, Prometheus," by Alexander Scriabine. It was performed in darkness, while powerful colored lights were relayed on a curtained background.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Munch as conductor, during its series of concerts brought out the work of an American composer for its first New York public hearing, "Ormazd," by Frederick S. Converse. It was first given by Max Zach, of the St. Louis Symphony, in January, 1912. Their other new performances were Percy Grainger's British folk dances, Josef Suk's "Scherzo Fantastique," Roger Ducasse's "Le Joli Jeu de Furet," Albert Roussel's "Le Festin d'Araignee," Florent Schmitt's waltzes, "Reflets d'Alemaagne," David Stanley Smith's "Prince Hal" and two movements from a symphony by Frederick A. Stock. The two latter were American works.

Vernon d'Arnalle, a baritone with a voice of much beauty and of great compass, which he uses to advantage, gave a recital at Aeolian Hall, October 26, accompanied by Maurice Eisner. His programme was tastefully selected. It consisted of compositions by Schubert, Franz, Schumann and Brahms, besides two Irish ballads, "The Weaver's Daughter" and "A Ballynure Ballad"; Carpenter's "To One Unknown," and Hadley's "How Do I Love Thee." In addition, Mr. d'Arnalle added some songs to his own accompaniment which were warmly received.

Carl Schuetz, the harpist of the Philharmonic Society, gave a recital at the Princess, January 24, assisted by Miss Hattie Deum, soprano. Mr. Schuetz gave a finished performance and he was warmly received by the audience. His programme contained several numbers written by harpists who have been heard by the New York public. Among them were Chesires and Holy. Other selections rendered were Oberthier's "Clouds of Sunshine" and two pieces of his own composition, entitled "In the Garden" and "A Spring Thought."

THE DRAMA.

The year was especially notable for the number of independent ventures launched forth by several producers interested in the furthering of the artistic rather than the commercial standard of the stage. These projects began when the Band-box Theatre opened with "Poor Little Thing," which the New York Play Actors intended to be the beginning of a series of plays to be given by them. This play, however, ended abruptly after eleven performances. Then the Washington Square Players took over the theatre, February 18, and furnished short plays. There next appeared on the theatrical horizon Granville Barker with his English company. He has been identified with the stage in Europe and has two theatres in London, the Savoy and the Kingsway. His venture began at Wallack's, on January 27, with "Androcles and the Lion," a fable play, by George Bernard Shaw, and "The Man who Married a Dumb Wife," by Anatole France. Both works were new to New York, the latter never having been heard before on the English-speaking stage. "Androcles and the Lion" was first given at the St. James's Theatre, London, in 1913, and created quite a little interest. It requires a cast of seventeen, besides those in the ensemble. Eighty-five times, Mr. Barker's second offering was Shakespeare's "A Midsummer-Night's Dream," which was treated in a novel manner. He made a departure from the usual by using British folk music and dances, arranged by Cecil Sharp, instead of the Mendelssohn music setting used for the play. Miss Lillah McCarthy pleasingly portrayed Helena; Horace Braham was admirable as Oberon, and O. P. Heggie was Quince. Seventeen times.

Another name was added to the list of producers on February 23, when Emanuel Reicher, founder of the Modern Stage, gave Hauptmann's "Elga," a dream play, at the Garrick. This new organization purposed to give a series of plays by the foremost Continental dramatists as well as native authors. "Elga" was first published in Berlin in 1905, and shortly after appeared an English translation by Mary Harned, 2 times. This actor-manager inaugurated a second season on November 16 with the first production in the United States of Bjornstjerne Bjornson's social comedy, "When the Young Vine Blooms," translated by Arvid Paulson, at the Garden Theatre. In this play Mr. Reicher assumed his first comedy role in English. With him was associated his daughter, Hedwig Reicher. After a month's run Gerhart Hauptmann's "The Weavers" was given.

The Bramwell Players began a second season, November 7, with a double bill consisting of a satire entitled "The Courtship of Thén, Now and To-Morrow," by Anna Wynne, and a playlet in three scenes by Butler Davenport called "Depths of Purity."

Notable among the year's revivals was Paul M. Potter's dramatization of Du Maurier's novel "Tribby," by Joseph Brooks and the Messrs. Shubert, at the Shubert Theatre, April 3. The event marked the twentieth anniversary of the original production, which had its initial hearing at the Garden Theatre in 1895. The eight principal parts were acted by players of distinction. They included Phyllis Neilson-Terry, whose impersonation of Tribby was a triumph for her. Besides her fine acting, she showed ability to sing when she rendered "Ben Bolt" before the audience. Wilton Lackaye received a hearty welcome in his old role Sveangli. Others in the cast were Leo Ditrichstein as Zou-Zou, Burr McIntosh as Taffy, Brandon Tynan as Little Billee, George Macfarlane as The Laird, Taylor Holmes as Gecko, and Rose Coghlan as Mme. Vinard. Seventy-three times. George Bernard Shaw's plays were revived by Arnold Daly. He commenced at the Garrick, April 5, with "You Never Can Tell," with George Giddens in the part of Walter. Thirty-four times. Mr. Daly then went to the Park Theatre, where he gave a performance of the satirical comedy, "Candida," May 20. In this he appeared in his old role of Eugene Marjoribanks, one of the most amusing of Shaw's characters. Hilda Spong had the title role, 11 times. A revival of "A Celebrated Case," a new version of Ennery and Cormon's old play, was given on April 7 by David Belasco and Charles Frohman, with Frederic de Belleville, Otis Skinner, Robert Warwick, N. C. Goodwin, Walter F. Scott, George Allison, John Warneke, Helen Ware, Mimi Yvonne, Beverly Sitgreaves, Ruth Farnum, Herbert Ayling, Ann Murdock, Florence Reid and Elita Proctor Otis.

The $10,000 offered by Winthrop Ames for the best play submitted to him was won by Miss Alice Brown's "The Children of Earth." It was chosen from over 1,600 manuscripts. This play was acted for the first time at the Booth, January 12, and is a study of a New England conscience. It tells of the middle-aged romance of a New England woman of unusual strength of character. While Mr. Ames supplied an excellent cast to tell the story, it nevertheless remained unconvincing and was withdrawn after forty-one performances. Effie Shannon gave a skilled portrayal of Mary Ellen. Others in the cast were Herbert Kelcey, Cecil Yapp, Olive Wyndham, Gilda Varesi and A. E. Anson.

"Marie-Odile" was brought to the Belasco, January 26. It was in three acts, by Edward Knoblauch, the author of "Kismet" and "My Lady's Dress." "Marie-Odile" sets forth the story of a young novice who, when a baby, was found one morning on the steps of the convent. Reared within the solemn old walls of the Alsatian convent by the nuns and with but scant thought of what her station would be in the world outside, she becomes a nun. The play opens at the time of the ending of her novitiate, 1870, and a notable year in the history of the Franco-Prussian War. No news of the war reached Marie-Odile, and the only men whom she had ever seen were the old gardener, Peter, and the visiting priest. One afternoon a group of Prussian soldiers made their way into the convent. The sisters took flight, leaving the little novice, who was hiding in the loft with her pigeons, alone to meet the soldiers. At the departure of the Prussians a young Corporal remains behind, and the novice's romance closes the second act. The next scene is a year later. The nuns, returning to the convent, learn of Marie-Odile's romance and denounce her. One nun pleads for her that innocence has been her only sin. Miss Frances Starr as Marie-Odile has a role very different from any which she has been acting during the past few years. In her interpretation of the nun she displayed work of the highest quality. 121 times.

The doors of the Belasco Theatre were thrown wide for the present season August 10. "The Boomerang," a new American comedy in three acts by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, was the attraction. This comedy of jealousy tells about the vicissitudes of two couples who are in love and who become jealous. A young physician undertakes to cure the jealousy and pretends to administer modern remedies, while in reality he gives the old-fashioned method of affected indifference. But the wrong person takes the advice, and the result is that the young doctor is wounded by his own boomerang. Wallace Eddinger, as the lovelorn youth, displayed his best acting, being always natural and effective. Arthur Byron gave an excellent performance of the physician, Martha Hedman, as the nurse, acted delightfully, and Ruth Shepley, as Grace, gave a skilful portrayal of the one who had been wooed so ardently.

Another production to have a long run was the melodrama, "Sinners," by Owen Davis, at the Playhouse, January 7. The cast included Alice Brady, who made a charming and girlish Mary; Emma Dunn, Florence Nash, Robert Edeson as Bob Merrick, and Charles Richman. (W. A. Brady.)

E. H. Sothern, after a year's retirement from the stage, appeared in Alfred Sutro's modern comedy, "The Two Virtues," at the Booth Theatre, October 4. This play was produced by

Sir George Alexander at the St. James's Theatre, London, in March, 1914. It satirized woman's attitude toward woman. Mr. Sothern played the role of Jeffery Planton, a rich, eccentric, middle-aged bachelor who through an unfortunate love affair, in which his fiancée, Isabel, marries another man, seeks retirement in his study and devotes himself to the writing of a history of the world. Charlotte Walker was chosen as Mr. Sothern's leading woman. (Lee Shubert and Winthrop Ames.) Sixty-six times. On November 29 "Lord Dunsinore" was revived. Mr. Sothern's last appearance in this comedy was in 1914 and his first revival was made in New York in 1908. His father played this part prior to 1858, when Joseph Jefferson had the part of Asa Trenchard and Laura Keane was Florence Trenchard. In the present revival Elizabeth Valentine took the latter part. (Shubert.)

One of the events in the theatrical world was the return to the stage of Miss Julia Arthur after an absence of over ten years. Her last appearance was as Josephine in "More Than Queen." Miss Arthur came to the Forty-eighth Street Theatre in a new play, "The Eternal Magdalene," by Robert McLoughlin, on November 1. It is a stirring morality play, dealing with certain social conditions. It is written in a straightforward, unusually frank manner and has an abundance of keen satire. Julia Arthur gave a striking performance of the Magdalene. She fitted into the role perfectly, and her well-modulated voice, simplicity and beauty made the portrayal stand out impressively. Emmett Corrigan acted the narrow-minded, public-spirited citizen who brought an evangelist to clean up his town and who falls asleep to dream of the Magdalene gliding through his house as a maid servant; of his son, who has stolen money; of his daughter, who elopes with a scoundrel and is deserted, and finally of his own mistakes, only to awaken to find himself with the family intact and himself a much wiser and better man. In this role Mr. Corrigan did some excellent acting. Lowell Sherman was capital in the part of the newspaper reporter. (Selwyn & Co.) Cohan & Harris brought out an American farce, "Hit the Trail Holiday," written by George M. Cohan from an idea suggested by George Middleton and Guy Bolton, at the Astor on September 13. The story is about Billy Holiday, a Broadway bartender, who is brought to a small town in New England for a hotel to be opened by the richest man in town, Granger. Mrs. Temple, a widow, arranged for a temperance meeting in the town hall. Granger declared that the hall should not be used for the purpose, as he owns two breweries. Holiday offers his services as a speaker and wakes up the following morning to find himself a famous temperance lecturer. He ends up by closing the breweries, making a fortune in "nearly beer" for the hotel keeper and falling in love with the rector's daughter. Fred Niblo was the bar-keeper-revivalist. Another successful production of these managers was "Young America" at the Gaiety, August 28. It was by Fred Ballard and dealt with the Children's Court.

Another amusing farce was presented at the Eltinge, November 6. It was entitled "Fair and Warmer," and was by Avery Hopwood, author of "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow." This play concerned four young people of assorted temperaments who Mr. Hopwood endows with time and money enough to take themselves seriously and then proceeds to entangle them in a series of laugh-provoking situations from which they are extricated. John Cumberland and Madge Kennedy were effective in their roles of husband and wife, respectively. Others in the cast were Ralph Morgan, Janet Beecher, Hamilton Revelle, Olive May, Robert Fisher and Pete Mealy. (Selwyn & Co.)

The initial stellar engagement of Leo Dittrichstein under the management of Cohan & Harris commenced at the Longacre, where he opened November 10 in "The Great Lover," a romantic comedy in three acts by Mr. Dittrichstein and Fanny and Frederick Hatton. The story is about people of the stage world. Jean Parrot, a baritone, has enjoyed popularity, and insists on deciding who shall and who shall not sing with him in the cast. Later the petted idol suddenly loses his voice, and he must stand aside and watch a newcomer, who has been waiting an opportunity, greeted with acclaim by the public. Mr. Dittrichstein gave a brilliant performance.

"Rolling Stones" was the title of a melodramatic comedy by Edgar Selwyn, author of "Nearly Married," "The Arab" and "The Country Boy" at the Harris, August 17. It told the story of a couple of young men who rise spectacularly from poverty to a position of wealth. They go forth to get the living which they claimed the world owed them. The difficulties which they encounter furnished the amusing incidents of the comedy. It is a play full of spirit and humor. Among those chosen to interpret the piece were Charles Ruggles, who was a capital Dave Fulton; Harrison Ford, who was splendid as the other deceiver; Arthur Aylesworth and Mary Carroll.*

The inaugural performance at the New York Hippodrome under the direction of Charles Dillingham took place on September 30. "Hip, Hip, Hoorsay" was the attraction. It was a brilliant spectacle. Lyrics were by John L. Golden and music by Raymond Hubbell. One of the prominent features of the show was a Winter scene and ice ballet which ended the entertainment. The players included Arthur Deagan, Nat Willis, Orville Harrold, Belle Storey and Sousa and his band.*

Ethel Barrymore appeared at the Lyceum on October 19 in "Our Mrs. McChesney," a new American comedy made out of the Edna Ferber McChesney stories by George V. Hobart and Edna Ferber. The play is in three acts, which subdivide into five scenes. Miss Barrymore portrays a travelling saleswoman. The action of the play included the many incidents in a crowded life, extending from Sandusky, Ohio, to an apartment on Riverside Drive, New York. The role of Emma McChesney affords Miss Barrymore an opportunity for light comedy work, and she is altogether delightful in it.*

Even funnier than "Potash and Perlmutter" was its sequel, under the title of "Abe and Mawruss," which A. H. Woods presented at the Lyric, October 21. It is from Montague Glass's comic stories, built by Roi Cooper Megrue. The scene of the new play is the home of Perlmutter. It is in three acts, and reveals the two partners in an altogether different social and business environment than before. The play is acted by all the old favorites, including Barney Bernard, Julius Tannen, Mathilde Cottrelly and Louise Dresser.*

"Hobson's Choice," a four-act comedy, by Harold Brighouse, had its New York opening at the Princess, November 2. The play is a quaint story of English provincial life in Lancashire. The leading feminine character was played by Molly Pearson, who was the original Bunty in the American production of "Bunty Pulls the Strings." Mr. Brighouse has chosen for the title of his comedy the old English expression, "Hobson's Choice." This expression originated in the seventeenth century in connection with a brewery keeper, who made it a rule that all his patrons take the horse nearest the stable door, whether it be good or bad. Mr. Brighouse has applied this old adage to his comedy, in which the central character, that of a Lancashire shopkeeper, is also named Hobson, only he has four daughters to dispose of instead of horses. He determines that each shall marry the man of his choice, irrespective of their wishes. The eldest, Maggie, however, proposes to the young man she picks out of her father's shop, and weds him in spite of her sire's objections, thereby relegating the proverb to the misfit class. Molly Pearson was a charming Maggie. She brought to the character all the charm in her acting which she displayed as Bunty. A. G. Andrews, as her father, Hobson, was excellent. He gave just the right sympathetic touch to the part in the last act. (Shubert.)

Oliver Morosco presented at the Gaiety, November 29, the three-act romantic farce "Sadie Love," by Avery Hopwood. The story tells of the wedding of a fascinating American widow and an Italian prince. Immediately after the ceremony there comes a French lady with whom the prince has had a flirtation, and trouble begins. A proposal is made that the bride divorce her husband; then the matter of a wedding journey is discussed, with the French lady to go along to see that her interests are not jeopardized. In the cast were Marjorie Rambeau, as the bride, and Pedro de Cordoba, as the Italian prince.*

Among the new authors of successful plays is Cleaves Kinkadee, whose Harvard prize play, "Common Clay," a melodrama in three acts and an epilogue, was staged at the Republic, August 26. This play, which ran for twenty-two weeks in Chicago, is interesting. It tells its story in a straightforward manner, dealing with ugly truths in an effective manner. The action takes place in a Western city. John Mason and Jane Cowl acted in their best manner.*

"The House of Glass," another play by a new author, Max Marcin, came to light at the Candler, September 1. It is a well-constructed play in three acts, telling about Margaret Case, a stenographer in New York, who is about to marry James Burke, crook, thinking he is an honest man. He is arrested in her boarding-house for stealing and, on circumstantial evidence, she is convicted with him. After a year and a half in jail she is let out on parole, which she breaks and goes to Kansas City. There she marries Harvey Lake, railroad man, who is offered the management of an Eastern railroad, which he accepts. He goes to New York. Carroll, a detective, there meets Mrs. Lake and recognizes her. She confesses to her husband her past, but tells of her innocence. He takes it bitterly. However, he secures Edward McClellan, the railroad's lawyer, to thwart the detective. The latter produces Burke, but the ex-crook does not recognize Mrs. Lake, who, worn out with suspense, confesses, and promises the detective she will report to the police. The Governor of New York calls on Lake to prevent his prosecuting a youth of good family who has stolen from the railroad. In return for the favor, Lake obtains a pardon for the woman who broke her parole without divulging her identity. Mary Ryan appeared to advantage in the role of Margaret Case. (Cohan & Harris.)*

The Selwyns brought to the Hudson the new melodrama "Under Fire," by Roi Cooper Megrue, August 12. The play is a vivid war play which takes for its theme the invasion of France in the Battle of the Marne. It is in three acts, with scenes in London, Belgium, a field hospital "somewhere in Northern France" and a trench in the open country.*

Grace George began a season under her own management, with herself as the star, at the Playhouse, September 28. She chose Langdon Mitchell's brilliant comedy, "The New York Idea," for revival. Miss George had the leading role, originally played by Mrs. Fiske. Supporting Miss George were Mary Nash, Lumsden Hare, Conway Tearle and Ernest Lawford.

"The Chief" was the title of Mr. John Drew's new play in which he came to the Empire, November 26. It was written by Horace Annesley Vachell, and is a light comedy of modern manners in which the comedian has the role of the Earl of Yester. The action of the play takes place in England in Summer. Ten years previous to the time the play opens Yester had fallen in love with Cynthia Vansittart, but through the deception of a Mrs. Bergus he is convinced that she loves another, and so he marries her daughter, Alicia. When she dies Mrs. Bergus is confident that she will secure Yester for her second daughter. But the Earl's ward, fresh from a school in France, arrives on the scene and the plan is spoiled. Consuelo Bailey played the ward, and Laura Hope Crews was seen as Cynthia. The same author's play, "Quinneys," a comedy in four acts, from the Haymarket Theatre, London, was given October 18, at Maxine Elliott's Theatre. It had been running for thirty weeks with much success in London.

"The Cinderella Man," a new play by Edward Childs Carpenter, was announced for presentation about January 1 by Oliver Morosco. It is a comedy-drama of the "Peg o' My Heart" sort.

MUSICAL PIECES.

Following the annual Summer review, the Winter Garden produced, October 9, "A World of Pleasure," a musical show, book and lyrics by Harold Atteridge, music by Sigmund Romberg. Among those in the cast are Clifton Crawford, Jack Wilson, Stella Mayhew, Kitty Gordon, Frances Pritchard, William Banfield Taylor and Ada Meade. The latter sings "The Melting Pot," a patriotic song, which closes the first act. (Shubert.)*

The Messrs. Shubert also brought out, October 11, at the Shubert Theatre, a new Viennese operetta, one of the latest from the pen of Franz Lehár, entitled "Alone at Last." This piece had met with success in Vienna, Berlin and Budapest. The English version of the book of A. M. Willner and Robert Bodanzky was made by Edgar Smith and Joseph Herbert and the lyrics were furnished by Matthew Woodward. The operetta is in three acts, the scenes being laid at Interlaken, Switzerland. The second act is divided into three scenes, showing the base, the slopes and the summit of the Jungfrau. The story of the piece is concerned with a romantic episode in the life of a young Bavarian baron, who is an enthusiastic mountain climber, and, as such, disguises himself as a guide, laying aside his title and assuming another name. Among a large cast of principals are the names of Marguerite Namara, formerly of the Boston Opera Company, who made her first appearance in light opera; Jose Collins, John Charles Thomas, Barbara Schaefer, Roy Atwell and Harry Conner.

Klaw & Erlanger brought out another C. M. S. McClellan production, "Around the Map," on September 1, at the New Amsterdam. It was a musical play in three acts, with a score by Herman Finck. Elise Alder, from the Johann Strauss Theatre, Vienna, made her first New York appearance in the principal part. The title suggests the plot. The characters spin around the map, and Berlin, Port Arthur, San Francisco and New York are among the widely separated cities visited. The party embark on their journey as the result of a wager of a half million francs.*

"Princess Pat," a dainty and refreshing musical comedy with a melodious score, was introduced at the Cort, September 29. It was the work of Victor Herbert, book and lyrics by Henry Blossom. Eleanor Painter, remembered from "The Purple Domino," in the prima donna role, sang delightfully. Especially attractive was the duet, "All for You," by Miss Painter and Joseph R. Letara. (John Cort.)*

The plays that were mentioned in the 1915 Almanac and that were still running when the book went to press, with the number of their performances, are as follows:

"Mary Goes First," 33; "At the Barn," 16; "Marriage of Kitty," 16; "The Dumb and the Blind," 16; "The Hawk," 149; "The Law of the Land," 220; "Life," 164; "Kick In," 214; "So Much for So Much," 28; "Daddy Long-Legs," 275; "The Phantom Rival," 103; "A Pair of Silk Stockings," 221; "Experience," 270; "Outcast," 173; "The High Cost of Loving," 114; "The Denial," "The Fog," "Nettie," "Across the Border," 41; "Polygamy," 163; "Driven," 25; "Lady Luxury," 16; "The Girl From Utah," 124; "The Only Girl," 256; "Watch Your Step," 171; "The Debutante," 50; "Suzi," 56; "The Lie," 176; "The Silent Voice," 67; "Wars of the World," 201; "Song of Songs," 188; "To-Night's the Night," 112; "Hello, Broadway," 126; "A Mix-Up," 92; "Secret Strings," 17; "The Show Shop," 160; "The Lilac Domino," 113.

MOVING PICTURES IN 1915.

Motion pictures during the past year made immense progress both as a means of entertainment and instruction. It is probable that the industry has made greater strides during 1915 than in any two years previous.

They are being gradually introduced in schools and in November Dr. Jose M. de Lasarte, a professor in the School of Industrial Engineering in Barcelona, Spain, came to New York to arrange with American film manufacturers for the introduction of films in the schools of Barcelona.

There were great increases in the number of prominent actors and actresses from the legitimate stage who have been engaged to act before the camera, notable accessions of the year being Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Dustin Farnum, Raymond Hitchcock, Geraldine Farrar, Theda Bara, Billie Burke, Robert Edson and scores of others. Among the elaborate productions of the year "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Battle Cry of Peace" vied for the premiership, but the greatest advance was made in the production of plays which had already succeeded on the legitimate stage and in the production of new plays of from three to six reels. Many of these productions were of rare beauty and attained immense popularity. With the improvement in the class of actors appearing in the film productions and the greatly increased expense attaching to the productions, the admission prices have generally advanced, and the $2 picture show has not only arrived but seems to have come to stay.

The motion picture business this past year has been divided into two camps. In one camp we find the long pictures, consisting of from five to ten reels, and in the other camp pictures of from one thousand to three thousand feet in length were used.

For long films some of the most celebrated motion picture actors and actresses have been employed, and a small fortune has been expended in each production—notably Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen." Miss Farrar is said to have received $25,000 for her work in this single picture.

The short or thousand-foot reel made the motion picture business. Many people patronized the small picture show originally because they could drop in for fifteen or twenty minutes and see a complete show, as a thousand-foot story is run in about fifteen minutes.

The year 1915 has seen the production of many films depicting scientific subjects, such as the action of chemicals, the story of flowers and birds, and intimate views of wild animals, made both in South America and Africa.

Kalem Company has made a special feature of the production of railroad stories. This line of work entails heavy expense and a great amount of ingenuity.

The scenarios were prepared by a train despatcher employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad at Pittsburgh and in the making of the pictures the entire branch of a large Western railroad was rented in its entirety for each production. In renting the railroad, its stations, freight and passenger crews and all equipment were used. Remarkable scenes were made utilizing an immense cantilever bridge.

The heroine of all these stories was a girl about twenty years of age, and in order to fit herself for the work she had to become, to all intents and purposes, a practical engineer and a skilled telegrapher. Kalem has also developed a special field in the production of a series of stories by prominent authors featuring one central character, but making each story complete in itself—notably E. W. Hornung's Australian stories of "Stingaree." Hornung will be remembered as the author of "Raffles."

The company now has in preparation a series that will run into about twenty episodes, being written by George Bronson-Howard, a very successful playwright, who is well known through popular Broadway successes written by him.

The European war was, directly or indirectly, the inspiration of the two greatest scenic pictures of the year, "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Battle Cry of Peace."

"The Birth of a Nation," produced by David W. Griffith, covers that epoch in American history between 1860 and 1872, and 18,000 men were employed in a march of over fifty miles of rough country, representing the Battle of Petersburg, and in the raid of the Ku-Klux Klansmen. In the battle scene actual shells costing $80 each were fired from real cannon and 3,000 horses were utilized in making up the gigantic production. It took eight months to complete the preparation of the 12,000 feet of film on which the 5,000 scenes were pictured, at a cost of a half million dollars. The first part of the story had to do with the Civil War and the last half is a picturization of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," and covers the operations of the Ku-Klux Klan, which finally put an end to negro domination and carpet-bag rule in the South. Striking features of the production show the assassination of President Lincoln while a performance of "Our American Cousin" is going on on the stage of the pictured theatre, the burning of Atlanta during Sherman's march to the sea, and Lee's surrender at Appomattox. "The Battle Cry of Peace" is a direct consequence of the European war and is based on Hudson Maxm's book, "Defenceless America." It is designed to show how easy it would be for an alien enemy to conquer New York and to depict the horrors that would follow the capture of the city. It was produced by the Vitagraph Company from a scenario written by J. Stuart Blackton, who supervised its creation. In the making of the picture 16,000 National Guardsmen, 800 G. A. R. veterans, 5,000 horses, 17 aeroplanes, seaplanes and dirigible balloons, together with submarines, dreadnoughts, torpedo boats and armored motor cars, were used to make the picture as true a reproduction of the manner in which modern war is waged as was possible. Spectacular features are the shooting of her two daughters by a mother to prevent their falling into the hands of the invading soldiers, the killing of a long line of citizens who had defended their homes, including the hero, by machine gun fire and the sinking of two battleships. The most thrilling incident, however, is the bombardment of New York, in which skyscrapers are shown shattered by shell fire and tumbling into the streets, which are crowded with people rushing around in wild panic.

NEW YORK CITY.

Paramount pictures are the feature of the Strand Theatre's programme each week. "Lou Tellegen, former leading man for Sarah Bernhardt, made his photo-dramatic debut in a film version of William Somerset Maugham's book, "The Explorer," September 17. The scenes in this picture carry the audience from the centre of fashionable London to the heart of the African jungle. Marie Doro was the star of the film shown October 10, entitled "The White Pearl," by Edith Barnard Delano. "The Prince and the Pauper," Mark Dwain's story of the kidnapped heir to the British throne, who was nearly cheated out of his heritage, was shown on November 28, with Marguerite Clark in the dual title role.

The Knickerbocker Theatre was added to Broadway's list of motion picture houses September 23 with the first public showing of the Triangle films. These feature photo-plays, produced under the direction of Griffith, Ince and Sennett, started with Dustin Farnum in "The Ivory Stain," Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb" and Raymond Hitchcock in "My Valet," Helen Ware, the emotional actress, made her debut as a Triangle star in a play called "Cross Currents," November 26. One of the most interesting of the pictures was unquestionably the "Martyrs of the Alamo," a drama of the days when Texas fought for freedom. It was the first in a series of educational film plays that Triangle purposes to show. "Matrimony," for which Julia Dean posed, was seen at this house October 24. Harold Hickman was the neglectful husband in this picture.

One of the most important photo-dramatic productions ever presented at the Strand Theatre was "Carmen," on October 29, with Geraldine Farrar in the title role. The bull fight scenes for the play were specially staged by a company of toreadors brought from Spain and with bulls brought from Mexico. More than 20,000 persons took part in the scenes of the arena. Miss Farrar was supported by Wallace Reid, Pedro de Cordoba, Anita King and H. B. Carpenter. During the same week Theda Bara of the Fox Films gave her impersonation of the title role in a sumptuous "Carmen" at the Academy and at the Riverside Theatre. A reproduced bull ring with a real Spanish bull inside were some of the equipments.

"The Juggernaut," a big railroad wreck photo-play, at the Vitaphone Theatre May 7, proved to be worth all the $25,000 it cost. The great scene in which a speeding express crashes down through a weak trestle, engine and cars diving headlong into the water, made a hair-raising effect on the screen. Other pictures at this house included: "The Turn of the Road," "Heights of Hazard," "The Cave Man," "A Price for Folly," "What Happened to Father," and "The Lady of the Lighthouse." The latter was by Mrs. Lewis Woodruff.

MOTION PICTURES IN OTHER LANDS.

The success and steady development of the motion-picture theatre in Canada have been, comparatively speaking, as phenomenal as in the United States. The methods of the business, both in the operation of the houses and in the distribution of films, have been placed on a highly efficient basis.

Generally speaking, the picture house has withstood the shock of war much better than the vaudeville and regular playhouses. In many of the smaller and to some extent in the larger cities vaudeville and drama have definitely given way to motion pictures.

In Middle and Western Canada particularly, the great distances between important cities have always constituted a serious obstacle to the successful operation of "legitimate" and vaudeville houses. Principally for this reason, but also because of the picture theatre's appeal to the person of small means, the cinematograph business in Western Canada has developed to a wonderful degree, as is amply demonstrated by the elaborate houses constructed and the high order of films shown. It has been estimated that during normal times there were approximately 2,240 motion-picture theatres in active operation in Canada, these having a daily attendance of about 500,000 people.

Theatres are open in the large cities from 10 A. M. to 11 P. M., the shows consisting of four reels and the admission being 10 cents. In the smaller cities the hours are from 2 to 11 P. M., four to six reels being shown for 10 cents. Reels are changed daily, on alternate days, or semi-weekly, according to the location and character of the theatre. Picture houses are invariably closed on Sundays.

There are three motion-picture shows in Baranquilla, Spain, two in Santa Marta, two in Cartagena and several in Bogota and Medellin. Bacaramanga, Cali, Manizales, and other small centres all have them. One mining company has put in "movies" to keep its employees contented.

The motion-picture theatre has not reached in Lisbon as yet the popularity that it enjoys in most large cities of Europe and America. This is due partly to the high admission prices made necessary by the taxes which these places are compelled to pay.

The price of admission ranges between 9 and 21 cents. On working days there are three sections lasting about an hour and a half each, and on Sundays and holidays five. The theatres are quite small as compared with the large halls in other cities, and rents are exceedingly high.

The number of motion-picture theatres and performances in the Azores is extremely limited, but this in a measure can be accounted for by the high price of admission. The earning capacity of the people is low, but the large Portuguese-American element in the islands adds no little interest to the possibilities of the market.

Of the nine islands of this archipelago, three have motion-picture theatres. Ponta Delgada, the largest city on the island of St. Michael's, has three theatres, and there are small ones in four other towns of this island. There is one theatre at Angra and one at Harta. The shows in the Azores are much longer than those in the United States. The larger theatres usually present three sessions of four reels each, the last two sessions being made up of series films and the first of reviews, comics, fashions and the like. The smaller theatres present six to eight reels at a performance. Most of the photo-plays shown here in the last year were heavy dramatic or tragic ones, though an attempt was made at each performance to present one or two comics and a lighter photo-play.

The official French war films were placed on exhibition in this country under the auspices of

The World at the Fulton Theatre, New York City. They were guaranteed by the French Government to take the spectators onto the battle fields, not as tourists will go, long after the struggle is over, but at the actual moment of battle, and makes them observers in the midst of infantry drives and artillery actions. They show every given aspect of the great struggle on the western fighting front.

Every phase of soldier life is shown in these pictures just as it is being lived by the men in the trenches. The films were taken by order of the French General Staff and are to be preserved in the National Archives of France, that future generations may be able to see how Frenchmen fought for their country.

THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

THE Referendum has been defined as "the referring of legislation to the people for final rejection or acceptance;" the Initiative as "the giving to the people the right of proposing legislation to be acted upon." It has been further said that the Referendum as it is now generally advocated requires that no law save a strictly defined class of urgent measures for the public peace, health and safety, which usually must have a two-thirds or three-fourths majority to pass, shall go into effect without waiting a fixed time, say ninety days. If, during this time, a part of the voters, say ten per cent., sign a petition for the Referendum on that law, it would not go into effect till the next regular election, when the people would vote on it, and if a majority voted "no" it would not be a law. The Initiative gives the people the power to originate laws. If a certain percentage of the voters, say ten per cent., sign a petition for a law and file it with the proper official it must come before the Legislature and perhaps be referred to the people. Sometimes the law requires that legislation be referred to the people, whether they petition it or not. This is called the "Compulsory Referendum." Where the Referendum is taken only when a certain number petition for it, it is called the "Optional Referendum." The Referendum and the Initiative provide for direct legislation, that is, legislation directly by the people.

For adoption by States from 1897 to 1908, see 1913 ALMANAC; from 1909 to 1913 inclusive, see 1914 ALMANAC.

At what age does one become "old"? Five centuries ago a man was old at fifty. But the hale and hearty gentleman of to-day who has just turned sixty would probably protest against being classed among old people, even if famous. That his susceptibilities may not be wounded, therefore, a separating dash has been discreetly introduced after age sixty-five.

THE DIXIE HIGHWAY.

The Dixie Highway, the most pretentious of the national road movements developed during the year 1915, was officially launched at the conference of Governors of the States interested called to meet at Chattanooga, Tenn., April 3, 1915, by Governor Samuel Ralston, of Indiana. The system of highways, as designated by two commissioners, each appointed by the Governors of the States of Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida, consists of two divisions and one loop each in the States of Michigan and Florida, with connecting links. The western division starts at Chicago, and is routed through the cities of Danville, Ill.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Louisville, Ky.; Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Rome, Atlanta and Macon, Ga.; Tallahassee, Kissimmee, Bartow and Jupiter, Fla., where it connects with the eastern division. Indianapolis, Ind., is connected with a loop around the State of Michigan at South Bend, Ind. Joining the eastern end of the Michigan loop, which follows Lake Huron to Detroit, the eastern division of the highway is routed through the cities of Monroe, Mich.; Toledo, Dayton and Cincinnati, Ohio; Lexington, Ky.; Cumberland Gap and Knoxville, Tenn., to Chattanooga; thence to Atlanta, Ga., via Dalton; thence to Macon, via McDonough; thence to Jacksonville, Fla., via Fitzgerald and Waycross, Ga., and along the east coast of Florida to Miami. A connecting link from Indianapolis on the western division to Dayton, Ohio, on the eastern division, and from Tallahassee, Fla., on the western division to Jacksonville, Fla., on the eastern division has also been designated.

The Dixie Highway has a total mileage of 4,206. In the eight States it traverses 163 counties. It will serve a territory with a population of almost forty million. There are over eight hundred thousand automobile owners in this territory, from which the Dixie Highway can reasonably expect to attract tourists.

That remarkable progress has been made in the short history of the movement may be gleaned from the reports received from fifty counties, from which a conservative estimate was compiled which shows that approximately five million dollars has been expended in the past six months and that preparations have been made to expend during 1916 almost twenty million dollars. Starting with a highway, a large part of which consisted of bad country roads, the progress has been so rapid that there are now only two serious barriers to through travel at the beginning of 1916. These barriers consist of about seventy miles of road yet to be constructed on the eastern division between Cincinnati, Ohio and Knoxville, Tenn., in the mountain counties of Kentucky, and about eighty miles of mountain road in Tennessee on the western division between Nashville and Chattanooga. Ample financial preparations have been made to have these sections of the highway completed by Fall of 1916.

Entire sections of the Dixie Highway are planning paved roads for their entire stretch. Notable among these are the sections of the highway between Chicago and Danville, Ill.; Toledo and Cincinnati, Ohio; Jacksonville and Miami, Fla., and from Tallahassee to Bartow, Fla.

The headquarters of the Dixie Highway Association are located at Chattanooga, Tenn. The officers are Judge M. M. Allison, President; C. H. Huston, First Vice-President; W. R. Long, Secretary and Treasurer; W. S. Gilbreath, Field Secretary, and V. D. L. Robinson, Assistant Secretary. The Executive Committee is composed of President Allison, Secretary Long, Richard Hardy, Chattanooga; Clark Howell, editor Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga., and Carl G. Fisher, Indianapolis, founder of both the Lincoln and Dixie Highway movements.

The State commissioners appointed by the Governors of the various States, who are also directors and officers of the association, are as follows: Michigan, Vice-President P. T. Colgrove, Hastings; President Michigan Good Roads Association, and Frank Hamilton, Traverse City; Vice-President of the West Michigan Pike Association, appointed by Governor Ferris; Illinois, Vice-President Richard J. Finnegan, Chicago, city editor of the Chicago Journal, and W. W. Marr, Springfield, Chief State Highway Engineer of Illinois, appointed by Governor Dunne; Indiana, Vice-President Thomas J. Taggart, French Lick, and Carl G. Fisher, Indianapolis, appointed by Governor Raulston; Ohio, Vice-President Harry L. Gordon, Cincinnati, former Lieutenant-Governor, and Col. George W. Harris, Cincinnati, Sinking Fund Trustee for Queen and Crescent Route; Kentucky, Vice-President H. B. Hanger, Richmond, President contracting firm of Mason, Hanger & Co., and Claud B. Mercer, Hardinsburg, lawyer and capitalist, appointed by Governor Rye; Georgia, Vice-President W. T. Anderson, Macon, editor Macon Telegraph, and Clark Howell, Atlanta, editor Atlanta Constitution, appointed by Governor Slaton; Florida, Vice-President George W. Saxon, Tallahassee, banker and capitalist, and S. A. Belcher, Miami, Chairman Dade County Road Commission and originator of Belcher system of road construction, appointed by Governor Trammell.

The other directors, named by founders who subscribed $1,000 each, are as follows: Vice-President C. E. Huston, Chattanooga, manufacturer and capitalist; T. R. Preston, Chattanooga, President of the Hamilton National Bank; M. E. Temple, Chattanooga, furniture manufacturer; John A. Patten, Chattanooga, President Chattanooga Medicine Company; Richard Hardy, Chattanooga, manufacturer; Secretary W. R. Long, Chattanooga, manufacturer and capitalist, and A. F. Sanford, Knoxville, Tenn., editor of the Knoxville Journal-Tribune.

NATIONAL CORN EXPOSITION.

Organized and held annually under the direction of the National Corn Association. Association officers are: President—E. D. Funk, Shirley, Ill. First Vice-President—E. G. Montgomery, Ithaca, N. Y. Secretary and Treasurer—C. P. Bull, St. Paul. Thirty-five States are represented by Vice-Presidents.

The National Corn Exposition has been held six times. The first was in Chicago, 1907; the second and third in Omaha, Neb., in 1908 and 1909; the fourth in Columbus, Ohio, 1911; the fifth at Columbia, S. Car., 1913, and the sixth in Dallas, Tex., 1914.

The slogan of the National Corn Exposition is the "Betterment of Agriculture." The exposition is composed of three prominent factors: (1) Educational exhibits from twenty-five to thirty-five State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, demonstrating experimental work and principles and facts in agriculture. (2) Competitive exhibits from thirty or more States, selected from State contests. (3) Comprehensive and complete educational exhibits from the Federal Department of Agriculture, devoted to many phases of agricultural endeavor.

Four trophies are awarded: (1) Indiana Ten Ear Trophy, for best ten ears of corn, value $1,000. (2) Colorado Oat Trophy, for best peck of oats, value $1,500. (3) Kellogg Single Ear Trophy, for best single ear, value $1,000. Farm and Fireside Wheat Trophy for best peck of wheat, $48,000 in cash premiums will be offered. Also other smaller trophies for small grains.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF FAIRS AND EXPOSITIONS.

The American Association of Fairs and Expositions comprises fifty-two fairs and expositions of the United States and Canada which have reached the stability of permanent institutions. In most instances they are State, interstate or provincial organizations, and thus represent the North American Continent in the progress made in agriculture, horticulture, stock raising, manufacturing, domestic science, public welfare, education, transportation, good roads, art, etc., etc. Secretary—Charles Downing, Indianapolis, Ind.

SAN DIEGO PANAMA-CALIFORNIA INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The Panama-California International Exposition in San Diego is to be continued during 1916. Attendance during 1915 about 2,000,000.

It has already secured foreign exhibits from Canada, Switzerland, Russia, Spain, Holland, Italy, Brazil, Guatemala, and Honduras. In addition to these foreign exhibits the exposition has many American commercial displays, as well as participation by many of the Western States and counties. The United States Government will also have a comprehensive exhibit. The Panama-California Exposition closed December 31, 1915, and the Panama-California International Exposition, which will be held during 1916, has taken up the work right where it was left off December 31. President—G. A. Davidson, San Diego, Cal.

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco was open from February 20 to December 4, 1915. The total attendance was 18,871,957. The last day made the record, 458,558 persons having passed through the turnstiles. The Fine Arts Palace will remain open until May 1, 1916.

INTEREST PAID BY FARMERS ON LOANS.

In March, 1913, the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture mailed nearly 3,000 letters to country banks of the United States, containing the following request and explanation:

This bureau proposes to make an inquiry each year concerning the average rate of interest paid by farmers on loans, the reports to be compiled into averages by States, and so published in the Crop Reporter, a publication of this department. The purpose of the inquiry is to show the average differences which prevail in the different States, and, as the inquiry proceeds, to show the change in the average rates from year to year. It is hoped that you will assist us by reporting for your community.

Question 1. What is the average of the current rates of interest paid to banks by farmers for 3 to 6 months' loans. (Rate which will represent as nearly as possible the average of all such loans, secured and unsecured.)

Question 2. What was the average for similar loans a year ago?
About 90 per cent. of the banks replied. Their replies were tabulated and averaged, with the following results:

NEW YORK STATE PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION LEAGUE.

Its purpose is to have every party or group of voters represented in every lawmaking body in exact proportion to the number of votes they cast, thus assuring, what is not possible under our present method, that legislative bodies will be practically a condensation of the whole voting population. For example: If five parties, or temporary groups, had 30 per cent., 25 per cent., 20 per cent., 15 per cent., and 10 per cent. respectively of the total vote cast for members of a legislative body, each would have exactly the same percentage of the members of such assemblage.

The league states there are several ways by which the above result can be accomplished with the secret ballot now universally used. Practically every method provides that each party or group shall elect as many representatives as they have quotas of votes; a quota being found by dividing the whole number of votes cast for all candidates by the number of legislators, preferably seven or more, to be chosen in each district. Each voter may vote for but one candidate. The difference between the several methods applies only to the rule for transferring surplus and other non-effective votes received by a candidate. The league does not advocate any particular method.

TREASURERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

CONTINENTAL TREASURER—The germ of the Treasury Department was planted when, on July 29, 1775, the Continental Congress appointed two Treasurers. The appointments were Michael Hillegas and George Clymer. The latter soon resigned to accept his seat as delegate to the Congress. Mr. Hillegas discharged the duties of Treasurer until September 11, 1789. The Treasury Department was organized under the act of September 2, 1789. Strictly speaking, it was reorganized, for the department, under various names, had been in existence since 1775. The Constitution went into effect March 4, 1789. Washington was inaugurated as the first President of the United States April 30, 1789. It will thus be seen that Mr. Hillegas was Treasurer for nearly five months after the inauguration of Washington, and for nine days after the Treasury Department was organized under the Constitution.

FEDERAL IMPEACHMENTS IN HISTORY.

The Constitution of the United States, Article II., Section IV., provides that civil officers of the United States may be removed from office on impeachment and conviction of treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors; that the House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachment, and the Senate the sole power to try impeachments; that the Vice-President shall preside at impeachments except when the President is tried, when the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall preside; and that two-thirds of the members present must vote for conviction before a person impeached shall be deemed guilty. Only nine persons have been impeached and tried before the Senate, and only three of them have been convicted. The record is as follows:

William Blount, Senator from Tennessee; impeached July 7, 1797, for conspiring to wage war with Spain in favor of Great Britain, to excite the Cherokee Indians against Spain, and to create disaffection among the Indians toward the United States; trial, December 17, 1798, to January 14, 1799; vote, 11 guilty, 14 not guilty; verdict, acquittal.

John Pickens, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of New Hampshire; impeached 1803 for drunkenness and disregard of the terms of the statutes; trial, March 3 to March 12, 1803; vote, 19 guilty, 7 not guilty; verdict, guilty; punishment, removal from office.

Samuel Chase, Associate-Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; impeached 804 for misconduct at trials of persons charged with breach of the Sedition Law; trial, November 30, 1804, to March 1, 1805; vote, 9 guilty, 30 not guilty, and 15 guilty, 19 not guilty, on different counts; verdict, acquittal.

James Peck, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of Missouri; impeached for tyrannous treatment of counsel, 1830; trial, May 11 to May 30, 1830, and from December 13, 1830, to January 31, 1831; vote, 21 guilty, 22 not guilty; verdict, acquittal.

West H. Humphreys, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of Tennessee; impeached 1862 for supporting the secession movement and unlawfully acting as Judge of the Confederate District Court; trial May 22 to June 26, 1862; vote, 32 guilty, 4 not guilty, and 38 guilty; verdict, guilty; punishment, removal from office.

Andrew Johnson, President of the United States; impeached for usurpation of the law, corrupt use of the veto power, interference at elections and high crimes and misdemeanors; trial, March 30 to May 26, 1868; vote, 35 guilty, 19 not guilty; verdict, acquittal.

William W. Belknap, Secretary of War of the United States; impeached for accepting bribes; trial, April 5 to August 1, 1876; vote, 5 guilty, 25 not guilty; verdict, acquittal.

Charles Swayne, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of Florida; impeached 1905 for misconduct in office; trial, February 6 to February 27, 1905; vote, 55 guilty, 37 not guilty; verdict, acquittal.

Robert W. Archbald, Associate Judge of United States Commerce Court, was impeached July 11, 1912, on thirteen articles charging him with corrupt collusion with coal mine owners and railroad officials while in office. The Senate began his trial December 3, 1912, and ended January 13, 1913. Verdict guilty; removed from office.

On June 12, 1914, District Judge Alston G. Dayton was impeached. Proceedings dropped March 3, 1915.

* With suburbs. † Estimated. ‡ American Consular report.

(a) New York City, including all boroughs, on Dec. 2, 1915, according to census of Police Department of New York City. According to New York State Census of 1913, the population was 5,006,484, making the estimate for population of Greater New York, including Westchester and New Jersey suburbs, 7,500,000. (b) Population of Registration London in 1911 was 4,529,964, and with metropolitan and city police districts, 7,252,963. (c) Population of some cities shown in this list has been, temporarily at least, materially affected by the war in Europe. (d) Population figures of Japanese cities subject to later revision when obtainable.

NOTE.—The population of Chinese cities other than those mentioned in this list is omitted, because reports respecting it are untrustworthy. There are many Chinese cities omitted from this list whose inhabitants are numbered by rumor at from 200,000 to 1,000,000, but there is reason to believe that the estimates in many instances covered districts of country bearing the same names as the cities, instead of definite municipalities.

FOREIGNERS IN THE UNITED STATES.

The Census Bureau issued a bulletin in August, 1914, making the following statement regarding foreigners in the United States in 1910:

There were 13,515,886 persons of foreign birth in the United States in April, 1910. These 13,515,886 foreigners constituted 14.7 per cent. of the total population of the United States in 1910; 13,345,545 of them were whites, the remainder, which was only 170,341, representing chiefly Japanese and Chinese. The foreign born in the United States in 1900 numbered 10,341,276 and constituted 13.6 per cent. of the total population.

FOREIGN-BORN WHITE BY COUNTRIES.

The figures on the foreign-born population of the United States have no distinction as to the length of residence in this country; they include those who have been here fifty years or more as well as immigrants who arrived during the first three months of 1910, just before the census was taken. The increase in the number of foreign born from year to year does not represent necessarily the number of immigrants who come to the United States. The foreign born are constantly being drawn upon by return migration and by death, and immigration must make up for these losses before there can be any increase in the total number.

The figures given above relate only to conditions as shown by the reports of the last Federal Census, taken as of April 15, 1910, and no cognizance is taken of the large body of immigrants who have come to this country since that date.

NATIVE LANGUAGE OF THE FOREIGN WHITE STOCK IN THE UNITED STATES.

The Census Bureau on December 2, 1913, published the following table showing the mother tongues of the foreign-born population and natives of foreign-born parents in the United States, according to the Census of 1910.

The full list of mother tongues as reported at the Thirteenth Census is given for the total foreign white stock (which includes the foreign born and natives of foreign or mixed parentage) and for the foreign-born whites separately, as follows:

| MOTHER TONGUE.                    | Total Foreign White Stock, 1910. | Foreign-Born White. | MOTHER TONGUE.                            | Total Foreign White Stock, 1910. | Foreign-Born White. |

NOTE—NEW YORK STATE ENUMERATION:

The Secretary of State of New York in 1915 made an enumeration of the population of the State. Primarily this enumeration was for the purpose of supplying census facts to the Constitutional Convention then in progress. As soon therefore as the enumeration was completed the statistics were submitted to the convention. It was known, however, that owing to the haste with which the figures were compiled there were errors of a minor nature in them which should be corrected before the Legislature of 1916 met, which would have the duty of reapportioning the Senate and Assembly Districts on the basis of these very figures.

This work of a careful re-examination and correction of the figures of the enumerators and compiling of final results has been in progress at the Enumeration Bureau of the Secretary of State in Albany for months past, and was still being pushed when this edition of the ALMANAC went to press, on December 15, 1915. Some of the cities, notably the city of New York, was not yet complete—the final figures for New York and its boroughs, it was stated, would not be in their final form much, if at all, before the Legislature met in January, 1916.

In the mean time the Police Department of New York City has made a census. Upon December 2, 1915, the result of this census was stated to be as follows: Manhattan, 2,295,761; Brooklyn, 1,825,534; Bronx, 649,726; Richmond, 93,631; Queens, 389,233. Total, 5,253,885.

Contrasted with the announced result of the State enumeration made in June and July (figures which are still under correction, as stated above), the result was as follows:

Manhattan—Police census, 2,295,761; State, 2,103,206.

Brooklyn—Police census, 1,825,534; State, 1,803,191.

Bronx—Police census, 649,726; State, 612,493.

Richmond—Police census, 93,631; State, 94,571.

Queens—Police census, 389,233; State, 395,651.

CITIES UNDER COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

(From a Report of the Census Bureau of June 12, 1914.)

Washington, D. C., was the first city in the United States to be governed for any number of years by a commission, coming under that form of government by the terms of an act of Congress that became effective June 11, 1878. The application of this form of government to the Capital of the United States grew out of the relation of the National Government to this particular city, and the city of Washington was not considered as an example to other municipalities with reference to its form of government.

The great need of improvement in sanitary conditions of Memphis, Tenn., following a severe visitation of yellow fever in 1878, combined with the fact that at the time the city had incurred an indebtedness equal to its authority for borrowing money, led the Legislature of Tennessee in 1879 to put an end to the existence of the city as a municipal corporation and to create in its stead a taxing district whose affairs were conducted by a small body of officers having practically the authority of the Commissioners in the cities under the new or commission form of government. After the recovery of the city from the difficulties which made this form of government necessary, Memphis was reincorporated as a city, with its earlier form of government, and its experience was not deemed such as to encourage the substitution of this form of government for that of Mayor and council.

A destructive storm having overwhelmed Galveston, Tex., on September 1, 1900, and left the city prostrate financially, as Memphis had been in 1878, Galveston was placed under a government by a commission in 1901. The experience of Galveston under this form of government was such that in 1905 it was adopted by Houston, Tex. Two other cities, having 30,000 inhabitants, adopted it in 1907, two in 1908, eight in 1909, six in 1910, fifteen in 1911, nine in 1912, twenty-one in 1913, and three in 1914.

THE CITY MANAGER PLAN.

An act of the Ohio Legislature, approved May 6, 1913, provided for a form of municipal government to be known as the "City Manager plan," the council to consist of five members in cities of less than 10,000 inhabitants, of seven members in cities of from 10,000 to 25,000 inhabitants, and of nine members in cities having over 25,000 inhabitants, the council being elected in all cases for a term of four years. This council is to constitute a governing body with power to pass ordinances, adopt regulations, appoint a chief administrative officer to be known as the "City Manager," fix his salary, approve all appointments made by him (except as otherwise provided), and appoint a Civil Service Commission and all boards or commissions created by ordinances.

The following list of cities under Commission form of Government revised to October 1, 1915.

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT.

The salaries of Justices of the Supreme Court are: First and Second Districts, $17,500; remaining Districts, $10,000; but non-resident Justices, sitting in the Appellate Divisions of the First and Second Departments, receive the same compensation as the Justices in those Departments; if assigned to duty in the First and Second Districts, other than in the Appellate Division, their additional compensation is $10 per day.

MAYORS OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

BEFORE the Revolution the Mayor was appointed by the Governor of the Province; and from 1784 to 1820 by the Appointing Board of the State of New York, of which the Governor was the chief member. From 1820 to the amendment of the Charter, in 1830, the Mayor was appointed by the Common Council. In 1898 the term of the first Mayor of Greater New York (Van Wyck) began.

THE REJECTED CONSTITUTION OF NEW YORK.

The voters of New York State at the general election of 1915 rejected a Constitution submitted to them by the Constitutional Convention of that year. Below are given the chief amendments to the present Constitution suggested:

Article I., Section 6. That no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on presentment or indictment of a grand jury—except in cases of impeachment and in cases of militia when in actual service and the land and naval forces in time of war. This, however, was qualified by the statement that any person might waive indictment and trial by jury on a charge of felony punishable by not exceeding five years' imprisonment or of an indictable misdemeanor. Lastly, in any court the party accused in any criminal case should have the right to at least one appeal.

Article I., Section 7. Providing that when private property is taken for any public use the compensation to be made for it shall be ascertained by the Supreme Court or by one or more Supreme Court Commissions or within the Third and Fourth Judicial Departments and such part of the Second Judicial Department not within the city of New York by not less than three Commissioners appointed by a court of record. Also that where the proceedings are instituted by a civil division of the State compensation must be made before the property is taken, unless the Supreme Court, after hearing, because of public necessity, should otherwise direct. Finally, that the owners of swamp lands might construct dikes upon the lands of others to drain their lands, and that the Legislature might also authorize cities, in order to establish a uniform system of streets, to take real property within an abandoned street or highway and to sell and lease it.

Article I., Section 15. Abolished peacemakers' courts of the Tonawanda nation, the peacemakers' courts and surrogates' courts of the Seneca nation and all other agencies of the Indian tribes and nations in so far as they exercise judicial functions; and applied the general laws of the State to all Indians within the State.

Article I., Section 16. Continuing in force Colonial or State laws not repealed or altered.

Article I., Section 19. Declares that nothing contained in the Constitution should be construed to limit the power of the Legislature to enact laws for the payment either by employers, or by employers and employees, or otherwise, either directly or through a State or other system of insurance, or otherwise, of compensation for injuries to or occupational diseases of employees, or for death of employees resulting from such injuries or diseases without regard to fault as cause thereof.

Article II., Section 4. Provided that laws should be made for the regulation of elections and for ascertaining the electors who should be entitled to the right of suffrage and for their annual registration, which should be completed at least fifteen days before each general election; and declaring that in cities and villages having 5,000 inhabitants or more, according to the last preceding Federal or State census or enumeration, electors shall be registered upon personal application. Laws were authorized permitting travelling men to register five months in advance of the day of election.

Article II., Section 6. Provided for the equal representation of the two great political parties on boards charged with the duty of registering "electors" or of distributing ballots at the polls to electors.

Article III., Section 3. Declares that "the State shall be divided into fifty districts, to be called Senate districts, each of which shall choose one Senator.

Article III., Section 4. Provided that the Senate districts should be altered in 1916 upon the enumeration made in 1915. It was also provided that no county should have more than one-third of all the Senators, and no two counties or territory thereof as organized on January 1, 1895, "which are adjoining counties or which are separated only by public waters (as, for instance,

New York and Kings Counties) should have more than one-half of all the Senators." The provision was retained by which an enlargement of the Senate might be made, namely: "The ratio for apportioning Senators shall always be obtained by dividing the number of inhabitants, excluding aliens, by fifty, and the Senate shall always be composed of fifty members, except that if any county having three or more Senators at the time of any apportionment shall be entitled on such ratio to an additional Senator or Senators, such additional Senator or Senators shall be given to such county in addition to the fifty Senators and the whole number of Senators shall be increased to that extent."

Article III., Section 5. Provided for the apportionment of Assemblymen by the Legislature of 1916 and that the apportionment should be based upon the enumeration of 1915. The provision that every county in the State except the county of Hamilton should be entitled at least to one member was retained. It was also provided that each county should be divided up into Assembly districts by the various Boards of Supervisors or by the Board of Aldermen, basing such a division of districts upon the last preceding State, or if no State enumeration shall have been taken within a period of five years prior to such apportionment, then according to the preceding Federal census.

The proposed Constitution at this point omitted a present provision that no member of the Legislature should receive any civil appointment within the State or the Senate of the United States from the Governor, the Governor and Senate, or from the Legislature, or from any city government, during the time for which he shall have been elected.

Article III., Section 8. Increased to $2,500 the annual salary of each member of the Legislature and also provided that the members of each house should "also receive the railroad fare actually paid in going to and returning from their place of meeting on the most usual route, but not oftener than once each week during any session of the Legislature."

Article III., Section 9. Provided that a majority of the members elected to each house should constitute a quorum to do business; and that if the Lieutenant-Governor become Governor the temporary President of the Senate should become Lieutenant-Governor for the remainder of the term; and that if the Speaker of the Assembly should be unable to perform the duties of the office or be Acting Governor the Assembly might choose a temporary Speaker.

Article III., Section 10. Authorizing the Legislature to convene on its own motion to take action in the matter of removal of a Judge of the Court of Appeals or Justice of the Supreme Court; and, secondly, that the Assembly of its own motion might convene for the purposes of impeachment.

Article III., Section 11. Omitted a provision of the present Constitution making ineligible for election to the Legislature any man who at the time of his election or within 100 days previous thereto has been a member of Congress, a civil or military officer under the United States or an officer under any city government.

Article III., Section 12. Providing for the publication of the proceedings of the Legislature from day to day.

Article III., Section 16. Omitting a provision of the present Constitution authorizing a Governor or Acting Governor to certify to the necessity of the immediate passage of a bill by the Legislature.

Article III., Section 19. Declaring that the Legislature shall not pass a private or local bill granting to any corporation, association or individual the right to prove a claim against the State or against any civil division thereof; or a bill authorizing any civil division of the State to allow or pay any claim or account.

Article III., Section 21. Declaring that no public moneys or property shall be appropriated for the construction or improvement of any building, bridge, highway, dike, canal feeder, waterway or other work until plans and estimates of the cost of such work shall have been filed with the Secretary of State by the Superintendent of Public Works, together with a certificate by him as to whether or not in his judgment the general interests of the State there require that such improvement be made at State expense. This provision was not to apply to grade-crossing, appropriations or to highway appropriations.

Article III., Section 22. Provided that no money should ever be paid out of the State Treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation by law; nor unless such payment be made "not later than three months after the close of the fiscal year next succeeding that in which such appropriation was made."

Article III., Section 25. Authorizing the Legislature by general laws to establish different forms of government for counties not wholly included in a city—when such form of government shall have been approved by its electors. This section also contained the following new provision: "No local or special law relating to a county or counties, except to a county or counties wholly included within a city, shall be enacted except upon request by resolution of the governing body of the county or counties to be affected."

Article III., Section 26. The Legislature was authorized to confer upon any elective or appointive county officer or officers any of the powers and duties now exercised by the towns of any county or the officer or officers thereof relating to highways, public safety and the care of the poor.

Article III., Section 27. Making unlawful to grant any extra compensation to any public officer.

Article III., Section 28. Declaring that no person imprisoned in a State prison, penitentiary, jail or reformatory should be allowed to work at any trade wherein his work should be sold to any person.

Article III., Section 29. Added a new provision as follows: "The Legislature shall have the power to regulate or prohibit manufacturing in tenement houses."

Article IV., "Increasing from $10,000 annually to $20,000 annually the salary of the Governor who will be next elected and who will enter upon his administration on January 1, 1917."

Article IV., Section 6. Declaring that if the office of Governor be vacant the Lieutenant-Governor shall become Governor, and that if the Governor be under impeachment or be unable to discharge the powers and duties of the office or be absent from the State the Lieutenant-Governor shall act as Governor during such inability, absence or the pendency of such impeachment.

Article IV., Section 7. Providing that if the office of Governor be vacant and there be no Lieutenant-Governor, the vacancy shall be filled for the remainder of the term at the next general election happening not less than three months after the vacancy occurs; and in the interval the duties of Governor be executed by the temporary President of the Senate, or, if there should be none, by the Speaker of the Assembly, either of these officers to become Governor "until the first day of the political year next succeeding the election at which the office of Governor shall be filled." Secondly, that if the office of Governor should be vacant and the Lieutenant-Governor be under impeachment or unable to discharge the powers and duties of the office of Governor or be absent from the State the temporary President of the Senate should act as Governor during such inability, absence or the pendency of such impeachment. Lastly, that if the temporary President of the Senate should be unable to discharge the powers and duties of the office of Governor or be absent from the State the Speaker of the Assembly should act as Governor during such inability or absence.

Article V., Section 1. This provided for the preparation of a State budget by the Governor. The head of each department of the State Government, except the Legislature and the Judiciary, was to submit to him itemized estimates of their needs for the approaching fiscal year. The Governor was to revise these estimates according to his judgment and submit to the Legislature, on or before the first day of February next succeeding, "a budget containing a complete plan of proposed expenditures and estimated revenues." Itemized estimates of the financial needs of the Legislature and of the Judiciary were to be included in the budget without revision, but with such recommendations as he might think proper. The Legislature might not alter an appropriation bill submitted by the Governor except to strike out or reduce items therein; but this provision did not apply to items for the Legislature or the Judiciary. It was further provided that neither house of the Legislature should consider further appropriations until the appropriation bills proposed by the Governor should have been finally acted on by both houses; nor should such further appropriations be then made except by separate bills, each for a single work or object, which bills should be subject to the Governor's approval.

Article VI., Section 1. Divided the civil departments into seventeen in number: law, finance, accounts, treasury, taxation, State, public works, health, agriculture, charities and correction, banking, insurance, labor and industry, education, public utilities, conservation and civil service; with as their heads the Attorney-General, the Comptroller, a Commissioner of Accounts, a Treasurer, a State Tax Commissioner, a Secretary of State, a Superintendent of Public Works, a Commissioner of Health, a Commissioner of Agriculture, a Secretary of Charities and Correction, a Superintendent of Banks, a Superintendent of Insurance, an Industrial Commission or Commissioner, the University of the State of New York, Public Works Commissioners, a Conservation Commissioner and a Civil Service Commissioner. This section also provided for the election at a general State election of an Attorney-General and a Comptroller, and the appointment by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, of an Industrial Commission or Commissioner, Public Service Commissioners and three Civil Service Commissioners.

Article VI., Section 4. It provided that the Governor should appoint the heads of all departments, unless otherwise provided in the Constitution, and might be removed by him in his discretion.

Article VI., Section 5. Provided that the Attorney-General and the Comptroller might be removed from office by impeachment.

Article VI., Section 6. Provided that all appointed heads of departments should be subject to impeachment or they might be removed by the Senate by a vote of two-thirds of all its members.

Article VI., Section 7. Constituting as the Canal Board the Commissioners of the Land Office and the Commissioners of the Canal Fund the following officials: Lieutenant-Governor, Speaker of the Assembly, Secretary of State, Attorney-General, Comptroller, Treasurer and Superintendent of Public Works.

Article VI., Section 8. Declaring that the article should not apply to military or naval affairs, nor to property from time to time devoted to military or naval purposes.

The article abolished the office of State Engineer and Surveyor.

Article VII., Section 1. Provided for the creation of a Department of Conservation, to consist of nine members, "to serve without compensation and to be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate for terms" to expire in nine successive years, the first ending on January 1, 1917, and their successors to be appointed for terms of nine years. One Commissioner was to reside in each judicial district.

Article VII., Section 2. Authorized the Conservation Department to reforest lands in the Forest Preserve and to construct fire trails therefrom for purposes of reforestation and fire protection solely.

Article VII., Section 4. Authorized the Legislature to authorize the use by the city of New York for its municipal water supply of lands now belonging to the State located in the towns of Hurley and Shandaken, in Ulster County, and in the town of Lexington, in the county of Greene, after paying just compensation.

Article VII., Section 5. Directing the Legislature to make provision annually for the purchase of real property within the Adirondack and Catskill parks, the reforestation of lands and the making of boundary and valuation surveys.

Article VIII., Section 1. Providing for the election of three additional Justices of the Supreme Court to take the places of those transferred to the Court of Appeals, of two additional Justices of the same court in the First Judicial District, together with such additional Justices as might be authorized by the Legislature.

Article VIII., Section 2. Providing that the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the First Department should consist of not less than ten nor more than twelve Justices of the Supreme Court, and the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, should have seven members; and that the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, might sit in two parts. Secondly, it was provided in this section that the other Justices of the Appellate Divisions of the Supreme Court should be designated from all the Justices elected to the Supreme Court. It was also provided that in case of the absence or inability to act of a Justice of any Appellate Division of the Supreme Court the Presiding Justice thereof might assign any of the Justices of the Supreme Court to sit in the Appellate Division during such absence or inability, but no Justice so designated should sit longer than four months in any year. It was further provided that whenever an Appellate Division became unable to dispose of its business within a reasonable time a majority of the Presiding Justices of the several departments might transfer such number of the pending appeals from the department affected to any other department for hearing and determination. Lastly, it was provided that on appeals from judgments of conviction in criminal cases the Appellate Division, or the Appellate Term, as the case might be, might reduce the sentence imposed by the trial court or Judge.

Article VIII., Section 3. Providing that there should be an Appellate Term of the Supreme Court in the First and in the Second Department consisting of not less than three nor more than five Justices of the Supreme Court; and that this Appellate Term should hear all appeals from judgments and orders in civil cases made by county courts within such departments and all appeals from judgments and orders made by the City Court of the city of New York, the Municipal Court of the city of New York and the Court of Special Sessions of the city of New York and by all other inferior courts, except courts held by Justices of the Peace, City Magistrates' Courts and Courts of Special Sessions held by one City Magistrate only.

Article VIII., Section 6. Making it the duty of the Legislature to act with all convenient speed upon the report of the Board of Statutory Consolidation transmitted to the Legislature on April 21, 1915, and to enact a brief and simple civil practice act and to adopt a separate body of civil practice rules for the regulation of procedure in the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court and county courts. Secondly, at intervals of not less than five years the Legislature was authorized to appoint a commission to consider and report what changes, if any, there should be in the law and rules governing civil procedure. Further, the Legislature was forbidden to "enact any law prescribing, regulating or changing the civil procedure in the Court of Appeals, Supreme Court or county courts unless the Judges or Justices empowered to make and amend civil practice rules should certify that legislation was necessary. It was lastly stated that after the adoption of the civil practice rules by the Legislature the power to alter and amend such rules and to make, alter and amend civil practice rules should vest and remain in the courts of the State, to be exercised by the Judges of the Court of Appeals and the Justices of the Appellate Divisions of the Supreme Court or by such Judges or Justices of the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court and the county courts as the Legislature might provide.

Article VIII., Section 7. Continued the Court of Claims and made it a court of record.

Article VIII., Section 8. Authorizing the Appellate Divisions of the Supreme Court in the First and Second Departments to appoint Supreme Court Commissioners for each of the counties within the city of New York to determine the compensation to be paid whenever private property is taken for a public use when such compensation is not made by the State. These Commissioners might also be designated as referees and perform such other duties as might be devolved upon them by special order or rule of court by the Appellate Divisions or by the civil practice rules. The Legislature was also authorized to permit of the appointment of Supreme Court Commissioners in the Third and Fourth Judicial Departments and in the counties in the Second Department not within the city of New York. These Commissioners were not to practice as attorneys or counsellors in any court of this State or of the United States.

Article VIII., Section 9. Provided that the three Supreme Court Judges now serving as Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals by designation of the Governor should be Associate Judges until their terms as Supreme Court Judges expired; and that in case of the temporary absence or inability to act of any Judge of the Court of Appeals the court might designate any Justice of the Supreme Court to serve as Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals during such absence or inability to act, but for a period not exceeding four months in any year. Further it was provided that for the purpose of disposing with reasonable speed of the accumulation of causes now pending in the Court of Appeals the Court should on or before March 1, 1916, designate not less than four nor more than six Justices of the Supreme Court to serve as Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals until the causes pending on the calendar should be reduced to one hundred, but not later than December 31, 1917, when they should return to the Supreme Court. During such period the Court of Appeals should sit in two parts, each of which should consist of not more than seven Judges. Whenever also on January 1 later of any year after the present accumulation of causes had been disposed of there should be more than 500 causes pending and undisposed of, the Court should in like manner add Justices of the Supreme Court to its membership and sit in two parts, "but not later than until the expiration of one year from the date of such designations," when the Justices designated should return to the Supreme Court. It was also provided that the Court of Appeals might designate Justices of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court as Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals, and that in this case the Appellate Division might designate other Justices of the Supreme Court to sit in the Appellate Division during the absence of regularly assigned Justices of such division serving as Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals, "in case the business of the Appellate Division should render such action necessary."

Article VIII., Section 11. Provided that after December 31, 1915, the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals, "except where the judgment is of death, or where the Appellate Division on reversing or modifying a judgment makes new findings of fact and renders judgment thereon," should be limited to the review of questions of law. It was further provided that appeals might be taken as of right to the Court of Appeals in the following cases only:

"1. Where the judgment is of death.

"2. From a judgment or order entered upon the decision of an Appellate Division of the Supreme Court which finally determines an action or special proceeding where is directly involved the construction of the Constitution of the State or of the United States, or where one or more of the Justices who heard the case dissents from the decision of the court, or where the judgment of the trial court is reversed or modified.

"6. From an order of an Appellate Division of the Supreme Court granting a new trial where the appellant stipulates that upon affirmance judgment absolute shall be rendered against him." The Court of Appeals might also allow an appeal in any case where in its opinion a question of law was involved which ought to be reviewed. The Court of Appeals was authorized to determine the qualifications and prescribe the rules regulating the admission to practice of attorneys and counsellors in the courts of the State.

Article VIII., Section 14. Surrogates were added to the list of Judges who should not hold office after reaching 70 years of age. It was stated that each Justice of the Supreme Court should receive an annual salary of $10,000; those assigned to the Appellate Divisions of the Third and Fourth Departments, $12,000 each; the Justices of the First and Second Departments what they are now receiving, $17,600; and Justices of the Third and Fourth Departments designated for duty in the First or the Second Judicial Departments $20 a day for expenses. Except in the case of the consolidation of the offices of County Judge and Surrogate or to make the compensation of the Judges of the Court of Appeals equal to that of any Justice of the Supreme Court, it was provided that the compensation of a Judge or Justice of any court of record in the State should neither be increased nor decreased during the term of office for which he should be elected or appointed.

Article VIII., Section 15. Declared on the trial of an impeachment against the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor neither the Lieutenant-Governor nor the temporary President of the Senate should act as a member of the court.

Article VIII., Section 16. Abolished the County Judges in the counties of Kings, Queens, Richmond and Bronx and made the Judges of these courts until the end of their terms Judges of the Court of General Sessions.

Article VIII., Section 19. Provided that Justices of the Peace, City Magistrates and all other judicial officers whose election or appointment was not otherwise provided for might be elected in the several cities of the State or in any boroughs contained within a city or within districts created for that purpose or might be appointed by some local authorities of the several cities.

Article VIII., Section 20. Provided that after January 1, 1917, the Court of General Sessions of the City and County of New York should have the same jurisdiction and powers throughout the city of New York as it now possesses within the county of New York. It added to the present court the County Judges of the counties of Kings, Queens, Richmond and Bronx, and created a Court of General Sessions consisting of seven Judges residing in and elected by the electors within the county of New York, five Judges resident in and elected by the electors in the county of Kings, and one Judge resident in and elected by the electors in each of the counties of Queens, Richmond and Bronx.

Article VIII., Section 21. Continued the City Court of the City of New York and provided that it should have the same jurisdiction and power throughout the city of New York as it now possesses within the county of New York and the county of Bronx and original jurisdiction in actions for the recovery of money only in which the complaint demands judgment for a sum not exceeding $3,000. It was also provided that there should be five additional Judges of this court, two to be elected in Kings County and one each in the counties of Bronx, Richmond and Queens.

Article VIII., Section 22. Authorized the Legislature to establish Children's Courts and Courts of Domestic Relations.

Article VIII., Section 25. The Legislature was directed to provide for the speedy publication of civil practice rules and rules of court and the collection, compilation and publication annually of the civil and criminal judicial statistics of the State.

Article VIII., Section 28.—The Legislature was authorized to provide for the appointment of a Commissioner of Jurors in any county; in a county in the First and Second Judicial Districts by the respective Appellate Divisions of the Supreme Court and in a county in the other judicial districts by the Justices of the Supreme Court resident in the judicial district embracing such county.

Article IX., Section 2. Authorized the State to contract debts in anticipation of the receipt of taxes and revenues, direct and indirect, for the purposes and within the amounts of appropriations theretofore made. Bonds or other obligations for the money so borrowed should be issued and should, with the interest thereon, be paid from such taxes and revenues within one year from the date of issue.

Article IX., Section 4. Declared that except debts specified in sections 2 and 3 of the article (to contract debts in anticipation of taxes and revenues, and to repel invasion, suppress insurrection or defend the State in war) all debts contracted by the State after November 2, 1915, "pursuant to an authorization theretofore heretofore or hereafter made and each portion of any such debt from time to time so contracted, irrespective of the terms of such authorization, shall be paid in equal annual instalments, the first of which shall be payable not more than one year, and the last of which shall be payable not more than fifty years after such debt or portion thereof shall have been contracted." It was further provided that "if such debt hereafter authorized shall be contracted for a period longer than that of the probable life of the work or object for which the debt is to be contracted, to be determined by general laws, which determination shall be conclusive." Lastly, it was provided that "the Legislature may from time to time alter the rate of interest to be paid upon any State debt which has been or may be authorized pursuant to the provisions of this section or upon any part of such debt; provided, however, that the rate of interest shall not be altered upon any part of such debt or upon any bond or other evidence thereof which has been or shall be created or issued before such alteration."

Article IX., Section 5. Continued the Sinking Funds before contracted for the extinguishment of the principal and payment of the interest of the debts of the State. The additional provision was made, however, that the Comptroller should each year appraise the securities held for investment in each of the Sinking Funds at their fair market value "not exceeding par" and certify to the Legislature the amount of each of such funds and the amounts which, "if thereafter annually contributed to each such fund, would with the fund and with the accumulations thereon and upon the contributions thereto computed at the rate of three per centum per annum produce at the date of maturity the amount of the debt to retire which such fund was created." The Legislature should thereupon appropriate as the contribution to each such fund for such year at least the amount thus certified. The further declaration was made that "if the income of any such fund in any year is more than a sum which if annually added to such fund would with the fund and its accumulations as aforesaid retire the debt at maturity the excess income may be applied to the interest on the debt for which the fund was created;" and that "after any sinking fund shall equal in amount the debt for which it was created no further contribution shall be made thereto except to make good any losses ascertained at the annual appraisals above mentioned and the income thereof shall be applied to the payment of the interest on such debt." It was also stated that any excess in such income not required for the payment of interest might be applied to the general fund of the State. Finally, the Legislature was authorized by general laws to provide means and authority "whereby outstanding bonds of the State, for which sinking funds are provided, may be exchanged at par for cancellation, for serial bonds of the form authorized under Section 4 of this article, upon such terms and conditions as to interest and otherwise as it may in its discretion authorize or determine, except that the debt as thus refunded shall finally mature no later and at no greater comparative cost to the State than the original debt; the determination of the Legislature as to such comparative cost shall be conclusive."

Article IX., Section 6. Provided that the Legislature should annually provide by appropriation for the payment of interest upon and instalments of the principal of all debts created on behalf of the State, except those contracted under Section 2 of the article, as the same should fall due, and for the contribution to all of the sinking funds before created by law of the amounts annually to be contributed under the provisions of Section 5 of the article. If at any time the Legislature should fail to make any such appropriation the Comptroller should set apart from the first revenues thereafter received applicable to the general fund of the State a sum sufficient to pay such interest, instalments of principal or contributions to such sinking fund, as the case might be, and should so apply the moneys thus set apart. The further declaration was made that the Comptroller might be required to set aside and apply such revenues "as aforesaid," at the suit of any holder of such bonds.

Article IX., Section 7. Provided that debts hereafter authorized for the improvement of highways should be created only in the manner provided in Section 4 of the article; and that no provision of the article should be deemed to impair or affect the validity of any debt of the State heretofore contracted or any right or obligation heretofore created between the State and any of its civil divisions.

Article IX., Section 8. Declared that the moneys authorized to be raised by the sale of highway bonds "pursuant to the law approved by vote of the people at the general election held" in 1912, "which have been apportioned to certain counties in excess of the sums to be determined by the Comptroller, which are or will be required to construct and improve the highways heretofore determined by general laws, to be constructed and improved in such counties," should be applied by the Superintendent of Public Works after appropriation by the Legislature to the construction and improvement of such State routes and portions thereof as were defined by law when such bonds were authorized and located outside of such counties as might be deemed expedient.

Article IX., Section 10. Forbade the Legislature from selling or leasing the canal terminals or to create any easement in or incumbrance on the canals or their terminals. It was also provided that the abandonment, sale or other disposition of canals or canal property should be under and pursuant to general laws only; and that the leasing of surplus waters of any of the State canals should hereafter be pursuant to general laws. Lastly, that each lease should be for a stated period, not exceeding 30 years.

Article X., Section 1. The declaration was made that the power of taxation should never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away, except as to the securities of the State or a civil division thereof; and that hereafter no exemption from taxation should be granted except by general laws and upon the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each house of the Legislature.

Article X., Section 2. The provision was made that taxes should be imposed by general laws and for public purposes only.

Article X., Section 3. The Legislature was directed to establish tax districts, none of which, unless it should be a city, should embrace more than one county "for the assessment of real property, heretofore locally assessed." In these districts the assessors should be elected by the electors of such districts or appointed by such authorities as might be designated by law. The Legislature might provide that the assessment roll of each larger district might serve for all the lesser tax districts within its boundaries. No tax district larger than a town should be established until the law providing therefor should have been adopted by a vote of a majority of the electors voting thereon. In such proposed district at an election for which provision should be made by law, The Legislature might, however, provide for the assessment by State authorities of all the property of designated classes of public service corporations.

Article XI., Section 11. Making the provisions of the present Constitution relating to the debts that are to be excluded in ascertaining the power of a city to become indebted applicable to the cities of Buffalo and Rochester.

Article XI., Section 12. Declared that the Legislature should provide for the method and limitations under which debts might be contracted by the cities, counties, towns, villages and other civil divisions of the State, to the end that such debts "shall be payable in annual instalments, the last of which shall fall due and be paid within fifty years after such debt shall have been contracted and that no such debt shall be contracted for a period longer than the probable life of the work or object for which the debt is to be contracted."

Article XI., Section 13. Declared that the Legislature should provide for a State Commission in Lunacy in which should "remain the management and fiscal control of the State hospitals for the insane (not including institutions for criminals or convicts) except in so far as such management may now or hereafter be delegated by the Legislature to local boards of managers."

Article XIII., Section 2. Provided that all city, town and village officers whose election or appointment was not provided for by the Constitution should be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some division thereof, or be appointed by such authorities thereof "as shall be provided by law." Secondly, that all other officers whose election or appointment was not provided for by the Constitution and all officers whose offices might hereafter be created by law should be elected by the people or appointed as "may be provided by law."

Article XIV., Section 4. Providing that the Governor should appoint his aides-de-camp and military secretary "and the Adjutant-General of the State" and also that the Legislature might "prescribe the number and qualifications of major-generals and aides-de-camp."

Article XIV., Section 5. Declared that all other commissioned and non-commissioned officers should be chosen or appointed in such manner and should "have such qualifications" as the Legislature might deem most conducive to the improvement of the militia.

Article XV., Section 1. Made it the duty of the Legislature "by general laws" to provide for the organization of "new" cities "in such manner as shall secure to them the exercise of the powers granted to cities in this article." It was also provided that "except as to cities having more than 100,000 population" it should be the duty of the Legislature "to restrict the powers of taxation and assessment so as to prevent abuses in taxation and assessments by any city or incorporated village."

Article XV., Section 2. Declared that the Legislature might regulate and fix the wages "and except as otherwise provided" in the article "the salaries of persons employed by the State or by any county, city, town or village." In an abstract of the Constitution the statement was made that "this section is a part of Section 1 of Article XII. of the present Constitution and modifies it only to the extent of transferring from the Legislature to cities the right to fix the salaries mentioned in the ensuing provisions of the article."

Article XV., Section 3. Provided that every city should have exclusive power to manage, regulate and control its property, affairs and municipal government, subject to the provisions of the Constitution and "subject further to the provisions of the general laws of the State, of laws applying to all the cities of the State without classification or distinction and of laws applying to a county not wholly included within a city establishing or affecting the relation between such a county and a city therein."

This power of the cities should be deemed, the Constitution said, to include among others:

(a) The power to organize and manage all departments and to regulate the powers, duties, qualifications, mode of selection, number, terms of office, compensation and method of removal of all city officers and employees, including all police and health officers and employees paid by the city and of all non-judicial officers and employees attached to courts not of record, and to regulate the compensation of all officers not chosen by the electors and of all employees of counties situated wholly within a city except assistants and employees of District-Attorneys and except officers and employees of courts of record.

(b) "The power to revise or enact amendments to its charter in relation to its property, affairs or municipal government and to enact amendments to any local or special law in relation thereto." Under this sub-division a city was authorized to adopt a revised charter or enact amendments to its charter or any existing special or local law in relation to any matter of State concern the management, regulation and control of which should have been delegated to the city by law, "until and unless the Legislature pursuant to the provisions of Section 4 of this article shall enact a law inconsistent therewith." The term "charter" was declared for the purposes of the article to include any general city law enacted for the cities of one class in so far as it applied to such city.

Under this section it was also provided that the legislative body of a city might enact amendments to its charter, subject to the approval of the Mayor and of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment if any there should be; provided, however, that in a city in which any of the members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment were not elected or in which no such body existed no such amendment of the charter should be enacted without the assent of two-thirds of all members elected to such legislative body. Every amendment which changed the framework of the government of a city or modified restrictions as to issuing bonds or contracting debts must be submitted to the Legislature in the year 1916 or before March 15 and in any year thereafter during the first week of its next regular session and should take effect as law 60 days after such submission, unless in the mean time the Legislature has disapproved the same by joint resolution. Every other such amendment should take effect upon its enactment without such submission to the Legislature.

It was also provided that at the general election in 1917 and unless its charter after one revision should otherwise provide, in every eighth year thereafter either at the general or at a special election, every city should submit to the electors the question: "Shall there be a commission to revise the charter of the city?" and might at the same time choose seven Commissioners to revise the city charter if the question should be answered in the affirmative; provided, however, that in the city of New York the number of such Commissioners should be sixteen, nine of whom should be chosen by the electors of the entire city, two by the electors of the borough of Manhattan, two by the electors of the borough of Brooklyn and one each by the electors of the boroughs of the Bronx, Queens and Richmond respectively. Such revision, when completed, should be filed in the office of the City Clerk and not less than 6 weeks after such filing should be submitted to the electors of the city at the next ensuing general election or at a special election to be called for that purpose. If such revision should be approved by a majority of the electors such revision should be submitted to the Legislature during the first week of its session in January of the year following and if not disapproved by the Legislature by joint resolution prior to the first day of July thereafter should thereupon take effect as law except as therein otherwise specified.

Article XV., Section 4. Classified all cities according to the latest Federal or State enumeration. The following declarations were then made: "The Legislature may delegate to cities for exercise within their respective local jurisdictions such of its powers of legislation as to matters of State concern as it may from time to time deem expedient. The Legislature shall pass no law relating to the property, affairs or municipal government of any city excepting such as is applicable to all the cities of the State without classification or distinction. The provisions of this article shall not be deemed to restrict the powers of the Legislature to pass laws regulating matters of State concern as distinguished from matters relating to the property, affairs or municipal government of cities. Laws affecting cities in relation to boundaries, water supply, sewerage and public improvements, involving the use of territory outside the boundaries of cities, and in relation to the government of cities in matters of State concern and applying to less than all the cities of the State without classification or distinction are defined for the purposes of this article as special city laws."

Copies of special city laws, after they were passed by the Legislature, it was provided, were to be sent to the Mayor of the city concerned for approval or disapproval within 15 days; and upon their return to the State Capitol were to be sent to the Governor for his action.

Article XV., Section 5. The present Constitution was amended to provide that all elections of city and county officers in the counties of New York, Kings, Queens, Richmond and Bronx, except to fill vacancies, should be held on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November in an odd numbered year.

Article XVII., Section 1. Provided that any amendment or amendments to the Constitution might be proposed in the Senate and Assembly and if the same should be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, "after consideration in joint session, as hereinafter provided and after the same shall have been printed and upon the desks of the members in its final form for at least five calendar legislative days prior to agreement thereon, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their journals and the yeas and nays taken thereon and referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next general election of Senators and shall be published for three months previous to the time of making choice. On the first Tuesday following the adoption by either house of the Legislature of any proposed amendment to this Constitution the two houses shall convene in joint session for the consideration thereof and thereafter the proposal shall be considered and acted upon by the houses separately. If the Legislature so next chosen, as aforesaid, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house and all the requirements for the original passage thereof shall be observed, then it shall be the duty of the Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people for approval at the general election in such manner as the Legislature shall prescribe, and if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become a part of this Constitution from and after the first day of January next after such approval."

Article XVII., Section 2. This section opened with the following declaration: "The question 'Shall there be a convention to revise and amend the Constitution?' shall be submitted to the electors of the State at each general election next ensuing the lapse of twenty successive years since the last previous submission thereof, and shall be submitted at such other general elections as the Legislature may by law provide." It was further provided that "in case a majority of the electors voting thereon shall decide in favor of a convention for such purpose the electors of every Senate district of the State as then organized shall elect three delegates at the next ensuing general election at which members of the Assembly shall be chosen and the electors of the State voting at the same election shall elect fifteen delegates-at-large. The delegates so elected shall convene at the Capitol on the first Tuesday following the completion of the canvass of the votes cast for delegates-at-large at such election and shall continue their session until the business of such convention shall have been completed." It was further provided that any proposed Constitution or Constitutional amendment which should have been adopted by such a convention should be submitted to a vote of the electors of the State at a general election which should be held not less than 90 days after the adjournment of such convention.

Article XVII., Section 3. This provided that the validity of an election upon any amendment or proposed Constitution, or the question "Shall there be a convention to revise and amend the Constitution" or upon any other question submitted to the electors of the State "and the determination whether the proposed amendment, Constitution or question has received the number of votes requisite for the adoption of such amendment or Constitution or the decision of such question" might be contested in the Supreme Court by any elector in an action in equity "brought within three months after such election against the Secretary of State and the judgment rendered shall be reviewable by the Court of Appeals."

Article XVII., Section 4. The abstract stated that provision was made in this section for embodying in the new Constitution the proposed Woman Suffrage amendment submitted by the Legislature if at the general election it was approved and ratified. Provision was also made, according to the abstract, that if the people should approve the Camal Referendum act, which was submitted to them for approval, the debt so authorized should be paid in equal annual instalments instead of through a sinking fund as provided by the act. "The purpose of this," it was stated, was "to conform to the new provision of the Constitution herewith submitted requiring serial bonds instead of sinking funds for all future debts of the State."

THE LINCOLN HIGHWAY.

The Lincoln Highway is the longest road in the world. It connects twelve States, and is laid out between New York and San Francisco, as directly as possible, consistent with the topography of the country. Its length is about 3,284 miles, and it is constantly being shortened by improvements and the elimination of curves.

The idea of an ocean-to-ocean highway was presented to the public in the early Fall of 1913, by a National proclamation issued by the Lincoln Highway Association, an organization incorporated with headquarters in Detroit, Mich. The originator of the idea was Carl G. Fisher of Indianapolis, now Vice-President of the Lincoln Highway Association. The object of the association was—

"The establishment of a continuous improved highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, open to lawful traffic of all descriptions, without toll charges, and to be of concrete wherever practicable—this highway to be known in memory of Abraham Lincoln, as the "Lincoln Highway."

National interest has attached to the development of this great thoroughfare, and the effort of the public in the States through which it passes has been devoted to its rapid improvement and marking. In the two years since the establishment and dedication of the route, the road has been marked for practically its entire distance, and construction has progressed as rapidly as possible in every State.

The Lincoln Highway Association was not organized to construct the road, but to promote and aid in its construction by the local communities, counties and States through which it passes. In round figures $3,780,000 have been spent in the improvement of the Lincoln Highway. The eastern section of the great road is almost completely hard-surfaced.

The Middle Western States have devoted every effort to the grading and maintenance of the route, and are progressing to hard-surfacing as fast as means will allow. Much work on the road has been done in the West, but it is there, particularly in the States of Utah and Nevada, that outside aid solicited by the association is particularly needed, due to the long mileages and sparse population, which makes the raising of sufficient funds from the regular road improvement sources impossible.

The following table indicates the amount spent on the Lincoln Highway during the eighteen months previous to the first of September, 1915, in each of the States crossed by the highway.

|                   |             | State Aid. |
|-------------------|-------------|------------|
| New Jersey.....   | $259,000   | $69,000   |
| Pennsylvania..... | 437,000     | 240,000    |
| Ohio.....         | 889,780     | 367,000    |
| Indiana.....      | 871,000     | None       |
| Illinois.....     | 331,500     | 76,000     |
| Iowa.....         | 397,000     | 20,000     |
| Nebraska.....     | 192,000     | 30,000     |
| Wyoming.....      | 271,000     | 5,000      |
| Utah.....         | 52,000      | 13,000     |
| Nevada.....       | 80,000      | 13,600     |
| Total.....        | $3,780,280 | $833,600  |

The efforts of the Lincoln Highway Association are directed toward the procuring of construction along the route, and one of the chief means used to interest the communities in road construction, and educate them to the advisability of hard-surfaced improvement, is the establishment of "seeding miles" of standard Lincoln Highway by the association, it being the theory that if the association provide sufficient cement for the construction of a standard section of concrete Lincoln Highway in every county, the people of the county, through observation and use, would learn of the value of such construction, and that future funds spent on the road would be utilized for further extensions of the hard-surfaced mile. Such "seeding miles" have been built in Indiana, Illinois, and Nebraska, and the association purposes to continue this policy until a standard section has been constructed in every county through which the Lincoln Highway passes, between the Indiana-Ohio line and the Wyoming-Nebraska line.

The development of the Lincoln Highway, and the National interest which has been aroused in it, have been responsible for a tremendous increase in the volume of transcontinental touring. This increase in the flow of through traffic, has amounted to over 300 per cent. in the two years since the Lincoln Highway was announced. The Automobile Club of California estimates that 25,000 cars drove into the State during the touring season of 1915, and advises that the majority of these tourists came over the Lincoln Highway. The officers of the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco estimates even a greater number.

The Lincoln Highway stands as a foremost example of the most certain economic need of the United States—improved connecting highways, permanent in construction, and leading from a definite point to some other definite point. It was the thought of those men who founded the Lincoln Highway Association that the establishment of the Lincoln Highway would prove a great object lesson to the Nation as a whole, and eventually result in a Nation-wide system of like improved, permanent roads.

No conflicting element has ever entered into the constructing development of the Lincoln Highway and the Nation-wide support which the movement has received, particularly from the press, both daily and periodically, and from the motoring public and the American farmer, indicates that its ultimate success and rapid completion are assured.

The officers and directors of the Lincoln Highway Association are given below:

President—Henry B. Joy, Detroit, Mich. Vice-President—Carl G. Fisher, Indianapolis, Ind. Treasurer—Emory W. Clark, Detroit, Mich. Vice-President—Roy D. Chapin, Detroit, Mich. F. A. Seiberling, Akron, Ohio. Russell A. Alger, Detroit, Mich. Albert J. Beveridge, Indianapolis, Ind. A. Y. Gowen, Chicago, Ill. Paul H. Deming, Detroit, Mich. John N. Willys, Toledo, Ohio. Secretary—A. F. Bement, Detroit, Mich.

THE GREAT WAR

THE WORLD was the first American newspaper—the first newspaper anywhere—to point out the true significance of the great war. On August 5, 1914, the day after England, in defence of Belgium, declared war on Germany, which had already attacked France and Russia, THE WORLD said: "The issue is now joined. Either German autocracy must be crushed or European democracy will be obliterated. There is no middle course. If the forces that the Kaiser has loosed are victorious, the map of European republicanism may as well be rolled up and the American people prepare to make the last grand stand for democracy." That is the fundamental issue of the war. The Kaiser, it is true, dreamed of a World-Empire, just as Alexander the Great and Caesar and Napoleon had dreamed before him; but his triumph would have been more than the triumph of one man or of one nation—it would have been the triumph of a system of government which for a thousand years has been slowly crumbling beneath the pressure of human rights and human liberty. Millions of men are giving their lives to-day to decide whether they and their children are to continue to exist merely as members of a state, or whether they as individuals have certain unalienable rights, of which no Government may deprive them but to secure which all government exists. Those who are resisting the Kaiser's effort to make Germany a World-Empire and impose Prussianism on mankind are fighting to fix the future of all generations yet to come; they are fighting for "a principle of human liberty upon which rests the development of the freedom of the world"; they are fighting for democracy against autocracy.

GROWTH OF PRUSSIAN MILITARISM.

In 1701 Prussia became a kingdom, and the head of the House of Hohenzollern, who had ranked beneath the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria and had been a vassal of the Kings of Poland, was elevated to royal rank. From the first, the Kingdom of Prussia was based upon the autocracy of militarism, upon the existence of a sacrosanct caste superior to any other, and upon the subservience of civil to military authority. This was the system of Frederick the Great, who brought his Prussian army to such a state of perfection that he was able to withstand the rest of Europe, and it received further impetus in 1870, when the genius of Bismarck placed the sceptre of the German Empire in the hands of the Kings of Prussia. The Hohenzollerns never emancipated any one, even by accident, and the failure of the German revolution of 1848, one of the great tragedies of the human race, made autocracy and militarism more secure in Prussia than anywhere else. In 1864 Denmark was despoiled of Schleswig-Holstein, giving Germany full control of the Elbe and a large portion of the Baltic coast. Through the territory thus taken from her weaker neighbor the Kiel Canal runs to-day, linking the North Sea and the Baltic, one of the many monuments to German foresight and preparedness. Austria was next attacked, and the supremacy of the Hohenzollerns over the Hapsburgs established, and the latter forced to consent to a reorganization of Germany in which they had no participation. Hanover, Hesse-Cassel and Nassau were annexed to Prussia. Then came the war of 1870 and the foundation of the German Empire, with the Hohenzollerns dominating Central Europe. Alsace and Lorraine were wrested from France, and the Kingdoms of Bavaria and Württemberg and the Grand Duchy of Baden and the southern provinces of the Grand Duchy of Hesse were added to the North German Confederation. From that day all the German States which had survived the struggle of 1866, with the exception of Austria, the tiny Grand Duchy of Luxembourg and the Principality of Lichtenstein, were incorporated as a federated nation under the hereditary leadership of the Kings of Prussia, with the title of German Emperor. In 1870 Belgium narrowly escaped German domination, as only England's threat that she would fight on the side of France if Belgium's neutrality were violated caused Bismarck to hesitate.

GERMANY'S WONDERFUL PROGRESS.

During the next forty-four years—from 1870 to 1914—Germany's material progress was uninterrupted. Centralized authority, organization and scientific management brought about an extraordinary degree of national efficiency. Germany amassed vast wealth, her population increased to 67,000,000, her exports were approaching in volume those of England, she founded a colonial empire, her shipping grew a hundredfold, she built a great navy and organized an army that bewildered and filled with awe all those who saw it. There was no secret about her readiness for war. For forty years her philosophers had preached a doctrine of brute force as the basis of World-Empire, had preconized a policy of preparedness and had inculcated to the youth of the rising generation a belief that Germans were a race of supermen, destined to rule the earth. But the blessings that prolonged peace had brought to the German people were so great that mankind hesitated to believe war possible, and the nations of Europe continued to bear the burdens of armament without realizing that one man had the power to plunge humanity into the greatest of conflicts, to devastate continents and array forty million of his fellow-men in arms to shed each other's blood. Yet after the Balkan wars Germany's martial preparations were intensified: a war tax of staggering proportions had supplied the Kaiser with the gold for his crowning effort, for the realization of his ambition to dominate Europe and achieve World-Empire. Alone, of all the nations of Europe, Germany was ready for war. France had made some effort to keep pace with the preparedness of her ancient foe; Russia had increased her standing army; but, of all the powers, Germany alone had grasped the gigantic scale on which the great war was to be fought and had made ready for it. England was totally unprepared, and but for her grand fleet and her financial power was an almost negligible factor at the outbreak of hostilities. In the light of all the diplomatic documents published, there can be no doubt that Germany was seeking a favorable opportunity to strike, and that her plan was to throw down the gauntlet to Russia in that ill-founded hope that France might hesitate before joining in the fight. But in any case her statesmen appeared to be confident that the conflict could be restricted to a struggle for European supremacy in the first place between Germany and her allies on the one side and Russia and France on the other. The result Germany never doubted. After the Kaiser had made himself supreme in Europe and had wrested from France her colonies, Germany would be able to attack England, obtain the mastery of the seas and that World-Dominion which for more than a generation had been the dream of Prussia.

PAN-GERMANISM AND PAN-SLAVISM.

When, after decades of jealous bickerings, the little Balkan states had agreed upon a concerted plan of action and had crumpled the Turk, Teuton influences were brought to bear to set them fighting among themselves. For Slavism had profited by the defeat of the Sultan, a thing Germany could not tolerate. In the Near East the influence of the Teuton had grown and that of the Slav had dwindled ever since. In 1908, Austria had annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina, and Russia had failed to take the stand hoped for by the southern Slavs, especially the Serbs, who had seen their national hopes for the reconstitution of ancient Serbia dashed forever by the growth of Pan-Germanism. On the very day before the Treaty of Bucharest was signed—it was August 9, 1913, a year before the war broke out—Austria had confided to Italy that "in common accord with Germany" she was about to deliver to Serbia an ultimatum of substantially the same tenor as that sent in July, 1914. Italy refused to consider such action as "defensive," or to be bound by its results, and she urged Germany to dissuade Austria from "so perilous an adventure." Germany was thus aware that she could not count upon Italian support, and so she pressed with feverish haste the rebuilding of the Kiel Canal and the completion of the strategic railways leading to the Belgian frontier. Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador in Berlin, reported to his Government in November, 1913, a change in the Kaiser's pacific attitude, and King Albert of Belgium was forewarned of the approaching struggle and given a solemn pledge that the neutrality of Belgium would never be violated.

HOW THE WAR BEGAN.

On June 28, 1914, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir apparent of Austria-Hungary, was assassinated with his consort, the Duchess of Hohenberg, by Bosnian conspirators at Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia, where Pan-Slavic feeling ran high. On July 23 the Austro-Hungarian Minister at Belgrade presented to the Serbian Government a drastic ultimatum demanding punishment of the alleged Serbian instigators of the tragedy and imposing, along with many other humiliating demands, the condition that Serbia "accept the collaboration of Austrian officials in the suppression of" the Pan-Serbian movement, and giving her weaker neighbor forty-eight hours in which to comply. It was openly the aim of Austria "in accord with Germany" not only to deprive Serbia of its political independence but also to inflict a check to Russia. From then on events moved rapidly. Serbia, on July 25, gave way to all the Austrian demands, but denied the right of Austria to exercise judicial authority in Serbia. Italy, before the expiration of the ultimatum, made it known that she was not in sympathy with the Austro-Hungarian note to Serbia. At once diplomatic exchanges began between the various powers to avert the war that was impending; but, on July 27, Austria issued a note to the powers stating that Serbia's acquiescence to her demands was unsatisfactory and "filled with the spirit of dishonesty," and on the following day, July 28, Austria declared war on Serbia. Russia at once began to mobilize, and notified the powers that she would not permit the invasion of Serbia. The next day, Sir Edward Grey, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, sent peace proposals for a Council of Europe to both the Kaiser and the Czar. His action was supported by France and Italy. The Kaiser's reply was a general order of mobilization and an ultimatum, with a twelve-hour limit, to Russia to stop mobilizing. Of France, Germany demanded to be informed of her attitude in case of a Russo-German war. This was on July 30, and on the same day Austria invaded Serbia. On July 31 military law was proclaimed throughout Germany, and Russia ordered a general mobilization. Personal messages were exchanged between the Czar and the Kaiser, to both of whom King George sent appeals for peace, but on August 1 Germany suddenly decided that "the sword had been forced into her hand" and declared war on Russia while Austria was still actually negotiating with the Czar. France at once ordered a general mobilization, and Italy formally declared her neutrality. It was plain that a general war was unavoidable. The Kaiser sent an ultimatum in Germany to King Albert of Belgium, on August 2, demanding free passage for his armies. The same day German forces crossed the frontiers of Luxembourg and France, and on August 3 Germany declared war on France. On the morning of August 4 the German army invaded Belgium, which had already appealed to England to preserve her neutrality, and the British Ambassador in Berlin demanded the immediate withdrawal of the Kaiser's forces from Belgium, and, unable to obtain satisfaction, England declared war on Germany the same evening, to the unaffected dismay of the German Chancellor, who could not believe that "just for a scrap of paper England was going to make war." At first the conflict assumed the aspect of a Russo-German war, with the allies of each as active participants. Civilization menaced by the Slav peril was the keynote of the early German propaganda.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S MEDIATION OFFER.

President Wilson, on August 5, tendered the friendly mediation of the United States to all the belligerent powers in the following message, which he addressed to the Emperors of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia, to the King of England and to the President of the French Republic: "As official head of one of the powers signatory to The Hague Convention, I feel it to be my privilege and my duty, under Article III, of that convention, to say to you in a spirit of earnest friendship that I should welcome an opportunity to act in the interest of European peace either now or at any other time that might be thought more suitable, as an occasion to serve you and all concerned in a way that would afford me lasting cause for gratitude and happiness." But this effort at mediation was unavailing, and the conflagration continued to spread. On August 6 Austria-Hungary declared war on Russia, and three days later Montenegro declared war on Austria-Hungary and Serbia gave the German Minister his passports. France formally declared war on Austria on August 10, followed two days later by Great Britain. Japan, as England's ally, assumed her treaty obligations in the Far East and declared war on Germany on August 23. "The war was further extended by the entry of Turkey on the side of the Central Empires, the Sultan's declaration of war against the Czar being made on October 30. On November 5 England in turn declared war against Turkey. Italy maintained her neutrality till May 23, 1915, when overwhelming public sentiment forced the King of Italy to declare war on his former ally, the Emperor of Austria, while retaining a peace status with Germany. She also declared war on Turkey on August 23. Bulgaria threw in her lot with the Kaiser on October 18, 1915, by invading Serbia, after an Austro-German army had taken the heights south of Belgrade."

GERMANY TRIES TO CRUSH FRANCE.

The German plan was to crush France before Russia could mobilize, and then to turn eastward and destroy the Czar's forces. Time was an essential element of this plan. The Franco-German frontier, with the Vosges Mountains and their spurs and the Moselle River, fortified by the Verdun-Toul and the Epinal-Belfort defenses, constituted an almost impregnable barrier, one which in any case could not easily be broken through. Besides, the selected point of concentration for the French mobilization was at Neufchâteau, directly opposite the Toul-Epinal gap. But the northern frontier of France lay almost open; it was weakly defended, and only peaceful and industrious Belgium stood in the way. So the Kaiser's forces were gathered for the steam-roller movement across the territory of that little country, the neutrality of which had been solemnly guaranteed by Germany and the other powers, and confirmed by the neutrality clause of The Hague Convention, to which the United States was a party. But King Albert never wavered, and with an army of less than 200,000 men he prepared to resist the onslaught of the greatest and most powerful war machine ever organized. He told his people: "I have faith in our destinies. A nation which defends itself commands the respect of all. Such a nation cannot perish. God will be with us in a just cause. Long live independent Belgium!" That was his reply to the "hack our way through" statement of von Bethmann-Hollweg, who in the Reichstag pleaded the law of necessity for "the wrong that we are committing."

The war actually began on Sunday, August 2, when Germany invaded both Luxembourg and France. At 6 o'clock in the morning German troops from Treves entered the neutral state of Luxembourg, which, under the treaty guaranteeing its neutrality and to which Germany was a party, therefore offered no resistance. By noon German cavalry patrols had entered France at Birschbois, near Chézy-sur-Vecouze, and at Long-la-Ville, near Longwy, and a party of uhlans advanced ten kilometres within French territory near Delle, despite the fact that war had not yet been declared. Although the twelve-hour ultimatum sent by Germany to Belgium expired at 7 A. M. on Monday, August 3, the actual invasion of Belgium did not take place till 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, August 4, when a large force of German troops in automobiles was thrown across the frontier and occupied Visé, just north of Liège. The invasion of Belgium—the first real act of war officially admitted by the German Government—was timed for exactly the hour, 9 A. M., and exactly the day, August the Fourth, on which German forces had crossed the French frontier at Wissenburg in 1870, forty-four years before.

BELGIUM FOILS KAISER'S PLAN.

The first resistance to the Kaiser's forces was offered at Liège, before which place the advance guard of the German army arrived soon after noon on August 4. While this was being held in check the Belgian army set about the wholesale destruction of bridges, culverts, railroads, &c. It was this quick and determined destruction of all means of transportation through Belgium that frustrated the Kaiser's plans, as a rapid advance by rail from Liège to the Charleroi frontier was an essential factor in the crushing blow that Germany aimed to deal at France. In the absence of railways the Teuton forces pressed on by horse and motor transportation and on foot, the Belgian army striving to retard their progress as much as possible without risking a pitched battle with the first line German troops. The Belgian plan was to hold Liège as long as possible, and then to fall back with their right wing resting on Namur, which was on the direct line to Paris. Liège offered a most heroic resistance, but as the Great German army advanced the defending forts were surrounded by a sea of gray-clad soldiers and, although the city itself fell to the invaders on August 6, the main forts held out till the 15th. But the German attack was so sudden and so overwhelming that from the start they made themselves masters of the Meuse, and the Belgian army had to fall back on the Gette. Unwilling to leave the Belgian army undestroyed in their rear, the Germans pressed the attack at Halene, Diest, Tirlemont, Aerschot and Louvain, the last two cities being sacked after a few days of German occupation and their inhabitants massacred by the hundreds on the pretext of their having violated the military regulations of the victors. King Albert was forced to abandon Brussels and was thrown back with his army to Malines and the defences of Antwerp. On August 21 the German army entered Brussels, and the same day their main forces arrived before Namur, which, to the surprise of military experts everywhere, was reduced within forty-eight hours by high explosive shells from the enormous 16-inch howitzers, which no fortifications could withstand and the existence of which Germany had kept a profound secret. From the very start Germany possessed a tremendous superiority over the allies in heavy artillery, as well as in every other kind of equipment, especially machine guns and ammunition. France, however, had the advantage in light field pieces, her 3-inch gun—the famous "soixante quinze"—proving far superior to the German 77mm.

FRENCH INVADE ALSACE-LORRAINE.

As Germany invaded Belgium, France began a counter offensive in Alsace and Lorraine, which, if successful, would have forced the Germans to defend the Rhine and abandon their attack from the north. France seized all the important passes of the Vosges Mountains, and on August 8 a French force, leaving Belfort, entered Alsace from the south and overcame German resistance first at Altkirch and then at Muelhausen, menacing the strong German defences at Neu Breisach, the uppermost of the Rhine forts, and at Colmar, the key to Strassburg from the south. Muelhausen changed hands several times, resting finally on August 25 with the Germans, as Joffre called back every available man to stem the Teuton tide advancing on Paris. The counter offensive in Lorraine was on a larger and more important scale, and on August 19 the Fifteenth French army reached Saarburg, on the main railway line between Metz and Strassburg, and the great Metz-Thionville defence line was threatened. Germany, however, was fully prepared, and on August 20 the Crown Prince of Bavaria, at the head of a quarter of a million men, met the French invasion, and on August 21-22 the French were decisively defeated in the Battle of Metz and driven back across the frontier to their defensive positions known as the Grand Couronné de Nancy with heavy losses in men and guns. This victory, coincident with the sweeping aside of Belgian resistance at Namur, really marks the beginning of the great advance on Paris.

The Germans poured across the Sambre and the Meuse, overcoming desperate French resistance at Charleroi, where a very bloody battle was fought. The French night centre, which had scored an initial success at Neufchâteau (Belgium), was driven back, and forces which had been sent to the assistance of Longwy were withdrawn into the Argonne. But the crucial test was at Mons, on the extreme left, where the British expeditionary force which had been landed less than a week before was outnumbered five to one by von Kluck. With the French falling back on their right, their own flank exposed to an enveloping movement, there was nothing for them to do but retreat; but they retreated fighting steadily night and day for six days and holding in check an entire German army corps. An effort was made to gather French forces in the north to outflank the extreme German right, but the movement failed, and no effort was even made to hold Lille. The retreat of the allies carried them back more than 125 miles in twelve days, until September 4, when they reached the shelter of the Grand Morange, under the guns of the Paris forts.

THE MARCH ON PARIS.

The flower of the Kaiser's army had swept across northeastern France with irresistible force. The line of the Sambre and Meuse had been abandoned on August 24. At Cambrai and Le Cateau, on the 26th, the Germans had been victorious, and by the end of the following day had swept the allies back to the Somme. The advance of the German right wing was halted for a moment on the 28th by the heroic charges of the British Household Cavalry, and on August 28 the troops which Joffre had called back from Alsace successfully attacked the Prussian Guard and two German army corps at Guise, thus affording much needed relief to the British army at St. Quentin. Despite this, Joffre continued to retreat, because the hope of resuming the offensive at this moment was rendered vain by the rapidity of the march of the German right wing. On August 31 the small British force had been pushed back by sheer weight of numbers and had uncovered the French left flank. Despite successes on the French right, it was impossible for the allies to give battle under these conditions, as a defeat would have cut off the main French army from Paris and from their British allies. French and English continued to retreat in good order, straightening out their line as they fell back. On September 1 the British were successful in an engagement in the Forest of Compeigne and took some German cannon, and by the 3d they had reached a position south of the Marne, where they were prepared to make a stand, but at Joffre's request they fell back on to the Seine. The German army, having crossed the Oise, now threatened Paris, and the French Government, on September 3, was transferred to Bordeaux. The retreat ended on September 4, when the German army commanded by von Kluck made a sudden sweep to the southeast. The Germans have never officially explained this movement. Two courses of action were open to them. One was to attempt to force the French armies back into the entrenched camp of Paris and isolate the eastern defences of Verdun from the capital, the other was an attempt to envelop and destroy the French armies in the field before seizing the French capital. If successful, the latter would have offered the quickest solution, and, with France crushed, Germany could have turned on Russia, which had mobilized her forces far quicker than Germany had expected and had overrun a large part of East Prussia. It was at this moment, when the outlook was blackest for France and the fall of Paris appeared certain, that the allies signed the famous agreement not to make a separate peace: "The British, French and Russian Governments mutually agree not to conclude peace separately during the present war. The three Governments agree that when the terms of peace come to be discussed no one of the allies will demand conditions of peace without the previous agreement of each of the other allies." This compact was also adhered to by both Japan and Italy after they had entered the war, and confirmed by the five powers in London in December, 1915.

THE BATTLE OF THE MARNE.

But von Kluck's movement exposed his right to the offensive movement of the allies' left, where fresh French forces had been brought up to extend the British lines; besides, a precious reserve of a quarter of a million men had been held in Paris. On September 5 General Joffre issued his famous order of the day: "The hour has come," he wrote, "to advance at all costs and to die where you stand rather than give way." The Battle of the Marne was on. The allies began a general attack on the Meaux-Sezanne-Vitry le Francois-Verdun front. Holding the Germans fast in the centre, the French left, with the troops of the Paris garrison and the British army, struck desperately toward Soissons, and on September 9 succeeded in flurrying the German invaders back across the Marne, which has given its name to the battle that lasted to the 12th of September. For a time von Kluck's army was in the greatest plight, but he extricated himself by forced marches. A desperate German counter attack on the French centre at Vitry le Francois was repulsed, and then General Foch struck what was perhaps the decisive blow by taking advantage of a weak spot between the lines of von Euelow and the Wuerttemberg army and throwing the Prussian Guard in great disorder into the marshes of St. Gond. This determined a retreat along the entire German front to a point behind the Soissons-Rheims line, and it was accentuated by a severe defeat administered to the Crown Prince's army in the Argonne, by which Verdun was definitely placed beyond the reach of the invaders. It seemed at one time as if French soil would be freed, but the French cavalry was utterly exhausted, and the fall of Maubeuge on September 7 had removed what would have constituted a grave menace to the German lines of communication. The rear guard actions fought by the retreating forces of the Kaiser assumed greater intensity till, on September 12 and 13, after abandoning Amiens, and on their extreme left Luneville and St. Die, the Germans dug themselves in to the positions on the range of hills north of the Aisne that Blucher once boasted he could hold against the world with 80,000 men. The lines were almost identical with those occupied to-day from Soissons, on the Aisne, to the Verdun front.

ON THE AISNE AND IN FLANDERS.

On September 13 the French troops, in the face of a deadly fire, crossed the Aisne near Soissons and there ensued a long series of attacks and counter attacks launched from the opposing trenches, which in many places were only a hundred yards apart. To the south, near Rheims, the Germans lost ground, and retaliated by the bombardment of the city and the partial destruction of its great cathedral, but without achieving any military object or advantage. The fighting to the west was of far more importance. The French threw every available man forward on their extreme left in an attempt to turn the German right and throw the invaders back over the Meuse; the Germans brought up fresh forces in an effort to turn the French left and threaten Paris from the north. At one time the German cavalry reached St. Omer, only twenty-five miles from Calais, but they were thrown back by the British forces which, at Field Marshal French's request, had been shifted to the extreme left and assigned the task of making a junction with the Belgian army. After violent fighting near Arras on September 30 the turning movement developed into a race for the sea, and the allies struck due north. A long-drawn-out fight in Flanders continued the Battle of the Aisne, which in itself was only the prolongation of the Battle of the Marne. It was at this stage that the German commanders attempted to destroy the Belgian army, which still threatened their rear from the entrenched camp of Antwerp. Bringing up the big siege guns that had been used at Maubeuge, they invested Antwerp on September 26. By the 5th of October they had destroyed the outer forts and brought the city itself within range of their great guns. The next day King Albert withdrew with his army under cover of a British cavalry force which had been disembarked at Ostend and rushed to Ghent to cover the Belgian retreat. This was the famous Seventh Division, which afterward fought its way to Ypres and held there till the main British force joined it. King Albert and his army reached the Yser on October 15, taking up positions at Nieuport and Dixmude. On the 17th the Germans attacked in force, and Joffre sent word to King Albert to hold at all costs for twenty-four hours. With 70,000 Belgians, who had fought all the way from Liege to Antwerp and to the Yser, King Albert held the coast and some 25,000 English troops held the line at Ypres for five days against five German army corps. On the 22d of October the French came up, threw the Germans back beyond the Yser, and the Belgians on October 29 opened the dikes and flooded the country, destroying all possibility of the Germans reaching Calais by march along the coast. The trenches now stretched in one continuous line from the North Sea to Switzerland, and although the Kaiser in person directed desperate efforts and sacrificed 150,000 men to break the lines and force his way through to Calais, he was foiled in the attempt; he bent the line at Arras, but his crowning attempt, made at Ypres early in November with the Prussian Guards, was beaten off with huge losses by the thin khaki line of British soldiers, reinforced by part of the Tenth French Army. On top of this the Germans tried to drive a wedge between Verdun and Toul, and isolate the former fortress. They succeeded in crossing the Meuse at St. Mihiel on November 19, and their advance at this point forms the famous salient that has been described as "an arrow aimed at the heart of France." But they could get no further. This was the last attempt in force to shatter the allies' line on the west and marked the beginning of the existing deadlock and the end of the first period of the war.

THE TURNING POINT OF THE WAR.

The Battle of the Marne did more than save Paris; it sealed the fate of the Kaiser's bid for world empire. Germany, with its war machine at the highest point of efficiency after more than a generation of preparation, had failed to destroy France, which entered the conflict with inferior forces incompletely mobilized. By reason of its homogeneous organization, which has enabled it to shift its forces from east to west and from west to east at will, Germany with the aid of Austria has been able to make great territorial gains on every front except the west; but these gains have been made at an enormous cost in lives, and as the German line has lengthened, Germany's numerical and economic strength has weakened, while that of the allies has steadily grown. It has been in great part due to England's command of the seas which cut Germany off from the rest of the world while placing all the resources of the entire British Empire and all the productive power of neutral nations at the disposal of the allies. Contributing causes to the victory of the Marne, which was the turning point of the war, were the rapidity of the Russian mobilization and the invasion of East Prussia by the forces of the Czar, thus obliging the Germans to detach several army corps from the huge mass of men hurled upon Paris, and also two brilliant sorties from Antwerp, led by King Albert in person, which detached 160,000 troops from the armies that were pouring into France. The operations on the western front included the entrance of Russian forces into Galicia and the capture of Tarnopol on August 21.

that of Lemberg in September and the investment of Przemyśl, forcing the Austrians to pause in their attack on Poland, where they were making a successful demonstration before Lublin with the intention of threatening Warsaw. But it was the invasion of East Prussia that caused the most concern to the German General Staff. The Czar's troops swarmed over the frontier on August 17 and almost without opposition made themselves masters of Lyck, Insterburg, Gumbinnen, Oertelsburg and Marienburg. Allenstein and Koenigsburg were threatened, and five German army corps were hurriedly detached from the western front and hurled against the Russians. Von Hindenburg, a general whose life work in studying the region of the Mazurian Lakes had brought upon him much army ridicule, was called from retirement by the Kaiser, and, gathering reserves and adding what garrison troops he could to the first line forces from the west, he struck at the Russian invaders on August 27 at Tannenberg, just south of Allenstein, and in three days virtually annihilated 250,000 Russians, throwing them into the swamps, where he captured 100,000 prisoners and killed and drowned tens of thousands more. Following up his success, von Hindenburg threw General Rennenkampf back across the frontier behind the Kovno-Grodno line of forts. While these events were in progress Austria had launched against Serbia an attack that at first was successful. The Serbians, who in their first dash had obtained a foothold in Bosnia, were driven across the Drina River, and on December 2 the Austrians captured Belgrade, King Peter having already moved his capital to Nish. Outnumbered and beaten, the Serbians retreated into the mountains, while the victorious Austrians laid waste the fertile valleys and lowlands and converted the country around Belgrade into a land of corpse-strewn desolation. But neither victors nor vanquished had paid any attention to sanitation, and disease and plague broke out in both armies. The Serbians in the healthy mountain districts suffered least, and, gathering up all their forces, they fell upon the invaders with indescribable fury and virtually annihilated the Austrian army, driving it out of Belgrade by December 15 and taking more than 60,000 prisoners, of whom a less than 50 per cent, died of plague in the concentration camps. This broke the Austrian offensive, and for the time being Serbia ceased to figure in the war except as a plague spot where the American Red Cross was fighting typhus and the black death.

PROGRESS OF THE GREAT STRUGGLE.

Since the Battle of the Marne nothing has occurred which can be compared to it for strategic results or political importance. It settled one thing: Germany cannot win. The deadlock on the western front, it is true, has remained almost unbroken despite much desperate fighting and great loss of life, and Germany is still in possession of almost all of Belgium and of a goodly portion of the richest mining and industrial region of France, with at least 60 per cent. of France's much-needed supply of iron. But England has raised, trained and equipped an army of more than three million men, and is steadily increasing her forces, with the result that in the spring the allies will have an overwhelming superiority of men and guns and ammunition in France. On the eastern front Germany has inflicted severe reverses on Russia, and besides taking Warsaw is master of rich Russian and Polish provinces; but she has not destroyed the Russian armies, whose lack of equipment and whose ammunition is being rapidly remedied and whose supplies of men are inexhaustible. Russia moves her millions with the relentless certainty of a glacier. Attack her, and she retreats on Moscow. Leave her alone, and the deep, slow tide of her advance rolls forward again. In the Spring she will have six million men. As things stand today, Germany is not invaded, except for a tiny strip of territory in Alsace, and everywhere her armies are fighting on enemy soil. But Germany has lost virtually all of her colonies, and her flag has been swept from every sea but the Baltic. The German navy remains bottled up in the Kiel Canal and behind the mined defences of Heligoland, unable to cope with the crushing superiority of the British navy, and of no more use than if it was at the bottom of the sea. Japan, which entered the war as England's ally, seized Germany's foothold in Asia, the fortress of Tsing-tan, in conjunction with a detachment of England's Indian army. Germany's ally, Austria, has with the Kaiser's help managed to free her eastern territory, which at one time was deeply invaded by the Russian forces; but Italy has entered the war on the side of the allies and has obtained a strong grip on the Trentino and forced Austria to concentrate most of her best troops and heavy artillery among the mountains and passes of her southern frontier. Turkey, which threw in its lot with Germany and attacked Russia, has successfully resisted the combined attempts of England and France to force the Dardanelles, to carry much needed supplies to Russia and afford an outlet for her grain crop, which was one of the most abundant in years. In the Caucasus, after initial reverses, Turkey has withstood the Russian army, who were powerless to aid the Armenians, whom the Turks have set about to exterminate entirely. In Mesopotamia a British expedition which at one time menaced Bagdad, after a brilliant march from the Persian Gulf, has met with a reverse. England, early in the Fall of 1914, repulsed a Turkish attack on the Suez Canal and seized this opportunity to secure her hold on Egypt, over which she proclaimed a protectorate. In order to make a junction with the Turks, Germany recently struck a bold blow in the Balkans, where she scored her first diplomatic success of the war by inducing Bulgaria to fight on her side. As a result, Serbia was crushed, and a new field of battle has opened in the Balkans, the allies landing forces in Greece, but neither sufficiently soon nor in sufficient force to be able to save Serbia from the fate of Belgium. Other important phases of the world struggle have been Germany's attempted submarine blockade of Great Britain, which, after the torpedoing of the Lusitania, brought about a diplomatic crisis with the United States; the German Zeppelin raids on England, in which many innocent civilians and non-combatants have been killed, and the allies' attempt to starve out Germany and Austria, which, despite tremendous territorial gains, are as a matter of fact, besieged and surrounded by a ring of steel which will begin to close in upon them in the Spring. In the following pages each of these subjects is treated under its separate heading, and statistics are added showing the cost of the war in men and money to date.

WAR ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

Trench warfare on the western front has been continuous ever since the deadlock began. All through the Winter of 1914-15 there was a constant bombardment all along the line from Switzerland to the North Sea, the intensity of which kept on increasing as the mobilization of the industrial forces of France and England progressed, thus continually augmenting the supply of ammunition at the front. Immediately after the Battle of the Marne the allies had faced a serious shortage of every kind of artillery and munitions, from heavy howitzer to rapid-fire machine guns, whereas the almost inexhaustible supplies of the Germans showed how long and thorough had been the Teuton preparations for the war. It was only in the Fall that the allies really began to accumulate a surplus over their immediate needs so as to supply the reserves of ammunition necessary for the intensive bombardment which must precede any attack in force. It will not be till the Spring of 1916, when the bulk of the enormous ammunition orders placed in the United States will be delivered, that the allies will have any marked advantage over the Germans, who have so thoroughly organized their industrial resources as to be able to turn out about 2,000,000 shells a week indefinitely. Disparity in the supply of ammunition, however, has not prevented many severe engagements taking place in Belgium, France and Alsace. Early in January the French launched a new offensive in Alsace, in which they made themselves masters of Steinbach. They also made a successful attack north of Soissons, but the German counter offensive more than wiped out their gains, and a few miles to the east of where the French had attacked the Kaiser's forces took important positions and inflicted heavy losses by inundating part of the Aisne Valley. The first really serious attempt to smash through the German lines was made by the British, who took the offensive toward Lille and captured Neuve Chapelle, just north of La Bassée on March 10. Nearly the entire British force was employed in this great effort, which broke down almost in the moment of victory when it seemed certain the German lines would be broken because the attacking forces were decimated by the fire of their own artillery. But the British stuck to their gains, and despite every effort the Germans have not been able to dislodge them. Early in April there was fierce fighting in the St. Mihiel salient, where the Crown Prince had time and time again been foiled in his attempts to isolate Verdun. The French took the crest of the hill at Les Eparges, depriving the Germans of a position of great strategic importance which dominated the valley of the Woëvre. Fighting has raged almost continuously around the Hartmannswiller Kopf, which is said to have changed hands some seventy times since the war began and to have cost 100,000 lives. One slope of the mountain is now in the hands of the French and the other in the hands of the Germans. In the beginning of April marked activity was noticed back of the German lines, and on April 17 the British captured Hill 60 in an engagement which preceded the second great German attack on Ypres. This culminated on April 24, when asphyxiating gases were used for the first time with such terrible effect that the Germans gained nearly three miles. Their failure to break through was due in large measure to the splendid gallantry of the Canadian troops, whose crack regiment, the Princess Pat Light Infantry, was almost wiped out holding an advanced position. Since then the Germans have made no further attempt to break through to Calais. The French again took the offensive, and in May and June the chief fighting centred around Arras, with the French gradually creeping up toward Lens, a railway centre of great strategic value, the capture of which would have impeded German communications along the front and have forced a retirement. It was in this advance that the French captured the remarkable defensive work known as the Labyrinth, a veritable underground fortress with trenches and subterranean passages lined with steel and concrete, near Neuville St. Vaast. The Germans believed it to be absolutely impregnable. When finally occupied by the French on June 23 this underground stronghold was found to cover an area of more than two square miles. The French were also successful in fighting in the Vosges and in Alsace, but lost about a mile of their trenches in the Argonne. All through July and August fighting continued in the long line of trenches and increased in activity in the air, numerous raids being made by aviators on both sides, the advantage, however, resting with the allies. In September, after continuous German successes in the East, which had carried a large portion of the Teuton forces far into Russia, Joffre made his long expected effort to break the deadlock on the western front. The allied offensive developed into a stupendous but unsuccessful drive in Champagne, Artois and Belgium. Following the most terrific bombardment on record, in which the German trenches were literally wiped out by a storm of high explosive shell-fire, the French drove the Germans back nearly three miles in Champagne, and by September 27 had captured more than 20,000 prisoners and a large number of guns, ammunition and other war material; but they did not succeed in breaking through, although they sacrificed more than 100,000 men in the attempt. The British, striking at the same time, took five miles of German trenches south of La Bassée Canal, and both the French and the British successfully resisted the German counter offensive, to support which five German army corps had been hurriedly transported from the eastern to the western front. Continuing to advance, the French pierced the German second-line defences and threatened the Crown Prince's communications in the Argonne, but their drive slackened in the beginning of October, after the capture of Tahure. They had retaken about fifty square miles of French territory. A few days later the Germans fiercely assailed the British lines in an effort to reconquer the positions they had lost at Loos, but they were beaten off and left 8,000 dead between the lines. They also failed in a series of attacks launched in the early part of November against the French in Champagne, despite a temporary success at Tahure, which changed hands several times. All through December there was a continuous artillery duel along the western front, but the year ends with the deadlock unbroken.

WAR ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

At the outbreak of the war the German plan on the eastern front was based on the belief that the Czar's forces would strike straight for Cracow, the gateway to Berlin and Vienna. This was what the Germans wanted; for if the Russians had thrown all their forces into the Polish salient Germany could have attacked their northern flank from East Prussia and Austria their southern flank from Galicia, cutting the Russian lines of communication and literally "bagging" the Czar's first-line armies. So, in order to attract this hoped-for Russian offensive, a few German divisions were thrown into Poland; but Grand Duke Nicholas was not to be caught in any such trap. Disregarding the demonstration in Poland, the Russian commander struck simultaneously at the Germans in East Prussia and at the Austrians in Galicia. Despite the defeat of the Russians at Tannenberg by von Hindenburg with forces transported in all haste from the western front, and which broke down the Russian offensive in East Prussia and threw General Rennenkampf back behind the Kovno-Grodno forts, the Czar's forces continued to advance in Galicia against the Austrians, whom they defeated at Rawa Ruska on September 3. Then they took Lemberg, won a battle near Lublin, and on September 22 took Jaroslaw and invested the great fortress of Przemyśl. With the Russians west of the San and the Austrian right wing flanked by hordes of Cossacks who were raiding well into the plains, and with the Carpathian passes falling into the hands of the invaders, Austria called upon Germany for immediate aid. Von Hindenburg was sent to the rescue. With four German army corps taken from East Prussia—thus making possible the Russian success at Augustowo on October 2—and other reinforcements drawn from the western front, the German general, instead of trying to stem the invasion of Hungary, struck straight at Warsaw and the Ivangorod fortress. This counter offensive was highly successful. With their right flank in great danger, the Russians had no alternative but to take their army back across the San. The Austrians followed, and drove the invaders from Hungary and the Carpathians, after raising the siege of Przemyśl. The German advance in Poland was pressed, and von Hindenburg's cavalry screen was within seven miles of Warsaw when the Russians, gathering all their available cavalry forces, hurled a body of more than 100,000 horsemen upon the advancing foe. This bent back the German left wing and compelled a hasty retreat to the frontier. This German reverse had serious consequences for the Austrians, against whom the Russians concentrated an enormous force, and the second invasion of Galicia began. The Austrians were routed at Jaroslaw on November 5 and their army cut in two, one half being forced back into the snow-laden Carpathian passes, the other driven toward the Cracow defences, the outer line of which was penetrated by the Russians on November 7. The Russians were also following up their victory over the Germans, who kept on retreating into Silesia and successfully drawing into the Polish bag great masses of the Czar's troops, who believed that they were pursuing the main German army. But although the Russians had advanced far into Southern Poland the Germans were unable to carry out their original plan, because they no longer had the men in East Prussia to cut the Russian communications by an attack on the north flank, and on the south flank the Austrian base of operations was in the hands of the Russians. But just when the Russians in pursuit of the retreating Germans had taken Ploesken, in Germany, to the southeast of Posen, the Kaiser gathered his main eastern army at Thorn. On November 12 these forces, under General Mackensen, were suddenly launched forward, and had no difficulty in overwhelming the much smaller Russian forces which were guarding the flank of the Russian advance on Silesia. In ten days, by forced marches, Mackensen had reached Bresiny, some fifteen miles east of Lodz, where he narrowly escaped disaster; for the Russians, hurrying up from all sides, nearly cut off more than 100,000 of his advance guard. But the Germans, by a magnificent feat of arms, cut their way through, although there is little doubt that they would have been annihilated had it not been for Rennenkampf's delay in coming up. This, added to his defeat at Tannenberg, cost him his command. By this time the main German army had come up, and on December 6 it took Lodz and advanced northward to Lowitz, forcing the Russians to give up their offensive in the Cracow district. Again the Germans thrust at Warsaw, but the Russians took up positions on the Bzura and Rawka Rivers, where they made a great stand. The Russian line had been drawn back in the south to prepared positions behind the Nida and Dunajec Rivers and extending right up to their northern army. There the German advance was checked early in January, and a deadlock ensued which lasted till July. The Germans could make no headway in Poland, but Mackensen's drive had so far relieved the pressure in Galicia, that Austria attempted a fresh offensive movement against the weakened Russian lines. Reinforced with some German troops, and supported by a sortie of 100,000 men from Przemyśl, they came through the passes; but their movements were slow and the Russians had time to concentrate new armies which at Tarnow, on December 25, smashed the Austrians completely, establishing themselves on the Tarnow line, overran Bukovina, and seized the Carpathian passes, which they held until driven out by Mackensen in May and June. In February, Germany succeeded in dealing a great counter blow, the effect of which undoubtedly influenced the subsequent course of events on the eastern front. The Russians had been gradually gaining ground again in East Prussia, where heavy snowfalls had made anything like rapid movements of large bodies of troops appear out of the question. But they were suddenly attacked on both flanks. Von Hindenburg caught them again in the region of the Mazurian Lakes, crushed in their right wing at Gumbinnen and their left at Lyck, and then, converging on their centre, virtually destroyed the Russian East Prussian army on February 22, taking more than 100,000 prisoners and nearly all of their guns, ammunition and equipment. The way for the German advance into Courland was clear. The Russians were also running very short of ammunition and opposed but weak resistance to a German drive toward Ossowiec, the great fortress of North Poland, in which the invaders captured Pzysasmyz and threatened Nowogeorgiewsk. The Austrians also took heart from the Russian reverse and began to drive them out of Bukovina, but once again the tide turned in the Czar's favor with the surrender of the Austrian fortress of Przemyśl on March 22. Besides capturing 120,000 prisoners and vast stores of war material this released a Russian force of more than a quarter of a million men, all of whom were rushed into the Carpathians to beat back the Austrians who were attempting to burn their left wing in Bukovina, and penetrated more than twenty miles into Hungary after taking most of the important Carpathian passes. Again Austria was in sore straits, and again she appealed to the Kaiser for help. Mackensen was sent to the rescue with large forces drawn from von Hindenburg's armies, thus again reducing operations in the north to a deadlock. Enormous forces of heavy artillery were transported from the western front, and the combined German and Austrian forces began a great counter offensive against the advancing Russians. After a terrible artillery bombardment of the Russian positions the drive was launched which drove Russia entirely out of Galicia and really sealed the fate of Warsaw. The Dunajec line was pierced early in May, and overwhelming all resistance, the Germans, on a front sixty miles wide, swept on toward Jaroslau and Przemyśl, which latter fortress they retook on June 3. On they went, breaking through the third Russian line of defence from Rawa Ruska to Grodek and the Dnieper, and, taking Lemberg on June 24, they cleared the Russians out of all their hard won positions. But although the Russian armies were driven back they were not destroyed, and the German victory was won solely by an overwhelming superiority in guns and ammunition. Archangel had been closed all the Winter, the trans-Siberian railroad blocked in many places, and despite all the efforts of the allies, especially Japan, to supply them, the Czar's forces were helpless for lack of cannon and shells and quick-firing guns and ammunition, without which her inexhaustible supply of men availed nothing. However, a few weeks earlier, the Germans had effected an entrance into Courland, and forces under von Buelow had actually landed in Northern Russia and, moving south from the Gulf of Riga, had effected a junction with von Hindenburg's army before Warsaw. Simultaneously, Mackensen, turning north from his Galician campaign, had forced the Russians back beyond the Pulin line and was almost in contact with the right wing of the forces attacking Warsaw. The Austrian forces, reinforced by German artillery, continued the line along the Bug and the Dnieper. In this manner it was virtually impossible for the Russians to outflank their opponents without first breaking their lines, and the lack of ammunition made any kind of offensive impossible. With the Czar's forces on the defensive, the Germans began to close in on Warsaw from all sides. Pultusk fell to the Teutons on July 25, and five days later the Russians began the evacuation of Warsaw, retreating toward a prepared line from Kovno through Grodno and south to Brest-Litovsk. Choin, an important fortress southeast of Ivangorod, was the next Russian stronghold to fall, and on August 6 Warsaw, the capital of Poland, was occupied by Bavarian troops under Prince Leopold. The victorious German campaign was completed by the fall of Ivangorod, Serock, Praga, Lomza and Siedlce, and finally, on August 19, Kovno, one of the greatest of Russian fortresses, was taken. Then Nowogeorgiewsk and Ossowiec fell, and the Germans began to close in on Brest-Litovsk, which surrendered on August 27. At the same time, renewing their drive to free Austria, the Teutons smashed the Russian line in Galicia, crossing the Zlota-Lipa River, and then began an advance along their entire 500-mile front, capturing Lipsk and Grodno and advancing on their left toward Riga. Still maintaining their progress, the Germans captured Vilna and threatened Dwinsk; but then the Kaiser's offensive in the east weakened owing to the withdrawal of five army corps sent to resist the French drive in Champagne, and this enabled the Russians to make some gains in Galicia, hold back the invaders in the Smorgon district, and stop the German advance on Dwinsk early in October, despite the fact that von Hindenburg had succeeded in crossing the Viliya, east of Vilna, and that Austro-German forces had forced back the Russians in Galicia to the eastern bank of the Sty. On October 21 the Russians reoccupied Czernowitz, the capital of Bukovina, and took the offensive at Mitau and before Dwinsk, and by November 1 had forced the German army attacking Riga to retreat over the Misa. The Winter has since made active operations increasingly difficult on the eastern front, but although the Russians have been very sorely tried by a long succession of serious reverses they have managed to keep their armies intact. The German gains have been gains of territory, of less strategic value than would have been the annihilation of any of the Russian armies, not one of which has been destroyed. Nevertheless, the political effect of the German victories has been very great, especially in the Balkans. The Czar is now raising large numbers of fresh troops to fill his ranks, and gathering vast supplies of arms and ammunition to enable him to retake the offensive in the Spring with an army which, it is asserted, will exceed six million men.

THE NAVAL WAR.

In July, 1914, just before the war, the grand fleet of England, the most powerful naval force ever assembled, was passed in review by King George at Spithead. Two hundred and sixteen ships were in the line, and there can be little doubt that this imposing demonstration of England's naval strength at a time when portents of a European conflict were visible on every hand was intended to discourage any warlike plans other nations might entertain. Thanks to the foresight of Prince Louis of Battenberg, this grand fleet was never demobilized, and when war came it found England's men-of-war cleared for action and at their appointed battle stations in the North Sea and the British Channel. From the first day of the war the great German navy, on which the Kaiser lavished so many millions and so much care, has been virtually bottled up within the Kiel Canal and behind the mine fields of Heligoland and the guns of Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven, to all intents and purposes as useless for the protection of German shipping or for any offensive action against the allies as if it were at the bottom of the ocean. The British fleet, which at first was stationed in the North Sea, is now riding at anchor in British roadsteads, ready at any minute to sail forth, should the enemy venture out, prepared instantly to respond to the signal of any one of the 2,000 armed patrol boats, yachts, trawlers and fishing vessels which incessantly guard the coasts of the British Isles. Swift destroyers, torpedo boats, gunboats and submarines dash hither and thither in the Irish Sea and the British Channel, but for months their active operations have been limited to the sinking or capture of German submarines. The absence of any great sea fight has been one of the surprising features of the war. Not a single battleship has been engaged at sea, and the only two actions that merit to rank as naval battles were fought off the coast of South America. These, with two naval skirmishes in the North Sea, really constitute almost the sum total of sea fighting. Three weeks after the outbreak of the war, on August 24, Admiral Beatty, with a British squadron, made a spectacular raid on the German warships in the Bight of Heligoland. The British claim to have sunk at least two cruisers and two destroyers; the Germans maintain that their losses were only half as great. But on November 1 Admiral Cradock, in command of a British squadron in the Pacific, was surprised by a superior German force off Coronel, Chile, and his flagship, the Monmouth, was sunk, as well as the Good Hope, with all hands. The cruiser Glasgow escaped, badly damaged. The victorious German fleet was in turn destroyed by a British squadron which met them at the Falkland Islands on December 8, and sank Admiral von Spee's flagship, the Scharnhorst, as well as the Gneisenau, the Leipzig and the Nueenberg. Only the Dresden escaped and made her way to San Juan Fernandez Island, where she was found on March 22 by the Glasgow and the Kent and sunk in the territorial waters of Chile, an act for which England offered a full apology to the South American republic. Meanwhile, following raids on the English coast, in which German warships had bombarded defenceless towns, killing many non-combatants as at Scarborough, a British battle cruiser squadron intercepted other German ships engaged on a similar errand, and on January 24

the Blücher, a powerful armored cruiser, was sunk and several other German warships were damaged. In this engagement the Germans claimed to have destroyed the British battle cruiser Tiger, but this vessel, although badly damaged, reached its home port. There have been a number of naval skirmishes in the Baltic, in the Mediterranean, where at the beginning of the war the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau bombarded the coast of Algeria before making good their escape into the Dardanelles, and the French sank the German ship Panther. In the Adriatic French and Italian warships have been engaged with Austrian vessels. But submarine warfare has perhaps been the most important phase of naval activity; in any case, it has been the most spectacular. At the outbreak of the war the submarine was an unknown quantity, but in the last fifteen months it has more than justified all the wonderful things that had been claimed for it and has profoundly changed naval tactics. When the British fleet, at the beginning of hostilities, was patrolling the North Sea and the British Channel, the German submarines accounted for a number of ships. On September 6 the cruiser Pathfinder was sunk, and two weeks later the U-9, one of the smallest undersea boats, sank three big English men-of-war, the Aboukir, the Cressy and the Hogue. The Hawke, another British cruiser, was sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea on October 16, and on the 1st of January the battleship Formidable, which had just left the mouth of the Thames and gone to take up its position in the British Channel, was torpedoed in situ in the dead of night. A submarine actually penetrated the Downs and sank the British gunboat Niger, and the Bulwark, which was blown up in the Medway on November 26, is believed by many to have been torpedoed, though officially its loss is attributed to the explosion of ammunition which was being placed on board. The submarines have also been active in the Baltic and in the Mediterranean and near Eastern waters, but their use was confined to attacks on hostile warships until Germany attempted to carry out a "submarine blockade" of Great Britain in retaliation for the food blockade of Germany that had been established by England and France. On January 31 von Tirpitz, head of the German navy, began his attempt to starve England by sinking merchantmen and cargo carriers, three of which were torpedoed and sunk without warning by German submarines in the Irish Sea. This policy was continued till, on February 5, an announcement came from Berlin that after February 18 Germany would consider all the waters about the British Isles as a war zone and would destroy all enemy ships found there; at the same time warning was given to all neutral vessels to avoid these waters. This elicited a note from President Wilson warning Germany that she would be held to "a strict accountability" if American vessels were attacked or American lives lost. On February 18 Germany, despite the protests of neutrals, began sinking unarmed merchantmen in the so-called war zone, and in pursuance of this policy the steamship Lusitania, bound from New York to Liverpool, was sunk without warning on May 8 by a German submarine off Old Head of Kinsale, Ireland, with the loss of the lives of 1,150 non-combatants, many of whom were women and children. The death list included 114 Americans. This precipitated a crisis with the United States which has not yet passed. After the sinking of the Arabic, however, Germany stated that passenger ships would not be sunk without warning. Under this form of warfare Germany sunk more than 300 vessels belonging to the allies, with a loss of at least 2,000 lives and a property damage which has been variously assessed at between $35,000,000 and $60,000,000. However, within six months of Germany's submarine warfare the British navy has found means to counteract the new peril. It is known that airships, torpedo boats and fast destroyers have been used with great effect and that many submarines have been caught in nets and destroyed, but the British Government has refused to make public any details or to give out any information in connection with the capture or destruction of undersea craft. It is known that at the outbreak of the war Germany had about thirty-five submarines, and it is believed that for the first six months she was launching new ones at the rate of one a week, increasing this output as the war progressed. This would give her a total of some 120 submarines since the war started. Of these it is currently reported that some four-score have either been captured or destroyed by the British navy. German submarines have penetrated the Straits of Gibraltar and have sunk vessels in the Adriatic; they have been active in the Baltic, and are even reported to have attacked cargo ships in the White Sea, but of late submarines have been much less active, partly because the heavy weather experienced in European waters for the past two months has been unfavorable to their operation, partly because the number accounted for by the British fleet has greatly lessened the number of officers and men available for this particular service. England is believed to have about 100 submarines and France at least fifty, but they have been employed exclusively as weapons of attack on enemy battleships, and on July 2 the Pomern, a powerful German ship of the line, was torpedoed in the Baltic, and six months later the Turkish battleship Massudieh was sunk in the Dardanelles. Apart from the exploits of the submarines, one of the most spectacular features of the naval warfare was the brief but active careers of the German sea raiders which pressed upon British and allied commerce in the Atlantic and Pacific in the early days of the war. The Emden was the most famous, and she was sunk by the Australian cruiser Sydney; the Karlsruhe ran ashore in the Caribbean and was blown up by her crew, and the others that were not destroyed took refuge in American ports.

GERMANY LOSES HER COLONIAL EMPIRE.

When the Kaiser declared war, on August 1, 1914, Germany had a colonial empire more than one-third the size of the United States, covering 1,134,240 square miles in Africa, Asia, and the islands of the Pacific, with a total population well in excess of 15,000,000. All of this, with the exception of a portion of her East African possessions, has been stripped from her, and everywhere in German West Africa, in German East Africa, in Kamerun, in Togoland, in the Province of Kiaochow in China and in the Pacific, German forces have been cut off from the rest of the world and forced to surrender. By far the strongest and most important German colony was in Southwest Africa, where some 12,000 regular German troops were stationed, besides which there were some 7,000 or 8,000 reservists who had been given land to colonize and settle there. The military strength of this colony and its proximity to the British Union of South Africa made it a matter of great importance that it should be at once subdued, and at the very beginning of the war orders were issued to the Union of South Africa to organize an expedition and invade the German colony. But for many years German agents had been active in British South Africa keeping alive whatever resentment remained against the English as the result of the Boer War. These intrigues were so far successful that when the order to attack the German colony was given, General Beyers, commander of the British South African forces, resigned, and with General de Wet, the famous Boer leader, started a revolt against the British. General Botha, who was Premier of the Union of South Africa, thereupon took the command of the British forces and stamped out the rebellion. Beyers was killed and de Wet captured and sentenced to only six years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000. Then General Botha led his forces against the Germans and, after a brilliant campaign, conquered the colony, the last German force surrendering to him unconditionally on July 8. Kamerun was also taken possession of by English and French forces about the same time, after considerable fighting which at the outset almost ended in the repulse of an English force, the native soldiers getting out of hand in the face of the German machine-gun fire and retreating with a loss of nearly half their effectives. But this setback was retrieved, and in the Spring the British renewed their advance and finally took possession of the colony on June 28. Togoland offered virtually no resistance, falling to a force from the British Colony of the Gold Coast within two weeks of the declaration of war. The capture of the German settlement in Asia, with its strong fortress of Tsingtau, was achieved by the Japanese troops supported by some detachments of England's Indian army.

JAPAN AND THE WAR.

Japan entered the war as an ally of England after having, on August 16, addressed an ultimatum to Germany demanding the immediate withdrawal of all German warships in Japanese and Chinese waters or their disarmament and internment and the evacuation within thirty days of the Province of Kiaochow, the principal port of which, Tsingtau, had been strongly fortified by the Kaiser and formed the nucleus of the dominions that Germany sought to acquire in Asia. The Province of Kiaochow was held by Germany under a ninety-nine years' lease which Berlin had forced China to grant in 1897 as an indemnity for the murder of two German missionaries. Germany had strongly fortified the position with a chain of eight forts, the three most important of which were named Bismarck, Moltke and Itlis. No answer was sent by Berlin to the Japanese ultimatum, and so, on August 22, Japan announced that she was prepared to carry out the terms of her offensive and defensive alliance with England, and on the following day she declared war on Germany, which had at that time a force of about 8,000 men in Tsingtau. Against these the Mikado sent 24,000 well-equipped first-line troops. They were soon joined by detachments of England's Indian army, and the combined forces set about to reduce the Kaiser's Asiatic stronghold. An Anglo-Japanese fleet bombarded the forts on August 24 and 25, but the allied commanders decided that the harbor defences were too strong to be reduced by a sea attack and that it would be necessary to attack the fortress by land. On September 18 the Japanese made their first onslaught, and twelve days later they were in possession of the outer works and had seized two of the smaller forts. By this time some 40,000 Japanese troops had been brought up, but the German garrison held out with great gallantry in the face of a continuous bombardment from sea, land and sky. It was not till November 6 that the defenders succumbed to a combined sea and land attack. The stronghold finally surrendered unconditionally on November 10, its defenders, with their arms and ammunition and five transports, two gunboats and a destroyer falling into the hands of the allies. Before the fall of Tsingtau, China had protested against an alleged violation of her neutrality by Japan, and had made it known that she expected the provinces to be turned back to her in accordance with an implied promise made by the Japanese at the outbreak of the war, but there was a strong popular movement in Japan in favor of retaining the conquered territory, and formal announcement was made on November 7 by Baron China, the Japanese Ambassador in Washington, that England and Japan would occupy the Province of Kiaochow jointly until the end of the war, when a decision would be taken as to its final disposition. As a matter of fact, the port of Tsingtau has continued to be administered by Japanese officials. But the reduction of the Kaiser's Asiatic stronghold has not by any means been the limit of the services Japan has rendered to the allies during the war. From the very first all her factories have been working at full blast, turning out arms and ammunition, most of which was shipped to Russia, and when the situation on the eastern front in Europe became critical the Japanese went to the length of dismantling their own forts and shipped every available gun over the trans-Siberian railroad. In addition to this, numbers of Japanese engineers and railroad men and traffic experts have been working to relieve the congestion on the trans-Siberian railroad so as to be able to keep Russian communications with the Pacific at the highest possible degree of efficiency. Further, virtually all of Japan's army is kept in a state of readiness in case any emergency might arise in Asia.

TURKEY AND THE WAR.

Turkey's entrance into the war on the side of Germany may be directly traced to the activities of the Kaiser himself, as for a quarter of a century he had lost no opportunity of establishing cordial relations with the Sublime Porte. His first visit to Constantinople was in 1889, after his sister's marriage in Athens. In 1898 he returned, and in a series of personal conferences with Abdul Hamid, who had incurred the enmity of all Christian Europe by the Armenian massacres, he laid the basis for the extension of German influence in the East. When the war broke out, Turkey had two fine battleships building in British shipyards, and these England seized despite the Sultan's protest. While relations between England and the Sublime Porte were strained over this incident, two German cruisers, the Breslau and the Goeben, managed to elude the French and English fleets in the Mediterranean and make their way to the Dardanelles. Germany forthwith turned both of these vessels over to Turkey under pretext of a sale. This led to a protest by the allies, who demanded that all the German officers and men of the two boats should either be sent out of Turkey or interned for the duration of the war. This request was refused, and on October 29 two cruisers flying the Turkish flag sank a Russian gunboat in the Black Sea and fired upon a French steamship, two of whose passengers were killed by shell fire. This act of war was followed, on November 31, by the bombardment of Theodosia and Novorossich by a Turkish fleet under the command of the German Admiral von Souchon, who flew his flag from the Goeben. Two days later the Ambassadors of the allies demanded their passports and left Constantinople, and on November 5 the allies declared war on Turkey. Russia at once threw a strong force over the Caucasian frontier in an effort to take Erzerum and bring about a revolt of the Armenians against Turkey. On November 16, at the request of the Kaiser, the Sheikh-ul-Islam, head of the Mohammedans at Constantinople, proclaimed a holy war, but the only effect of this was to bring about a repudiation of the Sultan by the Mohammedan leaders in India, Egypt and North Africa. There were some naval engagements of minor importance in the Black Sea between Russian and Turkish warships, and an Anglo-French fleet made a hostile demonstration before the Dardanelles, the entrance to which they bombarded. The Turks at first fell back before the Russian forces in Armenia, but in the early part of November they inflicted a severe defeat and drove the Czar's troops over the frontier, pushing a strong counter offensive in the direction of Tiflis, the capital of the Caucasus; but the Turks were in turn beaten by the Russians, who had brought up strong reinforcements and annihilated one of the Sultan's army corps at Ardahan in the early part of January. The Turks took revenge by a wholesale slaughter of Armenians. Fighting has continued in this region, extending over a long strip of territory running through Russia in Asia, Turkey in Asia and the northern part of Persia as far as Tabriz, but although the losses have been heavy and many non-combatants have been put to the sword, no decisive advantage has been gained by either side. England also struck at Turkey by sending an expedition from India, which started from the Persian Gulf and, advancing north through the valley of the Tigris, carried the war into the Garden of Eden and menaced Mesopotamia. This also hit at Germany's great Asiatic enterprise, the Bagdad railroad. This British expedition met with continual success, and was within a few miles of Bagdad when, at the end of November, they suffered a reverse at the hands of an overwhelming force of Turks. The British advance guard had been lured by Arabs, who pretended a great hatred of the Turks, as far as Ctesiphon, just south of Bagdad, but when they saw the British outnumbered they fell upon their flanks, and after severe losses the Anglo-Indian expedition was forced to fall back nearly a hundred miles to Kut-el-Amara. Egypt also was brought into the zone of active military operations by a spirited Turkish attack on the Suez Canal late in January and in early February. Led by German officers, large bodies of Turkish troops had been gathered in Palestine, and advanced over the Arabian desert; but on February 4 they were severely defeated by Anglo-Egyptian and Australian troops, and since then no attempt has been made on Egypt, although it is, in a way, the keystone of the British Empire. Far more important than any other operations, however, has been the attempt of England and France to force the passage of the Dardanelles, so as to take much needed supplies of arms and ammunition to Russia and in turn enable her to export the enormous stocks of wheat which have piled up at her Black Sea ports. Despite the misgivings of Lord Fisher, the First Sea Lord, and of high French military authorities, a combined English and French fleet attempted to force the passage of the Dardanelles, battering at the Turkish forts from February 21 to March 18, when they attempted to force the Narrows, but were repulsed, with the loss of the British battleships Irresistible and Ocean and the French battleships Bouvet and Gaulois, in addition to serious injury to a number of other warships engaged. A joint land and sea expedition was sent to accomplish what the fleets had failed to achieve. On April 25, in the face of incredible obstacles, 80,000 men were successfully landed. The Turks had laid barbed wire entanglements even under the surface of the water near shore, they had the exact range of every possible landing place, and an army of more than 100,000 men officered by Germans. The most desperate fighting has been going on there since the beginning of May. The allies have employed British and French regulars—the famous Foreign Legion of France, British colonials from Australia and New Zealand, and troops from Egypt, the Sudan and North Africa—but they have not yet succeeded in capturing the summits of the hills that command the Narrows and the great Turkish forts. The land forces have had the constant support of British and French fleets, which have engaged the defences at close range. On May 11 the British battleship Goliath was sunk, and two weeks later a German submarine made its way through the straits of Gibraltar, succeeded in torpedoing the British battleship Triumph and the Majestic and Agamemnon, British submarines also distinguished themselves, and several passed through the Narrows and sank a number of Turkish transports, causing a great shortage of ammunition among the defenders. Turkish troops are also reported to have taken part in the recent fighting in the Balkans, having made a junction with the Bulgarian forces.

ITALY AND THE WAR.

Some of the fiercest fighting of the war has taken place on the Austro-Italian front, where close range artillery battles and desperate hand-to-hand fighting in mountain passes have entailed enormous loss of life. Italy entered the war on May 23, but for nearly six weeks her operations were mostly strategic movements of troops designed to prevent the Austrians from invading Lombardy. Until she had made certain that the defences of her frontier were reasonably safe from attack, Italy could not take the offensive. Then she had to concentrate large forces on the plains of Venetia to support attacks which were launched against the Trentino-Tyrol fortifications, so as to keep the Austrian garrisons bottled up there while the main offensive was directed against the Isonzo front. Austria made no attempt to defend the west bank of the Isonzo, but withdrew her forces immediately to the eastern bank of the river. On May 25, two days after the declaration of war, the Italians crossed the frontier and established themselves on the highways leading to Tolmino and Goeritz, which was the main Italian objective,

Then they struck at the Drave Valley and Istria, which offer a more promising road into Austria than the main range of the Tyrolean Alps that lead directly to Vienna. The obstacle offered by the Julian Alps was far less formidable, and the advance toward Trieste was pushed, despite the excellent fortifications that the Austrians had established on the other side of the Isonzo River. By the beginning of June the Italian forces had found a weak spot in the Austrian defences and had taken Monte Nero by assault. This height commands several important passes and is in the rear of the Isonzo line. This success enabled the Italians to throw their right wing forward on the coast and capture Monfalcone, one of Austria's naval stations on the Adriatic, with its big shipyards and docks. Already the Italians were in sight of Trieste, and their next success was the capture of Gradisca, on June 10, which permitted them to concentrate all their forces at this portion of the front for an attack on Goeritz, the main Austrian stronghold of the Isonzo line. A spirited attack by the Italians cut the Austrian line near Plava, and, with the aid of forces from Monte Nero, Tolmino was invested and its surrender forced early in July. Goeritz then became the target for which the Italian forces aimed, but its magnificent natural defences and elaborate intrenchments rendered it almost impregnable. Italy attacked on a threefold plan. She bombarded the approaches of the fortress, and reduced Podgora and the Monte Sabino, within less than four miles of Goeritz; she struck out from Plava with an infantry movement designed to envelop the fortress, and lastly she launched a general attack, preceded by the concentrated fire of hundreds of pieces of heavy artillery, followed by an infantry attack on the western edge of the Plateau of Carso, which lies immediately southeast of Goeritz and extends almost to the outskirts of Trieste. Fighting of the most desperate character ensued all along this front, and although at the beginning of December it seemed that Goeritz must finally fall, and that the Italian forces would be able to advance to cut off and capture Trieste, the Austrians have managed to prevent the actual capture of the city.

WAR IN THE BALKANS.

On Friday, August 13, news reached London that an Austro-German army of more than 300,000 men was massing at a point on the Serbian frontier, and it was asserted that the Kaiser was about to strike a blow at Serbia in order to improve Teuton prospects in the Balkans, where Roumania and Greece had been reported as waiting a favorable opportunity to join the allies. The great German victories in Russia, following the fall of Warsaw, had, however, caused the Balkan kingdoms to waver, and Bulgaria was said to have strong pro-German leanings. On August 16 the Austro-German army crossed the frontier and began a bombardment of Belgrade. This led to a crisis in the Greek Parliament, where the Venizelos party caused the downfall of the Cabinet, which supported the King's attitude of strict neutrality which he had promised his consort, who is the sister of the Kaiser, that he would maintain. On August 21 Serbia made it known that in accordance with the advice of the allies she was willing to grant the demands of Bulgaria for the return of territory taken in the last Balkan War, and for a time it seemed that Bulgaria would enter the war on the side of the allies. However, on September 19, inspired articles appeared in the German papers saying that Bulgaria would be won over to the central empires and that Germany would establish an unbroken line of armies from the Baltic to the Bosphorus. Serbia was to be crushed as Belgium had been. On September 23 Bulgaria mobilized her forces, and two days later Greece took a similar step. German officers made their appearance in Sofia in uniform and began to take over command of the Bulgarian army. This led Russia, on October 4, to send an ultimatum to Bulgaria demanding the expulsion of the Germans from Bulgarian army commands within twenty-four hours, but King Ferdinand sent no reply. The next day, on the invitation of Premier Venizelos, the allies began landing troops at Salonica to go to the assistance of Serbia. Immediately the King of Greece dismissed Venizelos and protested to the allies against the landing of troops on Greek territory. Bulgaria sent an ultimatum to Serbia demanding compliance with her Macedonian pretension within twenty-four hours, and at the same time 400,000 Austro-German troops began pouring into Serbia from the north. They were momentarily checked, and a portion of their advance guard was annihilated before Belgrade by a spirited Serbian attack. On the 10th of October Belgrade was occupied by the invaders, and on October 13 three Bulgarian armies invaded Serbia. This led Great Britain to declare war on Bulgaria, and the landing of allied forces at Salonica was continued at the rate of 12,000 to 14,000 a day; but, despite all their efforts, they were too late to save Serbia, which was rapidly overrun by the invaders. On October 20 Italy declared war on Bulgaria, thus further reducing the possibility of maintaining the existing "peace" status with Germany. The situation in the Balkans was becoming a serious menace to the allies, and England offered to cede Cyprus to Greece if that country would fulfil its treaty obligations to defend Serbia, but this offer was rejected on October 23. The allied fleets which had been supporting the land operations at the Dardanelles bombarded the Bulgarian coast from the Aegean Sea. Some relief was afforded to the situation by the French effecting a junction with the Serbian forces and taking Strumitza, but on October 27 Lord Lansdowne announced in the House of Commons that Serbia could not hold out much longer, and on the following day the Austro-German and Bulgarian armies joined their forces and the Kaiser had made good his boast that his line would stretch unbroken from the Baltic to the Bosphorus. Serbia was overrun, nearly its entire army being destroyed or taken prisoners, and the allied forces on the spot by the middle of December did not exceed 150,000, and were outnumbered at least four to one by the Austro-German-Bulgarian contingents. Italy, however, is believed to have landed a large force in Albania, and the Czar is striking at Bulgaria from the east; but these movements are hidden behind a veil of strict censorship. If the combined Anglo-French-Russian and Italian forces succeed in cutting the Kaiser's extended line, Constantinople will fall and the iron ring around Germany will be closed tighter than ever. If the Kaiser resists their efforts, on the other hand, he will be able to throw perhaps a million men, including the German-officered Turkish armies, against Egypt, the very keystone of the British Empire.

THE BUTCHER'S BILL.

Experience has shown that nations organized on a military basis and resorting to conscription can place in the field a total fighting force—including active armies and reserves of all kinds—equal to one-tenth of the total population. As each year the number of males attaining a fighting age is approximately 2 per cent. of the population, it is not an exaggeration to say that in the case of nations such as Germany and France their total available fighting forces are equal to 12 per cent. of what their population was when the war broke out, less the losses so far incurred. This percentage, however, is too high in the case of some of the other nations at war, and in the following table an effort is made to arrive at the actual number of men available on both sides in the great war:

|                                     | Population. | Basis. | Man-Power. |

| Japan .....                         | 50,000,000  | ....   | 1,000,000  |
| Total man-power of the allies.....  |             |        | 28,300,000 |

Thus the total man-power of the combatants exceeds 40,000,000, with the allies almost twice as powerful as the central empires. But great as has been the theatre of the war, it has not been possible for any one of the powers to use all of their men in the field. Space, transportation, supplies, equipment and officers have been alike lacking for the handling of such vast numbers of men. Germany has probably never had more than 3,500,000 men in arms at one time, Austria may have had 2,000,000, Turkey about 700,000 and Bulgaria possibly as many as 300,000. This would give a total war footing for the central empires of about 6,500,000 and a reserve of 8,300,000, less losses. Now, actual experience in this war has shown that the losses of armies in the field are about 10 per cent. per month, but that some 40 per cent. of the total casualties finally return to the firing line when medical relief is as prompt as it has been on the western front. This makes the net wastage of armies in the field 6 per cent. per month. Germany's net losses, on the basis of seventeen months' fighting, would therefore be slightly in excess of 100 per cent. of her armies in the field, or 3,500,000 men; Austria's losses have certainly been heavier in proportion on account of the large number of prisoners taken by the Russians and the heavy losses on the Italian front, but they probably do not exceed 2,500,000; Turkey's losses for fourteen months' fighting would be a little less than 500,000, and it is known that in the last two months the Bulgarians have lost more than 50,000. On the 1st of January, therefore, Germany, with a field army of 3,500,000 men, will have 800,000 men in reserve; Austria, with a field army of 2,000,000, will have about 500,000 in reserve; Turkey, with a field army of 700,000, will have 400,000 in reserve, and Bulgaria, with forces of 800,000, will not have more than 50,000 to fall back upon. This places the total man-power of the Kaiser's forces, counting Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria, on the 1st of January, 1916, at an actual fighting force of 6,500,000 men, with 1,750,000 in reserve. If we apply the same calculations to the allies, leaving Japan out of consideration, we know that France has never had more than 2,000,000 in the field at any one time, Russia probably never had more than 2,500,000, England has but recently brought her field forces up to 1,000,000, and Italy is maintaining hers at about the same figure, making due allowance for troops that she may have landed within the past two weeks in the Balkans. Belgium had 250,000 under arms at the outset, as did Serbia. The total field armies of the allies have probably never at any one time exceeded 6,500,000, which is virtually the same field strength as the central empires; but deducting the casualties, there is an overwhelming surplus of reserves on the side of the allies. France must have lost at least 2,000,000 men to date, England's casualties are known to be 600,000, and Russia's have been much higher in proportion than those of the other nations, but they have not exceeded 4,000,000. Italy is credibly reported to have lost half a million men, and the Belgian and Serbian armies have been all but wiped out. The total losses of the allies have certainly not been inferior to 7,500,000. On this basis France, on the 1st of January, with a field army of 2,000,000 men, will have 800,000 in reserve, the same number as Germany. England, with 1,000,000 in the field, will have nearly 3,500,000 in reserve; Russia, if she maintains her army at a 2,500,000 strength, will still have 6,800,000 in reserve, and Italy with 1,000,000 in the field, will have 2,000,000 in reserve. This will give the allies a total field force of about 6,500,000, with more than 13,000,000 men in reserve. With the actual fighting forces in the field approximately equal—that is, allowing 6,500,000 for the central empires and Turkey and Bulgaria, and 6,500,000 for the allies—the former will have reserves of not more than 1,750,000, as against the latter's 13,000,000. At the present rate of slaughter, with a minimum wastage of 6 per cent. on 6,500,000 men, or nearly 400,000 men a month on each side, the central empires will have used up all of their reserves by the middle of May, 1916. But if England throws another million men into the field, and the Czar carries out the expectations of his allies and raises an army of five or six million men, the Spring of 1916 will find Germany hopelessly outnumbered as well as entirely destitute of reserves.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

In the United States women possess suffrage upon equal terms with men at all elections in Wyoming, established in 1869; in Colorado, in 1893; in Utah, in 1896; in Idaho, in 1896; in Washington, in 1910; in California, in 1911; in Arizona, Kansas, and Oregon, in 1912; and in Nevada and Montana, in 1914. During 1913 the Territorial Legislature of Alaska granted full suffrage to women, and the State Legislature of Illinois extended all the franchise rights within its power to bestow, namely, for all the offices not created by the State Constitution.

Women have school suffrage in Connecticut, Delaware, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Alaska. In Iowa women may vote at all school or municipal elections upon any proposition to vote bonds or increase the tax levies.

Abroad, women have full Parliamentary suffrage in Australia, New Zealand, the Isle of Man, Finland, Norway, Denmark, and Iceland. They have municipal suffrage on the same terms as men throughout the British Isles and in Sweden, and a certain measure of municipal franchise rights in nine of the provinces of Canada, and in the cities of Belize in British Honduras, Rangoon in Burma, and Baroda and DURING 1915 THE WOMAN SUFFRAGE

MAN-SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION OPPOSED TO POLITICAL SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN. Chairman, Everett P. Wheeler; Treasurer, Louis T. Romaine; Secretary, Franklin Carter, Jr. Headquarters, 27 William Street, New York City.

"This society organized in 1913 for the purpose of showing to legislative committees and the people generally that the giving of political suffrage to women generally would draw their interest and attention from home duties which they alone can discharge, would bring selfish and artful women to the front, attract them by political prizes, and tend to produce freak legislation. We call ourselves the Home Rule party."

MEN'S ANTI-SUFFRAGE LEAGUE OF NEW JERSEY.

President, Col. Wm. Libbey, Princeton, N. J.; Vice-President, Edward Q. Keasbey, Morristown, N. J.; Secretary, Walter C. Ellis, 25 Edgar Street, East Orange, N. J.; Treasurer, John C. Elsele, 191 Ballantine Parkway, Newark, N. J.

"The purpose in the minds of the men of this organization is to exempt the women of New Jersey from the burden of a political responsibility, which, on investigation, we find a vast majority do not desire. We are not opposed to women. We are for women, and in opposing the entrance of women in politics we know we are representing the interests and wishes of 80 per cent. of the women of this State."

QUALIFICATIONS FOR VOTING IN EACH STATE OR TERRITORY.

(Cor. municated to THE WORLD ALMANAC and corrected to date by the Attorneys-General of the respective States.)

In all the States except Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming and the Territory of Alaska the right to vote at general elections is restricted to males of 21 years of age and upward. Women in Illinois, Iowa, and Michigan have a restricted vote and in several States are entitled to vote at school elections. (See article entitled "Woman Suffrage.")

AMERICAN TRUTH SOCIETY.

This society was organized January 18, 1912, in New York City and incorporated February 9, 1912, under the laws of the State of New York.

The object of this society is: "To propagate a spirit of pure Americanism; to preserve the traditions of the United States inviolate; to oppose and resist by truth all attempts of corporations, societies and individuals to dominate the public opinion of the United States for the purpose of discriminating in the interests of any one race by means of legislation, literature, education or organized propaganda; to propagate the History of the United States and the States comprising the United States amongst the people of the United States, and to combat with truth all attempts to garble, falsify, misrepresent or suppress the History of the United States or the States comprising the United States, anywhere within the State of New York and the United States."

Headquarters, 1133 Broadway, New York City. President—Jeremiah A. O'Leary. Secretary—George W. Mead.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC LEAGUE OF CLUBS.

PRESIDENT, Frank S. Clark, Indianapolis, Ind.; Secretary, William C. Liller, Indianapolis, Ind.; Treasurer, C. Arthur Haulenbeck, Jr., Manhattan, Kan.

The National Democratic League of Clubs is engaging actively in the work of adding to the Democratic vote in the nation. Its labors are purely a party work, aiming simply at the increase of Democratic strength. The league exists as a vote-getting auxiliary of the regular Democratic organizations, and its success depends upon the hearty co-operation of Democrats throughout the country. It is the aim and endeavor of the National Democratic League of Clubs to aid in work of organization and to help the regular organizations to achieve greater success.

The league is a union or federation of Democratic clubs and associations, in all parts of the country. It is now in its seventh year. At the bi-annual meeting held in Washington, D. C., December 3-4, 1912, thirty-three States of the Union were represented. Its management is intrusted to a board of directors composed of some of the foremost men in the party, who take an active interest in its success.

The National Democratic League of Clubs is not organized for the purpose of either advocating or opposing any Democrat before he shall have been chosen by the constituted bodies or of furthering the interests of any man or set of men, before being indorsed by the party, but for the attainment and preservation of unity, the upbuilding of the party, and the promotion of its principles and welfare. Nor is it intended that any club or the League of Clubs shall usurp the functions of the several State, county or district committees, but rather work in harmony and in co-operation with them.

The National Democratic League of Clubs aims:

To make loyal Democrats of young men who are about to cast their first votes.

To explain clearly to the foreign-born voters the practical helplessness and patriotic purposes of the Democratic party, and to enlist the new-made citizen in its ranks, thus making them good Democrats and therefore better Americans.

To confirm in the wavering an inclination toward Democracy and to make a habit of party zeal.

To preach early and late, day in and day out, the politics of Jefferson and Jackson.

To enlist voters, regardless of previous party affiliations, in the cause of Democracy, by every honorable means.

State Leagues or Federations of Democratic clubs, co-operating with the National League, have been organized in forty of the States and have a membership in excess of 875,000. Affiliated clubs have been organized in every State.

The league has headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., and at Washington, D. C.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14.

DELEGATES TO THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The basis of representation in the next National convention is very accurately described in the resolution adopted by the National Committee, which has since been ratified.

Each State shall be entitled in such convention to four Delegates-at-Large:

Two additional Delegates-at-Large for each Representative-at-Large in Congress elected from any State entitled to one or more additional Representatives in Congress under the apportionment made in accordance with the last census, but in which State no new Congressional district has been provided by law;

One delegate from each Congressional district;

An additional delegate for each Congressional district in which the vote for any Republican elector in 1908, or for the Republican nominee for Congress in 1914, shall have been not less than seven thousand five hundred (7,500);

Provided, however, that the total number of delegates to which any State is entitled, shall be

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA GOVERNMENT.

THE municipal government of the District of Columbia is vested by act of Congress approved June 11, 1878, in three Commissioners, two of whom are appointed by the President from citizens of the District having had three years' residence therein immediately preceding that appointment, and confirmed by the Senate. The other Commissioner is detailed by the President of the United States from the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, and must have lineal rank senior to Captain, or be a Captain who has served at least fifteen years in the Corps of Engineers of the Army. The Commissioners appoint nearly all the subordinate official service of said government, except the Board of Education, which is appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Commissioners: Oliver P. Newman and Louis Brownlow (Democrats), whose terms expire July 19, 1916, and January 22, 1918, respectively, and Major Charles W. Kutz (non-partisan), Corps of Engineers, United States Army, detailed during the pleasure of the President of the United States; Secretary, Daniel J. Donovan, $2,400 per annum; Auditor, Alonzo Tweedale, $4,000; Collector of Taxes, Ben L. Prince, $4,000; Assessor, Wm. P. Richards, $4,000; Corporation Counsel, Conrad H. Syme, $4,500; Superintendent of Schools, Ernest L. Thurston, $6,000; Superintendent of Insurance, Chas. F. Nesbit, $3,500; Health Officer, Wm. C. Woodward, $4,000; Major and Superintendent of Police, Raymond Pullman, $4,000; Chief of Fire Department, Frank J. Wagner, $3,500. Offices of Commissioners. District Building, Washington, D. C.

The Judiciary—Court of Appeals: Chief Justice, Seth Shepard; Associate Justices, Charles H. Robb, J. A. van Orsdal. Supreme Court: Chief Justice, J. Harry Covington; Associate Justices, Thomas H. Anderson, Ashley M. Gould, Walter I. McCoy, Wendell P. Stafford, Frederick L. Siddons.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION OF 1916.

The next Presidential election will take place on Tuesday, November 7, 1916.

The President and Vice-President of the United States are chosen by officials termed "Electors" in each State, who are, under existing State laws, chosen by the qualified voters thereof by ballot, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November in every fourth year preceding the year in which the Presidential term expires.

The Constitution of the United States prescribes that each State shall "appoint," in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress; but no Senator or Representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be an elector. The Constitution requires that the day when electors are chosen shall be the same throughout the United States. At the beginning of our Government most of the electors were chosen by the Legislatures of their respective States, the people having no direct participation in their choice; and one State, South Carolina, continued that practice down to the breaking out of the civil war. But in all the States now the electors are, under the direction of State laws, chosen by the people on a general State ticket.

The manner in which the chosen electors meet and ballot for a President and Vice-President of the United States is provided for in Article XII. of the Constitution, and is as follows:

The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President; and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate.

The same article then prescribes the mode in which the Congress shall count the ballots of the electors, and announce the result thereof, which is as follows:

The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted: the person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice.

The procedure of the two houses, in case the returns of the election of electors from any State are disputed, is provided in the "Electoral Count" act, passed by the Forty-ninth Congress. The act directs that the Presidential electors shall meet and give their votes on the second Monday in January next following their election. It fixes the time when Congress shall be in session to count the ballots as the second Wednesday in February succeeding the meeting of the electors.

The Constitution also defines who is eligible for President of the United States, as follows:

No person except a natural-born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years.

The qualifications for Vice-President are the same.

THE DETERMINATION OF THE RESULT OF THE 1912 PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION WAS AS FOLLOWS:

Feb. 12, 1913, the two houses being assembled in the Hall of the House of Representatives for the count of the electoral vote, and the count having been duly made and certified to, and the announcement thereof made to the two houses assembled, the statement of the Tellers closed in these words:

"This announcement of the state of the vote by the President of the Senate shall be deemed a SUFFICIENT DECLARATION OF THE PERSONS ELECTED PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, each for the term beginning March 4, 1913, and shall be entered, together with a list of the votes, on the Journals of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

"The count of the electoral vote having been completed, and the result announced, the joint meeting of the two houses was dissolved, and

"The Senate returned to its Chamber."

SALARY OF THE PRESIDENT.

The salary of the President of the United States was the cause of discussion in the First Congress, in view of the fact that the Constitution declared that the President should receive compensation for his services. Washington had notified his fellow citizens that he desired no salary. The limits suggested in Congress ranged from $15,000 to $70,000. The salary was finally placed at $25,000 and this remained the compensation until President Grant's second term (March 3, 1873), when it was increased to $50,000. Chapter 2918 of the Laws of the Second Session of the Fifty-ninth Congress, approved March 4, 1907, appropriated "for travelling expenses of the President of the United States, to be expended at his discretion and accounted for by his certificate solely, $25,000." In the Second Session of the Sixtieth Congress the matter of increasing the President's salary was again considered, and it was decided that the President's salary be fixed at $75,000 a year.

Presidential Elections.

NOTE.—There is, properly speaking, no popular vote for President and Vice-President; the people vote for electors, and those chosen in each State meet therein and vote for the candidates for President and Vice-President. The record of any popular vote for electors prior to 1828 is so meagre and imperfect that a compilation would be useless. In most of the States, for more than a quarter century following the establishment of the Government, the State Legislatures "appointed" the Presidential electors, and the people therefore voted only indirectly for them, their choice being expressed by their votes for members of the Legislature. In this tabulation only the aggregate electoral votes for candidates for President and Vice-President in the first ten quadrennial elections appear.

ELECTORAL VOTES.

1789. Previous to 1804, each elector voted for two candidates for President. The one who received the largest number of votes was declared President, and the one who received the next largest number of votes was declared Vice-President. The electoral votes for the first President of the United States were: George Washington, 69; John Adams, of Massachusetts, 34; John Jay, of New York, 9; R. H. Harrison, of Maryland, 6; John Rutledge, of South Carolina, 6; John Hancock, of Massachusetts, 4; George Clinton, of New York, 3; Samuel Huntington, of Connecticut, 2; John Milton, of Georgia, 2; James Armstrong, of Georgia; Benjamin Lincoln, of Massachusetts; and Edward Telfair, of Georgia, 1 vote each. Vacancies (votes not cast), 4. George Washington was chosen President and John Adams Vice-President.

1792. George Washington, Federalist, received 132 votes; John Adams, Federalist, 77; George Clinton, of New York, Republican (s), 50; Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, Republican, 4; Aaron Burr, of New York, Republican, 1 vote. Vacancies, 2. George Washington was chosen President and John Adams Vice-President.

1796. John Adams, Federalist, 71; Thomas Jefferson, Republican, 68; Thomas Pinckney, of South Carolina, Federalist, 59; Aaron Burr, of New York, Republican, 30; Samuel Adams, of Massachusetts, Republican, 15; Oliver Ellsworth, of Connecticut, Independent, 11; George Clinton, of New York, Republican, 7; John Jay, of New York, Federalist, 5; James Iredell, of North Carolina, Federalist, 3; George Washington, of Virginia; John Henry, of Maryland, and S. Johnson, of North Carolina, all Federalists, 3 votes each; Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, of South Carolina, Federalist, 1 vote. John Adams was chosen President and Thomas Jefferson Vice-President.

1800. Thomas Jefferson, Republican, 73; Aaron Burr, Republican, 73; John Adams, Federalist, 65; Charles C. Pinckney, Federalist, 64; John Jay, Federalist, 1 vote. There being a tie vote for Jefferson and Burr, the choice devolved upon the House of Representatives. Jefferson received the votes of ten States, which, being the largest vote cast for a candidate, elected him President. Burr received the votes of four States, which, being the next largest vote, elected him Vice-President. There were 2 blank votes.

1804. The Constitution of the United States having been amended, the electors at this election voted for a President and a Vice-President, instead of for two candidates for President. The result was as follows: For President, Thomas Jefferson, Republican, 162; Charles C. Pinckney, Federalist, 14. For Vice-President, George Clinton, Republican, 16; Rufus King, of New York, Federalist, 14. Jefferson was chosen President and Clinton Vice-President.

1808. For President, James Madison, of Virginia, Republican, 122; Charles C. Pinckney, of South Carolina, Federalist, 47; George Clinton, of New York, Republican, 6. For Vice-President, George Clinton, Republican, 113; Rufus King, of New York, Federalist, 47; John Langdon, of New Hampshire, 9; James Madison, 3; James Monroe, 3. Vacancy, 1. Madison was chosen President and Clinton Vice-President.

1812. For President, James Madison, Republican, 128; De Witt Clinton, of New York, Federalist, 89. For Vice-President, Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, 131; Jared Ingersoll, of Pennsylvania, Federalist, 86. Vacancy, 1. Madison was chosen President and Gerry Vice-President.

1816. For President, James Monroe, of Virginia, Republican, 183; Rufus King, of New York, Federalist, 34. For Vice-President, Daniel D. Tompkins, of New York, Republican, 183; John Eager Howard, of Maryland, Federalist, 32; James Ross, of Pennsylvania, 5; John Marshall, of Virginia, 4; Robert G. Harper, of Maryland, 3. Vacancies, 4. Monroe was chosen President and Tompkins Vice-President.

1820. For President, James Monroe, of Virginia, Republican, 231; John Q. Adams, of Massachusetts, Republican, 1. For Vice-President, Daniel D. Tompkins, Republican, 218; Richard Stockton, of New Jersey, 3; Daniel Rodney, of Delaware, 4; Robert G. Harper, of Maryland, and Richard Rush, of Pennsylvania, 1 vote each. Vacancies, 3. James Monroe was chosen President and Daniel D. Tompkins Vice-President.

1824. For President, Andrew Jackson, of Tennessee, Republican, 99; John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, Republican, 84; Henry Clay, of Kentucky, Republican, 37; William H. Crawford, of Georgia, Republican, 41. No candidate having a majority of the electoral vote, John Quincy Adams was elected by the House of Representatives. For Vice-President, John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, Republican, 182; Nathan Sanford, of New York, Republican, 30; Nathaniel Macon, of North Carolina, Republican, 24; Andrew Jackson, of Tennessee, Republican, 13; Martin Van Buren, of New York, Republican, 9; Henry Clay, of Kentucky, Republican, 3; Calhoun was chosen Vice-President.

NOTES TO THE TABLES OF THE PRESIDENTS, ON THE TWO PRECEDING PAGES.

* Monroe abandoned the profession of law when a young man, and was afterward, and until his election, always holding public office. † Jackson called himself a South Carolinian, and his biographer, Kendall, recorded his birthplace in Lancaster Co., S. C.; but Parton has published documentary evidence to show that Jackson was born in Union Co., N. C., less than a quarter mile from the South Carolina line. ‡ Or of departure from college.

§ Widows. Their maiden names are in parentheses. ¶ She was the divorced wife of Captain Robards. (a) The Democratic party of to-day claims lineal descent from the first Republican party, and President Jefferson as its founder. (b) Political parties were disorganized at the time of the election of John Quincy Adams. He claimed to be a Republican, but his doctrines were decidedly Federalistic. The opposition to his Administration took the name of Democrats, and elected Jackson President.

(c) Randall, the biographer of Jefferson, declares that he was a believer in Christianity, although not a sectarian. (d) While President Johnson was not a church-member, he was a Christian believer. His wife was a Methodist.

Washington's first inauguration was in New York, and his second in Philadelphia. Adams was inaugurated in Philadelphia, and Jefferson and the Presidents following elected by the people, in the city of Washington. Arthur took the Presidential oath of office first in New York City. John Adams and Jefferson died on the same day, the Fourth of July, 1826, and Monroe died on the Fourth of July five years later. John Quincy Adams was a Representative and Andrew Johnson a Senator in Congress after the expiration of their Presidential terms, and both died while holding those offices. Tyler was a Representative in the Confederate Congress from Virginia, and died in office.

Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley were assassinated while in office. Lincoln at Ford's Theatre, Washington, D. C., April 14, 1865, from a pistol shot fired by John Wilkes Booth, who was killed near Fredericksburg, Va., April 26, 1865, by Sergeant Boston Corbett. Garfield was shot in the Pennsylvania Railroad Depot, Washington, D. C., July 2, 1881, and died at Elberon, Long Branch, N. J., September 19, 1881. The assassin was Charles Jules Guiteau, who was hanged at Washington, D. C., June 30, 1882. McKinley was shot twice September 6, 1901, while in the Temple of Music of the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N. Y., and died from his wounds at the home of John G. Milburn, Buffalo, September 14, 1901. The assassin was Louis Czolgosz, who was electrocuted at Auburn State Prison, New York, October 29, 1901.

Jackson was shot at in the Capitol at Washington, D. C., January 29, 1835, by a house painter named Richard Lawrence, escaping because the pistol of the assassin missed fire. Ex-President Roosevelt was shot and wounded by John Schrank, an insane man, at Milwaukee, Wis., October 14, 1912.

Cleveland after taking the oath as President, kissed the open bible, his lips touching Psalm CXII., verses 5-10, inclusive. Garfield's first act after taking the oath was to kiss his mother.

The sixth President was the son of the second President, and the twenty-third President was the grandson of the ninth President. William Henry Harrison was the eighth and Benjamin Harrison the tenth in descent from Pocahontas and John Rolfe. Lincoln was the first President wearing a full beard. Grant the first wearing a mustache. Buchanan and Cleveland were bachelors when they entered the White House as Presidents, but Cleveland surrendered during his first term. Washington, Monroe, Pierce and Hayes were born on Friday. J. Q. Adams, Pierce and Garfield were inaugurated on Friday. Tyler, Polk and Pierce died on Friday. Lincoln was assassinated on Friday.

There were remarkable coincidences in the lives of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis. Both were born in Kentucky; Lincoln in 1809, Davis in 1808. Both removed from their native State in childhood, Lincoln to the Northwest, Davis to the Southwest. Lincoln was a Captain of Volunteers and Davis a Second Lieutenant of Regulars in the Black Hawk War of 1832. They began their political careers the same year, 1844, Lincoln being a Presidential Elector for Clay, and Davis for Polk. They were elected to Congress about the same time, 1845 and 1846. They were called to preside over their respective governments the same year and within a few days; Davis, February 8, 1861, Lincoln, March 4, 1861.

Washington, Monroe, and Jackson were soldiers in the Revolutionary war; Jackson, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, and Buchanan in the war of 1812-15; Lincoln in the Black Hawk war; Taylor, Pierce, and Grant in the Mexican war; Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, B. Harrison, and McKinley in the Civil War, and Roosevelt was in the war with Spain. Adams and Jefferson were signers of the Declaration of Independence, and Washington and Madison of the Constitution.

Grant was christened Hiram Ulysses and Cleveland, Stephen Grover. W. H. Harrison was the oldest man elected to the Presidency, and Roosevelt the youngest. Grant being the next youngest by six months. Cleveland was the only President married in the White House, and his second daughter the only President's child born therein. Monroe's daughter (Mrs. Gouverneur) Tyler's daughter (Mrs. Waller), Grant's daughter (Mrs. Sartoris), Roosevelt's daughter (Mrs. Longworth) and Wilson's daughters, Jessie (Mrs. Sayre) and Eleanor (Mrs. McAdoo) were the only children of Presidents married therein. Wives of Tyler and Benjamin Harrison died in the White House. W. H. Harrison was father of the largest family, six sons and four daughters. Eight Presidents: Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor and Wilson were Virginians by birth. Six Presidents: Grant, Hayes, Garfield, B. Harrison, McKinley and Taft were Ohioans by birth.

PROPOSED CHANGE IN THE BEGINNING OF THE PRESIDENTIAL TERM.

On November 26, 1913, a sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate reported to the Committee the following joint resolution changing the time of the beginning of the terms of the President and Vice-President of the United States, from March 4 to the second Monday in January.

"The terms of the President and Vice-President of the United States shall commence on the second Monday in January following the election of Presidential and Vice-Presidential electors, and such electors shall assemble at the Capitols of their respective States and cast their votes for President and Vice-President on the first Monday in December following their election.

"The terms of Senators and Representatives shall commence on the first Monday in January following their election.

"There shall be held two regular sessions of each Congress, convening on the first Monday of January each year."
